Cheerful as the June Sun

So many homes lack proper heating that it is often thought houses must either be cold in winter or hot and stuffy. Yet the heating of a home can be like the natural warmth of June—the air as warm, as healthfully humid, as fresh and pure.

The Sunshine Furnace radiates the healthful heat of the sun. Pure air is sent evenly over the house, warm, fresh—and clean. The dust and fine ashes, so often seen whenever most furnaces are shaken down, never get out of the Sunshine Furnace.

Dry air not necessary

The Sunshine Furnace supplies air as balmy as summer. This comes from a large water pan so located that it can be refilled easily.

Firing up and closing the dampers of the Sunshine Furnace does not send coal gas into the house. The volume of gas freed from the new coal is drawn off up the chimney. The Sunshine not only keeps the whole house warm and cosy, but continually circulates clear, pure air.

McClary's

Sunshine Furnace

The Sunshine does not cost you more than many furnaces that are not as good. Our Heating Engineer will tell you what a thorough heating system for your home will cost. More than that, he will tell you, without charge or obligation, how to plan your heating system so as to get the most out of it with the least expenditure. If you send the coupon to-day we will send you our booklet "Sunshine." At the same time, ask for special information about heating your own house.

Kindly send me without expense on my part:—

1. Your booklet on the Sunshine Furnace.
2. Also forms for filling out, so that your heating engineers can tell me how to order and install a system that will properly heat my home.

FATE OF NEXT FORTY DAYS DECIDED BY ST. SWITHIN'S DAY

According to the Old Legend the Weather Should Be Fine For the Next Forty Days---Saturday Was Fine and Dry

Saturday was St. Swithin's Day, and according to an old legend, if it rains on St. Swithin's Day it will rain for forty days, and if it is fine it will be fine for forty days. Saturday was fine, so according to the legend, it should be fine for the next forty days.

In the year 880 there lived at Winchester a Bishop named Swithin. After his death he was canonized a Saint, and the popular superstition attached to his name is expressed in the following rhyme:

St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair
For forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

The origin of the popular belief that St. Swithin's Day—which falls on the fifteenth of July—affects the weather for forty days thereafter goes back to pagan times. St. Swithin was bishop of Winchester in the ninth century, but the superstition with which his name has since been connected was old before he was born. In England, as in other countries, the pagans believed that the weather in mid-July might be accepted as a sample of the kind that would be supplied during the remainder of the summer. Just because St. Swithin's festival happened to come at this time, the old weather lore was connected with his name, and fables were then invented to support the theory that Swithin had something to do with the rainfall. According to the old notion, if it rains to-day there will be a wet period of forty days following, while fair weather means a "dry spell" of similar duration. Meteorological records lend no support to the St. Swithin Day legend, but at that it is about as accurate as any of the weather "signs" in which our ancestors grimly believed.

LITTLE ABOUT SAINT.

Very little is known of Saint Swithin's life, for his biographers constructed their 'lives' long after his death, and there is hardly any mention of him in contemporary documents. Swithin was one of the two trusted counsellors of Egbert, King of the West Saxons, helping him in ecclesiastical matters, while Ealstan of Sherborne was his chief adviser in secular business. He probably entrusted his son Ethelwrulf and caused the saint to be elected to the Bishopric of Winchester in succession to Helmstan.

On his death-bed, Swithin begged that he should be buried outside the north wall of the Cathedral, where passersby should pass over his grave, and rain-drops from the eaves drop upon it. More than a century later (931) his body was taken, with great pomp, to a shrine within the new church erected by Bishop Ethelwulf. A number of miraculous cures took place and Swithin was canonized by popular acclamation. In 1093 his remains were again taken to the new church built by Bishop Walkelin. The shrine was destroyed and the relics scattered in 1538.

MILITARY NEWS

Rural Districts Slack.

The meeting was largely attended and the discussion was prolonged. Capt. Clarke of the 155th battalion came out flat footed in a statement charging the rural districts as being slack. He said the rural districts had not given the men they should.

Favoured Conscription.

Lt.-Col. Mulloy was in favour of conscription or national registration. Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Peterborough, claimed that registration was the only solution to the problem.

Lt.-Col. G. H. Williams, Toronto, conscription was impractible. He said ideals should be taught men and the church should work.

Ideals No Good.

Col. Bedell said that ideals were worth nothing. He said that while Canada had done nobly he favoured conscription. The voluntary system was losing its effectiveness.

Lt.-Col. C. G. Williams said that as men the meeting should back up the government and do nothing to jeopardize its democracy.

Lt.-Col. G. H. Williams, Toroonto, said there was no hope for conscription from either party.

The motion shown above was then voted on and carried and the committee selected to work it out was: Col Hemming, John Elliott, Belleville, and Capt. Manning, C.R.O., for the 3rd district.

PEOPLE STARVE IN GERMANY.

Woman's Letter, Passed by Censor, Tells of Privations Endured.

Conditions of great destitution and practical starvation in Germany are revealed by a letter received in New York a few days ago. It was written in Bad Warsburg on May 11, 1916, and bears the "Passed by Censor" slip at the end where it was opened by that official. The letter is remarkable in that it was allowed to leave Germany, carrying as it does the message of the privations being suffered by the writer, an elderly woman and the mother of the young man to whom it was written in this city.

After commenting on other matters, she writes:

"Our conditions here are beyond description. Every day the outlook is becoming more and more dreadful. We are absolutely without enough food to eat, and we are living far back in the interior, quite removed from cities of any size. It is very sad to see that those having large cellars have stored away the butchers' supplies so that we are left to starve.

"We have nothing to cook, and though we have money, meat and other supplies are refused at any price. H—— and the others are so emaciated that their bones seem to protrude through their skins."

The letter concludes with the hope that the war will soon be ended.

SAUKERKRAUT PRICES HIGHER.

Statistics Show It Costs Half as Much Again as Before War.

The increase in prices of foodstuffs and fuel in the city of Vienna since the outbreak of the war is brought out in striking manner by a list of prices issued by the director of the public markets of the Austrian capital and summarized in the London press. The figures deal with the average prices during the first five months of 1914, 1915 and 1916, and show the following increases:

Potatoes and sugar, 20 per cent.
Coal, petroleum, milk, bread, sauerkraut, 50 per cent.
Corn meal, butter, eggs, 100 per cent.
Wheat flour and onions, 200 per cent.
Bacon, lard, beans, 250 per cent.
Horseflesh and beef, 300 per cent.
Pork and margarine, 350 per cent.
Peas and rice have disappeared from the markets.

Market Situation For The Week

Number of Household Commodities Touch New High Levels—Canned Vegetables Firm

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer:

The events of the week from the trade's point of view and also that of the public, since they have to help pay, have been a series of minor advances. Salt packages are slightly higher, due partially to labour troubles, and partially to war's demand upon chemicals. Pickles are advanced this week. This refers to domestic lines. British stuff is 'way out of sight, and home-made lines are feeling the pinch of the shoe in various places; notably, the high price of glass, the scarcity of labour, and the poverty of certain crops. This last is not so influential a reason as the others. Wire clothing pins are higher. These are advanced solely because of the sky-high prices of galvanized iron. Thus the hardwareman's troubles lop over into the grocery store. In most every case of these "little things" just recited, scarcity of labour or material have been the casual factors.

The situation in beans does not improve any; in fact it gets worse instead of better. Further advances took place this week. Right through from St. John to farthest West our correspondents report at least a firmness and in mos cases actually an advance in the price of beans. Next crop will be late, it is learned, and with this crop as scarce as it is one wonders what prices will be like by about October, when the new stuff, which should be harvested, will be missing.

CHEESE DECLINED.

Cheese levels declined a couple of cents this week. Cables report Liverpool and London as decidedly easier, while domestic markets are easing off to a fairly large extent for the time of the yar. Export has not been so heavy of late. Butter levels are practically unchanged. Eggs, while not appreciably lower, are on the easier side. Western eggs are being shipped to Eastern markets in quantities, and this, coupled with the fact that demand for storage has let up largely is working towards lower levels. Hot weather has doubtless had something to do with it. Again and again hot weather has slackened demand from consumer, which, by the by, has been unusually large this year.

Canned vegetables still hold very firm, and every week brings us nearer to higher levels for peas and tomatoes, the latter notably. Tomato crop areas show the same thing everywhere, namely, that our early rains did incalculable damage, damage which, unlike that in some other lines, cannot be repaired at once. Then the higher and ever higher price of cans and tins, the labour scarcity, and the export demand have all been added factors of importance. So that, by every sign and token, we shall see high prices for tomatoes in cans this year. Corn and peas will also be higher than usual, with more or less the same contributory reasons.

For damp places round a sink, or similar place, paint over with tar. Give two coats, letting the first dry thoroughly before applying the second. Then paint with a distemper. Strip off the paper from the damp places, take a sheet of brown paper, blackhead it on one side and place that side against the wall. Then cover with the wallpaper. The damp will not strike through.

SIR SAM HUGHES TELLS WHY LINDSAY SECURED THE PLUM

Peterborough and Lindsay Were the Only Two Places Taken Into Consideration By the Minister of Militia---Corner Stone of New Arsenal Was Laid on Saturday

LINDSAY, July 16.— However he may be regarded elsewhere, General Sir Sam Hughes is at present the "white-haired-boy" in Lindsay. Manifestation of this was conspicuous on Saturday when the Minister of Militia came to his home town and riding to lay the corner stone of the new Dominion arsenal. Sir Sam maintained that Lindsay was chosen for the location on its merits, and disclaimed that he was bringing a new industry into the constituency because he was the representative at Ottawa. All the same, the people were saying on the streets of Lindsay that the arsenal was going to be a help to the town and to Sir Sam belonged all the credit for bringing it there.

A Few Words For Lindsay.

The Minister of Militia in the course of his address, declared; "Let me assure you that, much as I am prepared to do for the town of Lindsay, highly as I esteem it as a centre of intelligence, skill and industry, I would not, as Minister of Militia, have been a party to putting this magnificent institution in this town if Lindsay had not been properly situated in every regard, in population, distance from the coast, isolation, and freedom from any likelihood of invasion. In every sense it is admirably situated from a physical and natural viewpoint." Sir Sam alluded to the necessity of having an arsenal in addition to the one at Quebec. In these days of submarines, enemy craft of this type might come near the coast, followed by gunboats, and reduce the city bordering on the seaboard. In case of invasion from the United States it might be an easy matter to cut off Quebec.

Quebec Criticized.

"And with due regard to the Province of Quebec in this great war, it has not done its duty. It has not done its duty as it should have done if the young men of that Province had been taken in hand by the proper people. Therefore, I make no excuse here or elsewhere for saying that the great Province of Ontario should have a Dominion arsenal for the manufacture of munitions of war, so that in case trouble ever arose we would not be dependent on the city on the seaboard for our supply. Sir Sam said there were two places, and only two places that appealed, Peterborough and Lindsay. The former had the advantage of population, but in other respects Lindsay had the claim.

Canadian Record.

The Minister of Militia enlarged on what Canada had done in the way of raising men for the war, "nearly 400,000 from a country where when we first proclaimed 20,000 we were called insane by some of the very journals represented at this table to-day." Proceeding, Sir Sam said: "It was my privilege—it was my right—I make no apology, on the contrary, I enjoy criticism and the more I am condemned by my opponents the better I am pleased—but it was my right to give a farewell address to the boys when they sailed away. I told them what the people of Canada expected of them, and they have done more than I claimed they would do. I had faith in the boys and since then they have done more than anything predicted of them. I purpose, shortly, returning to the old land, and I purpose also seeing your boys and my boys at the front, because I call them all my boys.

Faith in the "Boys."

"I feel that, in a sense, about the only thing I can claim credit for personally in this war is the fact that I have endeavoured from the outset to show the people of this Empire that I had faith in the Canadians and what they could do. They have never once failed me. They have lived up to the fighting reputation I gave to them. In every sense they have lived up to what was expected, and in the whole Dominion of Canada there has not been one hundred cases of insubordination worthy of note since the war began." The speaker parised the counties of Haliburton and Victoria for the number of men recruited, and he said he did not believe any part of Canada, except possibly Winnipeg, Victoria, or Vancouver, could compare with the counties mentioned. He did not think Toronto's record was as good. Since the war began the two counties had contributed 4,800 men, and in the course of a few days it was hoped to announce the formation of another regiment in the county of Peterborough and another for Victoria and Haliburton, and to take the places of those who had gone to the front.

Sir Sam Takes Credit.

The Minister of Militia took credit for having steps taken to have shells made in Canada, and declared that $400,000,000 munition material had been contracted for and was being made in this country, owing to the fact that "we established a shell committee to manufacture shells, through commercial enterprises in this country." He understood Lindsay was manufacturing shells, but the people he thought, had been slow to appreciate the owrth of making shells in a town like that, or they would have a dozen factories going instead of two.

Glowing Words.

Sir Sam, in alluding to the address which had been presented to him on behalf of the citizens and committee, humorously remarked, and his unusual modesty tickled the crowd, "I did not recognize myself, the way I was described. To read, or have this read, and then hear something of what my reporter friends tell of me in the papers, would almost make a man wonder whether he was not a Jekyll and a Hyde. The speaker then told the old story about Barnum advertising to condemn his own shof, and the benefits he got thereform compared with the ten times greater amount he spent so positively advertising his show. Everybody saw the condemnation, nobody believed it, and the advertisement was all the same. "I would rather be condemned by my opponents any day than praised. I want my friend of The Toronto Telegram to write that down in capital letters."

Receives Address.

The address to Sir Sam, which was read by Mr. Henry Black, Lindsay, recognised that to the Minister's personal influence was due the establishment of the arsenal. Sir Sam was described as a "strong bulwark" of the Government.

Dr. Robert Johnston, Montreal, paid a glowing tribute to the Minister of Militia, saying the name of Sir Sam Hughes would stand out in the ages to come in the story of Canadian history as the man who did the work when the country needed him. Dr. Johnston called for three cheers for Lady Hughes, who was present and these were heartily given.

Mr. Daniel Cinnamon presided, and among those present in addition to the names already mentioned were: Col. Robert Lowe and party, Camp Borden; Col. Weatherbee, Dominion Arsenal, Quebec; Col. Gillespie, Kingston; Lieut.-Col. C. G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion; Mr. J. D. Flavelle, Chairman of Ontario License Board; Mr. William Flavelle, Dr. J. L. Hughes, J. W. Carew, M.P.P. and others.

Artistic Displays.

The patriotic emblems displayed in Lindsay were a credit to the people. It was, indeed, a lavish and artistic decoration scheme, which struck the eye everywhere. Every body seemed to do his share, and the red, white and blue was suspended galore from house and store windows and across the principal streets. There was a large auto procession to the scene of the ceremony, the band of the 109th Battalion leading the way. It was a glorious gala day in the annals of Lindsay.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

PATRIOTIC SERMON BY THE REV. DR. LANGFELDT

Former Peterborough Rector Delivers an Interesting Discourse in Commemoration of Dominion Day---Three Themes, Canadianism, Imperialism and Patriotism

The appended sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Langfeldt in commemoration of Dominion Day. Dr. Langfeldt, who is now stationed at North Battleford, Sask., was formerly rector of St. Luke's Church of this city. His remarks concerning this auspicious event will have considerable local interest. Dr. Langfeldt's remarks are referred to in the North Battleford 'News' in the following terms:

"In commemoration of the forty-ninth anniversary of the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, rector of St. Paul's church, preached an eloquent and instructive sermon, dealing with the three themes, Canadianism, Imperialism and Patriotism, and their mutual relationship.

The subject throughout was logically thought out and clearly presented, and ranks as one of the most thoughtful discourses on imperial relations yet submitted to the Canadian public. Of necessity, in viewing the relations at present existing between the mother country and the colonies and forecasting the desirable changes to be made in those relations after peace returns, the rector stated that the war must play an important part. "When I think of the horrors and desolation which have come upon this world, when I think of those responsible for this condition of things, I think of this passage in scripture, uttered by our blessed Lord himself: 'It must needs be that offences come, but woe unto that man by whom the offence cometh,'" he declared.

Forty-nine years ago the British government put its seal on the labours of the Fathers of Confederation and the Dominion of Canada came into existence by royal proclamation on July 1, 1867.

But Canada and the British Empire never can be again what it was before the war, and we must solve this problem as best we may that the British empire may be an organized empire, organized for trade, for economic efficiency, for imperial defence, for the preservation of the world's peace.

FREE CITIZENSHIP.

That concerns us as Canadians. We should no longer be content with the colonial relations. "I want," said the rector, "a full and free citizenship in the empire." This can be attained only by setting up imperial machinery—an imperial parliament, and an imperial government, composed of elective representatives from the colonies and the mother land, each having a voice in the making of laws for the burden of responsibility in the diplomacy, treaty-making and foreign policies of the empire as a whole.

"Can we be out of the war and in the empire?" asked the rector. "Who would suggest that in time of peace we can sing God Save the King, boast of our British citizenship and send our trade across the seas under the protection of the British navy, and do nothing in time of war?"

But it has been demonstrated that the people of Canada will bear a full share of the imperial burden and in accepting the burden of the war we should have a fair share of its responsibility. For defence and self-protection we are an empire, but we should be an empire in fact, a federal union of the motherland and the self-governing colonies.

But it may be urged that it is disloyal to the motherland to demand a share in the government of the empire. The same might be said of the separate colonies now composing Canada, Australia and South Africa. These petitioned the home government for consolidation as federal self-governing colonies with largely increased powers, and the mother country, far from viewing the petitions as disloyal was pleased to grant their requests. And what greater proof of the wisdom of this attitude of the motherland could we have than the magnificent spectacle of the self-governing colonies rallying to the assistance of the motherland and the empire. And of South Africa just a few years ago at war with Britain, now under the leadership of a former enemy, standing firmly by the empire which trusted her and gave her self-government?

THE TOOTH OF TIME.

Nothing would so contribute to world-peace as an organization of the empire for defence and offence.

But it might be objected that under a federal system of imperial government the authority of Downing street would be restored in Canada, that a feeble representation in any imperial parliament would be out-voted by the mother country, that we would be subjected to an unequal and inordinate taxation for imperial objects and projects, and that we would sacrifice the fact of self-government for the shadow of authority. We are all familiar with these arguments for every argument advanced against the union of the Canadian provinces before Confederation. It was then said that the smaller provinces would lose their independence and individuality, that they would be submerged in a federal parliament and that local institutions would be destroyed and local government rendered impossible. What is the result? This confederation is nearly 50 years old. During that period we have had eight prime ministers—three from Ontario, two from Quebec and three from the Maritime provinces. Time has proved that the federal system has not interfered with the rights and institutions of minorities and that injustice has not been meted out to any component part of the federal union. The supreme object of any federal system is to unite and preserve—not to divide and destroy.

IN PEACE OR WAR.

In peace or war we are of the empire and for the empire and all considerations of autonomy and self-government are secondary to the security and permanence of the imperial structure. But the truth is under the existing organization of the empire we have an inferior citizenship. It is essential therefore if the empire is to continue that some central parliament and government shall be established, representing alike the colonies and the mother country which shall deal with all questions of peace or war affecting the empire. There can be no greater treason to ourselves and to our descendants than to throw away this prospect and to count little a citizenship more influential than any other, ancient or modern.

When peace comes we will have a mighty reinforcement of imperialism in Canada. That for which a man offers his life he will not forsake or betray. Those who return from the old-world battlefields will be forever the support of the empire. Can we imagine these heroes being satisfied with the pre-war colonial conditions, when such a prospect presents itself to the citizens of Canada as imperial federation, in which Canada would elect representatives to an imperial parliament and have an equal voice in the imperial government in the commercial and diplomatic affairs of the empire?

We are proud of Canada's part in the war. In this crusade she has commanded the respect of the world. To-day it is no small honour to be a citizen of Canada. But the task remains to us as Canadians and to all the self-governing colonies to assist in solving the problem of the future relations within the empire, that free expansion may be given and equal responsibility accepted by the various members of the empire, each united to all, for mutual benefit, and for a guarantee to the world and humanity of justice, equality and liberty.

Two More Trips To-day

The steamers Stoney Lake and Geneva left the George Street Wharf this morning with two large excursions. The Stoney Lake was bound down stream, along the Otonabee, Rice Lake and winding Trent, to Healy Falls. The Geneva carried a large excursion crowd up to Lindsay, along the Kawartha Lake water route. The delightful weather caused a large crowd to take in the outings.

LATE REV. CAMPBELL WAS KNOWN HERE

Deceased Missionary Conducted a Missionary Campaign in Lakefield During Year 1913

Rev. F. E. Annis, who is in the city to-day, was well acquainted with the Rev. W. A. F. Campbell and wife, the two Canadian Methodist missionaries, who were stabbed to death by a burglar in Japan. The Rev. Mr. Campbell, together with Mr. Annis, conducted a missionary campaign in Lakefield, in 1913. At that time Mr. Campbell preached in both Mark tsreet and St. James Methodist churches of this city. Rev. F. E. Annis leaves for China next year.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me space in your paper, of which I am a constant reader. I would like to say that my husband enlisted here in Peterborough on the 7th of June, last month, with the 93rd battalion. I went to see Mr. Dobbin about my patriotic money as I had been instructed to do, and Mr. Dobbin told me I was not entitled to any of the funds. I was young and able to work, but finally he gave me the sum of $5.00. I went up this month to get my patriotic cheque and Mr. Dobbin told me I was not entitled to any at all. I was receiving $40 a month from the government and my husand's allowance and that I am not to receive any patriotic money. My husband has gone overseas and I have not received anything at all from Ottawa; only the $5.00 Mr. Dobbin gave me last month. To those interested from—

SUCCESS OF PUPILS OF MR. J. H. RENWICK

Three Finalists Made Fine Showing After Entire Local Study

That students of music in this city have all the advantages necessary for the obtaining of associateships with the Toronto Conservatory and final year with the Toronto College of Music is revealed by some of the results of the recent examinations. Three of Mr. J. H. Renwick's pupils have passed their final years, after having pursued their entire studies in this city.

In the Toronto Conservatory examinations, Mr. Asa Huycke, who has studied vocal music with Mr. Renwick for the past two years has been successful in passing the very exacting final examination, winning his A.T.C.M. Mr. Huycke is well-known locally as a very pleasing baritone and his many friends will unite in congratulating him upon his fine success. He is now qualified as a vocal teacher. Other pupils of Mr. Renwick who tried the Toronto Conservatory examinations, were as follows:

Intermediate Vocal.—Miss Evelyn Bentley, daughter of Mr. John Bentley, 383 Park Street; passed this grade with honours.

Junior Vocal.—Miss Kathleen Fanning, daughter of Mr. J. M. Fanning of Dublin Street, successfully passed in this grade.

TORONTO COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

Mr. Renwick had two finalists in the Toronto College of Music examinations who received their final year as follows:

Final Year Organ.—Miss Bessie Elcome, a teacher at the local Conservatory of Music, passed the exams. in this grade with honours; also the first year piano harmony, with first-class honours. Miss Elcome will be deputy organist in St. Andrew's Church and George Street Methodist church during the summer.

Final Year Vocal—Mr. Harry Hill passed this grade with honours, and is to be congratulated on his fine showing. Mr. Hill is a vocal and organ pupil of Mr. Renwick, and will take Mr. Crane's organ during the summer months, at Trinity Church.

The Pupils Of Miss B. Elcome

In the recent examinations, the pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome of the Conservatory of Music staff, were very successful. Both teaher and pupils are to be congratulated upon the excellent standing here shown:

Third Piano—First-class Honours—Elizabeth Webber. Honours, Grace Read.

Senior First Piano—First-class Honours—Jean Kidd, Robert Breckenridge Pass—Frances Huston.

BRITISH HOLD ALL

FEW GERMAN AIRCRAFT.

Everyone coming from the front remarks upon the paucity of German aeroplanes and anti-aircraft guns, despite their reinforcements in other arms. British airmen, in many instances, have descended as low as 300 or 500 feet, firing upon German infantry with their machine guns and receiving the cheers of British infantry. Such low flights have resulted in remarkably intimate scouting.

The scene of action has been carried for the first time beyond the second main line of German defences since stationary warfare began on the western front. Officers returning from the front line speak of seeing abandoned German guns, but say they are too busy fighting to bother to bring them in.

The most dramatic situation in the battle comes when German gunners strive to draw off their guns with British infantry within rifle range. In the grinding conflict which is courageously forced to close quarters neither the ground taken nor the number of prisoners is expressive of the results or the stake for which both sides are fighting.

British commanders merely say that they have advanced farther than they expected and repeat the proceeding through various stages in the long, immense undertaking.

Many Railway Men With Colours

Of the 20 clerks in the C. P. R. offices at Calgary, 16 enlisted when the war broke out. Some of them have got promotion; some have been wounded; but the spirit they displayed has been noticed in the western press. Indeed the railway men of the country have done nobly in responding to the call. In England over 200,000 railway men are at the front; in Canada, possibly 6,000 in all have gone forward—a splendid record considering our railways and general population. The result of such depletion is found in the greater number of female clerks employed in the Dominion. We do not see, as they see without surprise in the Mother Land, thousands of women doing the outside work on the railways—dressed in overalls, many of them, cleaning engines, cleaning stations, acting as porters and wheeling barrows, acting as ticket agents and telegraph operators. We will hardly come to that, but the value of women in the clerical domain has gone up very appreciably indeed. It is urged in England that the women wear mens' attire for greater convenience in many of the avocations they pursue. Many have not waited for the discussion in the press anent the matter, but have voluntarily parted with excellent feminity. The situation is not so acute with us, but the call, in all clerical departments is for female clerks.

Honours For Pupils of Miss Ida Sanderson

The following pupils of Miss Ida Sanderson were successful in the Toronto College of Music examinations: Miss Mary Graham, passed with first-class honours the junior second; Miss Ruby Archer, honours in primary piano.

ANNUAL SUNDAY SCHOOL EXCURSION ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

Large Crowd Participated—Weather Was Favourable—Big List of Sporting Events

THE PRIZE WINNERS

St. Luke's annual Sunday school excursion to Jubilee Point took place on Friday last. Favoured with a bright warm day, which was taken advantage of by a large crowd of children and their parents, the picnic was an unqualified success in every respect.

The sports, which were many and varied, were keenly contested and greatly enjoyed. The Doughnuts and the Dreadnoughts, captained respectively by Earl and Gordon Maniece in a seven innings' game of sparkling play and dash, played to a tie, 12 all. In the tug-of-war, grandmothers vs. spinsters, the latter, with the aid of two effeminate youths, pulled themselves to victory. In the baseball game young ladies vs. married men, the antics and crude efforts of the players were provocative of much mirth.

The Prize Winners.

COOP & LENT CIRCUS THURSDAY, JULY 20

While a citizen stood absorbedly studying a poster describing some of the wonders of the Coop and Lent Circus announced to appear in Peterborough on Thuraday, July 20, he was accosted by a friend who inquired: "Ain't you got over the Circus fever yet?". "O, yes, long ago!" laughed the other, "but these here pictures is mighty attractive, an' I was ruminating on taking the grandchildren?"

It is the old story! The errepressible wish to see the Circus is father to the thought of taking the young ones. On many occasions one little one is found sufficient excuse for all the adults in the family taking in the Show, particularly when advance reports are enthusiastic about the excellence of the exhibition. The numerous interesting oddities in the Museum and the large collection of animals in the Menagerie.

The Coop and Lent United Shows are among the most important on the road. The performances in the three rings and the entire equipment is reputed to be the best, by the best that money can secure.

The usual two performances will be given and the big street parade will leave the ground around 10:00 a.m.

SOLDIERS' WIVES AND MOTHERS CLUB DOING GREAT WORK

Organization Holds Annual Meeting and Elects Officers for the Ensuing Year--Appreciative Letters Received by the Club

OBJECJS OF THE CLUB

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club, the annual election of officers took place as follows: Hon. Pres., Adjutant McElhiney; Pres., Mrs. Downie, 158 Edinburgh St.; Secy., Mrs. Lloyd, 868 George St.; Assit. Secy., Mrs. Mason, 148 Park St.; Treas., Mrs. Breadman, 411 London St.; Sick Visitors: Mrs. Bugg, 249 Aylmer St., and Mrs. D. Evans; Roll Call Recorder, Mrs. A. Stanley, 455 Stewart St.; Convenor of Work, Mrs. W. Stanley.

The society has 70 members on the books, and is doing a vast amount of work in its different branches. Its object is to keep in touch with all the Peterborough boys who have gone overseas, by helping them materially. Bales of socks, etc., are constantly being shipped to the front. Letters sympathising with the mothers and wives of those who have been bereaved, or in any way have felt the blow of this cruel war, are weekly sent by the secretary, and the club is indeed in receipt of many kind answers of which it would like you to read. The sick visitors have a busy time, but it's a joy to the club to know and feel that a word of cheer, a few flowers, or fruit, carry the message of love to those suffering ones. A word here to the faithfulness of the club's visitor, Mrs. Bugg, who so nobly fills this place always with a happy, smiling face. Her cheer always brightens those poor suffering ones. A number of soldiers in the hospital here can testify to her qualities. The club's meetings are held every Friday afternoon in the Salvation Army Rooms, Simcoe Street. A cordial invitation to all mothers and wives of our soldier boys, whether they be members or not, is given. Come and see for yourselves.

Will those having money owing for articles at sale of work kindly bring it to the Salvation Army Rooms not later than July 28th.

A. E. Lloyd, Secy.

MRS. WM. STANLEY

Who is work convenor of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club. Mrs. Stanley has her husband and three sons in khaki.

Following are some of the letters recently received by the club:

634 Union St., City.

Dear Friend,—Just a line in answer to your kind letter. I was very pleased with it ,and I thank the Wives and Mothers' Club for their kindness to me and my children. I have just sent you a line to let you all know that my husband is a prisoner of war in Germany, but I will be glad to hear when this war will be over for one and all of us. I remain, your friend,

Mary Oxford.

P.S.—With many thanks to you all, and may God bless you all.

Wives' and Mothers' Club.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to thank you for your words of sympathy in my anxiety for the welfare of my son. It was indeed kind of you to think of me, and I appreciate it, and thank you very much, but since receiving it, I have heard that he is alive, although a prisoner. It gives us hope that he will come out alright, and be restored to us again.

Again thanking you for your kind words of sympathy. I remain, yours,

Mrs. Godfrey.

Peterborough, Ont., July 4, 1916.

Mrs. S. L. Thomas,
515 Chamberlain St., City.

Dear Lady,—Kindly convey to the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club my appreciation of their words of sympathy, through you, as a result of the bereavement I have been called upon to bear.

Every sacrifice adds one more hero to the list in the accomplishment of national liberty. Words fail me to say more, only that your optimistic faith in the unseen Hand is also comforting to me. Believe me, yours respectfully,

E. Lawrence.

Peterborough, July 5, 1916.

To the Soldiers' Wives and Mother's Club.

I am deeply grateful for the note of kind sympathy which we have received. We are hoping against hope that our dear son may be still alive. We can only hope and pray for the best. Yours thankfully,

Margaret Butcher.

A CAMP AT SEAFORD

There is a little town on the Sussex Downs, between the high cliffs on the English Channel coast. Its history is closely linked with that of the pirates who made it their headquarters in the early days. However, it is not for this that the town feels justified for its existence, but for the part it is taking in the great world struggle.

As I walked along the narrow streets, winding up hill and down, past old houses with cellars once used for concealing smuggled goods, I expected to meet a brigand in his picturesque attire or see the graceful flowing robes of a cavalier.

Suddenly I heard a band. Then I saw a khaki line marching through the winding streets down in the valley. At first it was merely something moving that caught my eye, so completely did this colour blend with its surroundings. I watched them march along, now and then catching a strain of the song as the breeze wafted it towards me.

These men seemed to disappear on the Downs and pass like magic. I continued in the direction they had gone and found their camp—a collection of tin huts spread over the Downs, like a huge bed of mushrooms. I went into the camp to get a glimpse of the every-day life of the men. I found them seemingly a happy care-free band of people, always ready to march behind their band and sing lustily. I found them busy at various occupations; some were making gardens between the huts; some were cleaning the grounds. Others cleaning the huts, and still others preparing the food; all singing, laughing or joking.

They liked answering my questions and giving me bits of gossip. To some I spoke of the war; immediately their attitude changed; they were no longer the jocular, irresponsible men—all that was a mask hiding stern realities. Their real business was to fight and die for their country, if necessary, but for the present they must be merry.

I passed along to a hut with clean white curtains on the windows, the only curtains in the camp. This was the massage hut. To this hut all day long, men came in turn for their treatment. The interior was one large room, with a row of beds down each side and a row of tables and chairs down the centre. Here I found sterner things, but the spirit was bright and hopeful. I saw partially naked men with ugly, red, purplish wounds exposed. Some of the wounds were very ugly. The masseurs, spotlessly clean, bright and cheerful, worked with a purpose, massaging each man in turn, cheering them and telling them interesting bits of news.

The men were toppers, never grumbled nor gave trouble. Once I heard one say: "It won't be much fun to be crippled like this after it is all over." He had lost a leg, poor fellow! But even then he wasn't grumbling, and regretted that he would not be able to do more.

It is very painful having the wounds massaged, and in some cases the pain was almost past endurance, but they never mentioned it. They knew the massage sisters were doing all that could be done, so they tried to make their task easy.

I left this hut and passed by several others on my way back to the Downs. Once again I looked down at the camp and wondered how those men could be so cheerful. As I walked on over the Downs snatches of their songs and their laughter reached me.

CAMERON AND BALSAM LAKES RE-STOCKED

FENELON FALLS, July 17.—Mr. J. Edwards, superintendent of the Brantford Fish Hatchery brought here 200,000 bass fingerlings and deposited them in Cameron and Balsam Lakes. The car arrived here at 11.50 a.m., and the government boat Naiad, which was anchored at the dock, and took them up the waters immediately. The restocking was done on the request of the Board of Trade of the village and the officials of the Canadian Northern Railway through the member for North Victoria.

Officer's Story of Battle at Hooge

Saw His Duty and Went Without Being Fetched

NEW YORK, July 15.—An uncensored letter from a Canadian officer wounded in the great German offensive south-east of Ypres of June 2 was received in New York. It gives a striking description of what the Canadians suffered in that battle. This is the letter:

—— Hospital,
London, W., 17, 6, '16.

My Dear ——. You will be sorry to hear that my military ambitions have been knocked in the head. Much as I regret it, I thank God I saw my duty and went without being fetched, like so many Englishmen have done in England.

I am all in now. When the Germans made their attack on the salient on June 2 (Ypres) I was in command of C Company, and had to garrison four strong posts, with instructions to hold them at all costs. I was in my element. We were bombarded with everything they had from 10.30 a.m. to the next morning. At times it slacked up, but at others it was very intense. By the afternoon the Boches had taken the front line and supports of Sanctuary Wood and part of Maple Copse. That cut me off, and they were on my right flank and rear.

I escaped till about 8.30 p.m., when I was arranging about reserve ammunition for the machine gun. I was just leaving the dugout, in fact, was half out, when a big shell dropped into the dugout, killing six men and burying me up to the waist. My steel hat was blown off, but my head was not hurt.

I called to my platoon Sergeant, who was close to me and unhurt, and asked him to try and free me, as I could not move. He got another man, and between them they dug me out. All the time a perfect hail of shells was dropping on us. I found that I could not stand. My left leg had a compound fracture of both bones, and the lower part was fearfully crushed. I lay down at the bottom of the trench. I would not let them try to bandage me, because I did not want them to get into a bunch, as the shells were coming too fast. I lay there till 2.30 the following morning, taking morphine.

Around 12 o'clock they started a heavy bombardment again, and another big shell fell right next to me, blowing a big hole in the parapets and partially burying me again. I also got a piece of the shell in my right thigh, which penetrated about five inches and took a piece of raincoat and breeches into the hole with it. My face and hands were black with the exploding charge. I took more morphine and waited.

Around 2.30 a.m. it was just getting light. Two of my boys carried me out and borrowed a stretcher from some troops coming to reinforce us and got me to a dressing station. I was absolutely all in when I eventually got to a field hospital. The priest gave me the last rites of the Church, and the doctor decided that to save my life he must amputate my leg, which he did just above the knee.

I am getting a little stronger.

It is a great comfort to me that I was wounded in a big fight and that the company under my command successfully held this strong post. We bagged a lot of Germans who tried attacks. In at least two of these charges our machine guns did great work. I expect to be in the hospital here for several months, and will then, in all probability, be invalided back to Canada.

My battalion was nearly wiped out. Only one officer escaped unwounded, but none was made prisoner. We checked the Boches and drove them back, so we don't regret what we got. We made a glorious name, and have left something for reinforcements to live up to. Your field glasses and everything I had were blown off me. My raincoat and uniform were full of holes and powder burned.

Appeal For Magazines For Our Soldiers

An appeal has been received by local patriotic workers for magazines and reading matter for our soldiers at the front and for those in training. All those who can aid this purpose and can contribute the required reading matter will kindly leave the same at Mr. Barrie's store. They will be forwarded to the soldiers by the Peterborough Progressive Club.

Three Horses Killed Yesterday Near Chemong

Lightning First Struck a Fence Post and Basswood Tree, Then Tore Into a Herd of Horses, Killing Three

The storm which swept over the city about four o'clock yesterday afternoon was particularly severe in the northern part of the county. The severe lightning was accompanied by a high wind and a deluge of rain. At the Chemong Indian Village, three valuable colts belonging to Messrs. Comego, Jacobs, and Quinguish, were struck by lightning and killed instantly. This occurred shortly after three o'clock. The animals were standing near a fence in company with about fifteen head of horses. The bolt of lightning that killed the three colts first struck a fence post some fifteen yards away. It passed underground to a basswood tree which was slightly damaged, and continuing its course, tore into the herd of horses that was standing a short distance away. Two of the horses that were killed did not show a mark, while the third bore outward evidences of the shock.

Quiet Session At Police Court

Mr. Harry Rush occupied the Magisterial bench this morning, in the absence of Magistrate Dumble, and dispensed justices to two local transgressors.

One lad was charged with being a deserter from His Majesty's service, and was remanded for one week. The lad admits being sworn in, but claimed he had not put on his uniform. An old offender appeared on a charge of unlawfully beating his wife, and was remanded till to-morrow, to give his wife a chance to testify against him.

Annual Inspection of Peterborough's Fleet

Mr. Peter Thompson of Kingston, Government Inspector of Steamboats, is in the city to-day on his annual round of inspection and will be kept busy for the next couple of days examining the machinery and equipment of the various local craft.

The tug "J. B. McColl," under Capt. C. W. Calcutt, tied up at the George street wharf this morning and underwent her annual scrutiny. The rest of Peterborough's naval fleet will be examined during the week.

Annual Retreat Of Diocesan Clergy

The annual retreat for the priests of the Peterborough diocese takes place this week at St. Augustine's seminary, Toronto. The retreat consists of one week sepnt in meditation, prayer and spiritual exercises. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien and priests from the city and all parts of the diocese left for Toronto to-day to attend. Very Rev. Dean McColl will remain in the city to look after the parishes and will be stationed at the Cathedral for the week.

Station Leased For $1 A Year

The old C.P.R. station in Toronto has been leased to the city for the nominal rate of $1 per annum. The new north-end station is now in full operation and, with its modern facilities and accessories, is giving great satisfaction to the public. The district in which it is situated has grown enormously during the past few years. The C.P.R. believes, not only in accommodating present needs, but in anticipating those of the future. That is why it builds largely and substantially in all large centres of population, where there is promise of growth and development. What with the north-end station in Toronto and the new station and terminal on Front street, which will be finished next year, Toronto is being rewarded at last with that attention which seems to have been denied the Queen City for many years

Otonabee Well Crowded Yesterday

Yesterday was a gala one along the Otonabee and the cool bosom of the river was fairly dotted by crafts of various kinds, all the way from the Locks to Hales' Bridge. It was practically the only way of dodging the merciless weather man and while the mercury ran up sky-high in town and made the local citizen gasp for breath and wonder if "enough wasn't enough" even of war weather, many of the wiser ones spent the day enjoying the refreshing breezes that rolled up from Rice Lake.

Quite a number spent the day at T.A.S. park, while others went farther on to Hales' and Campbellton. A number of gasoline craft made the trip to the mouth of the river and crossed the lake to Harwood and the Laking. It is remarkable how atmospheric conditions change over a small area. Those who spent yesterday on the lake and even some upon the river, say that practically no rain fell in that district, which fact will no doubt seem strange to any local burgher who ventured to remain upon his verandah and watch the torrents which fell here during part of the afternoon.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, July 17. — Prices showed quite an improvemnt at the opening of the Stock Exchange, today. Cuba cane sugar was the leader in strength, advancing 1 1-2 to 69 3-8. Railroads were irregular, while munition and copper shares made fractional gains.

Motor stocks sold downward during the morning. Willis' Overland selling off 3 points and Maxwell and Studebaker suffering losses almost as great. Munition shares were attacked in the late forenoon. Industrial Alcohol sold down 5 to 99 1-2, but later recovered to 101 3-4. Sales were light.

"THAT IS GREAT."

A Greenock soldier serving in Flanders, writing to his father, tells of a remarkable meeting there with a relative he had not seen before. On a march through the country his company was halted close to a regiment that had come out from the Curragh. He crossed over to search for the unknown cousin, and fell in with a non-com. on the fringe of the camp. "Is the —th Battery with you?" he asked. "It is, my boy." "Do you know Jack Whitelaw?" "Bedad, that's great. Do I know myself!"

THE DEUTCHLAND CREW ARE AFRAID OF SPIES

BALTIMORE, Md., July 17.—Fear of spies and bombs seemed to be strongly upon the crew and managers of the German submarine Deutschland, which is still here to-day. The vigilance of the past week had increased. Even police officials who had been permitted free entrance to her pier were barred.

KAISER INSPECTS THE FIGHTING IN THE WEST

LONDON, July 17.—Kaiser Wilhelm was at the Somme front when his army retreated under battering British blows in Saturday's fighting, it become known to-day. An official statement issued at Berlin confirmed previous reports of the Kaiser's presence on the front of the great Anglo-French offensive where he has been visiting his troops and inspiring them to a more stubborn defense. The Kaiser conferred with his chief of staff, and commanding generals, visited hospitals and conferred several iron crosses.

The German War Office admitted this afternoon that the British have made further progress toward the important town of Posieres, penetrating Ovilliers Woods southwest of Pozieres where heavy fighting continues. The Berlin official statement reported lively fighting west of Peronne, the objective of the French armies, though the French Office was silent on the French operations, south of the Somme.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT'S APPEAL IS BEING HEARD

LONDON, July 17.—Sir Roger Casement's appeal on his conviction of the charge of treason, carrying with it the death sentence, was argued before Justice Darling and four associate justices of the Court of Criminal appeals to-day. Casement's counsel argued that the action described in the indictment did not constitute a statutory offense. He argued further that the definition of treason given to the jury by Lord Chief Justice Reading was inaccurate.

Portugal May Assist The British Drive

PARIS, July 17.—Several French newspapers to-day carry the story that Portugal has a well equipped army of two hundred thousand men now ready to pour into French to assist her ally, Great Britain in the present grand drive towards German territory. It is stated that treaties have now been made between Portugal, Spain and Britain, whereby Spain will not attempt to force Portugal to war while her troops are in France.

GERMAN BUTCHER SHOPS CLOSE 9 A.M. MEAT SO SCARCE

NEW YORK, July 15.—In the following letter, dated May 28 at Scheveninger, the seaport of The Hague, the writer, a lady residing in Germany, describes for the benefit of her relatives in this country the food shortage in Germany, which appears to be very real. Extracts from the letter follow:

"Notwithstanding all our planning concerning a three or four weeks' stay in Switzerland, we find ourselves landed in Holland at this beautiful seashore town. It is too bad we cannot stay here longer.

"It is some days since we left Germany. I would be satisfied if we could stay in The Hague all Summer and until the war is over. I am sick of the kind of life you have to live nowadays in all the warring countries. There are only two topics that completely occupy our minds—the bloodshed and the food supply—and, although it seems almost terrible to say it, the former has been entirely eclipsed by the anxiety concerning the food supply during the last few months. We talk and think and plan food all day long—do everything, in fact, except eat it. We do eat, of course, but the real food is usurped by the limitations and substitute foods to such extent that we have almost forgotten the taste of the real thing. I almost wept for joy over the first cup of coffee with real cream that was served to us here. The sight of the butter heaped on the plates was so strange that it seemed almost sacriligious to make use of it.

"Meat is so scarce in our home town that almost every good butcher closes his shop at 9 in the morning, and the sign 'Closed Because of Scarcity of Meat Supply' is ever so much more common than the sight of meat itself. Many shops have closed altogether. Now it seems that a new organization is to be formed in Germany for the better distribution of all food products. Whether it will have the desired effect remains to be seen, I have a good supply of American canned goods on hand, which enables us to live in luxury. How they ever reached us I do not know, and I was so glad to be able to buy them that I asked no questions. We eat very little meat, but manage to get along without it quite well. I am eating enough here in Holland to last during the coming Summer, and hope to be able to come back here when my supply is exhausted.

"It is so good to see people without the worried look that every one has at home, and I feel almost like a countryman on her first visit to the city when I hear the noise of the streets and see the automobiles and carriages with gaily dressed people go by. There are absolutely no private automobiles running in Germany, and black is the colour that predominates. you in over two months. I hope that you in over two months. I hope that everybody is well, and that you have been getting our letters more regularly. It's awful to write each week and never have a single letter to answer.

"What is the matter with Wilson? Why doesn't he step in and talk about peace? It would be a beginning, even if it would not lead to immediate results."

ACADIAN FRENCH QUICK TO JOIN - FOR THE FIGHT

Major Bissonnette Raised 850 Recruits in Short Time Among Acadians

The war has brought to the ranks of the British Empire some strange and almost forgotten sons. In battalions which have gone forward or are being formed are descendants of people whose very existence conveys but a vague idea of an historic past; whose numbers were little known.

"I knew French-Canadians," said Major Bisonnette, now at the Ritz-Carlton, Montreal, on a business visit from Valcartier Camp. "I had no idea, however, of the large number of another French people in Canada. My visit to the Maritime Provinces to recruit a French Acadian battalion was a revelation to me. In language and manners they are almost a different race. They are a large race of powerfully built men, of splendid physique. Above all they have a strong sense of duty and need no great persuasion to induce them to enlist. Their priests and their women give recruiting officers enthusiastic assistance. Chiefly fishermen, lumbermen and farmers, they have been essentially men of peace, but they are exceedingly conscientious, and are sternly determined to do their duty. Hundreds of them had already enlisted in Scottish artillery and other corps in the Maritime Provinces and gone to the front. The 165th is the first distinctly French Acadian battalion ever raised. With the assistance of Capt. Leonard Tilley, M. P. P., for St. John City (son of the late Sir Leonard Tilley) and others I raised 850 men in a three weeks' campaign. It was a real pleasure to work among them. I have been on recruiting work from Fort William to Cape Breton, and among no people have I found so willing enlistment or so large a percentage of fit men as among those who came forward. In the village of Bathurst, N.B., for instance at one meeting I got 52, of whom 38 passed first-class examinations."

Major Bisonnette belongs to Montreal and is the only French-Canadian in the battalion. Lieut.-Col. L. C. Daigle, an Acadian, of Moncton, N.B., is the commanding officer. The 850 men are now at Valcartier, where they already had three 'march pasts.' One before Col. McLean, M.P., one before Adjt.-Gen. Hodgins and one before Sir Sam Hughes. In each instance they were highly complimented.

"Their steadiness is wonderful," said Major Bissonnette. "Why you might leave them at attention for hours and not one of them would move."

These most intersting people are the descendants of the Acadians who drifted back to Nova Scotia years after the tragic expulsion by the British occurred. Their ancestors went into exile and were scattered over the world rather than take a binding oath of allegiance to the British. To-day they have taken their hands from the plough, the fishing net and the woods man's axe, and shouldered the rifle, side by side with their English fellow subjects, for the first time in history, and more loyal, courageous and capable soldiers could not be found. They language they speak is the quaint but pure French, of 200 years ago, and their home customs, and to some extent even their very costumes are those of the days of Le Grand Monarque. They lead quiet, peaceful lives, having little litigation with the village cure as their adviser and arbitrator.

BIRTHS.

IRELAND. — At Nicholls Hospital, July 16th, to Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Ireland, a son, Ronald Lloyd.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

Dear sir,—Will you kindly publish directions for tieing a bow-tie?—Roger Cool. Well, Roger, you hold the tie in your left hand and your collar in the other. Slip your neck in the collar, and cross the left-hand end of the tie over the right with the left hand, steadying the right end with the other hand. Then drop both hands, catching the left with the right and the other with the other. Reverse hands, and pick up the loose ends with the nearest hands. Pull this end through the loop with your unengaged hand, and squeese. You will find the knot all tied, and all you have to do is to untangle your hands.

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO RETAKE LOST POSITIONS

The Allies Have Advanced A Distance of 1,500 Yards

Germans Have Launched Heavy Counter-Attacks Against French Positions

All German Attacks South of The Somme Have Been Repulsed---Heavy Fighting is Going on With Heavy Losses to the Enemy---Germans Active on the Verdun Front Allies Extend Gains on Both Fronts.

ENEMY TRENCHES CAPTURED

PARIS, July 18.—(French Official)—The Germans have launched heavy counter-attack against the newly won French positions west of Peronne, the War Office announced to-day.

Thus far all German attacks south of the Somme have been repulsed, but heavy fighting is going on.

The Germans repeatedly attacked La Maisonette, but were repulsed each time with very heavy losses. The fighting then extended along a large sector of the front occupied by the French in the first week of the Anglo-Biaches, one mile from Peronne. The Germans were active last night on French offensive. The most violent combat is going on near the village of the Verdun front on both banks of the Meuse. On the west bank a German attack against Hill 304 was checked.

ALLIES EXTEND GAINS.

LONDON, July 18.—Allies extend gains on both fronts. The British are on the point of winning the crest of the Thealbert Plateau. Rain and mist temporarily halt operations. The latest advance wins enemy trenches for a distance of 1,500 yards.

Roger Casement Loses His Appeal

Unless the Crown Commutes the Death Sentence Casement Will Die on the Gallows

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 18.— Roger Casement's appeal from his conviction on the charge of high treason, for which he was sentenced to death, was today dismissed. The Court of Criminal Appeal announced its decision after listening to arguments by Alexander Sullivan, Casement's counsel, who charged that the instructions to the jury in Casement's trial was inaccurate.

Unless the Crown commutes the death sentence, Casement will now die on the gallows.

Will Make a Dash To-night

Special to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, July 18.—The German super submarine Deutschland was still at her pier here early to-day as far as could be learned, though she intends to dash for the Virginia coast to-night.

ARE DISSATISFIED.

WASHINGTON, July 18.— British and French Embassies are not satisfied with the United States' ruling in the Deutschland affair.

Peace Movement Gathers Strength

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 18.—A Budapest despatch says that the peace movement in Hungary attains large proportions. Seventy members of parliament demand immediate peace regardless of what Germany might request.

GLOOM DEEPENS.

LONDON, July 18. — Latest despatches state that the gloom deepens in Germany over the British successes. Public dismay is giving the government the gravest concern.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in weight Ten Pounds or More.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way,' declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Most thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood much of the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can probably best be accomplished by eating a Sargol Tablet with every meal. Sargol is a careful combination of six splendid assimilative agents. Taken with meals they mix with the food to turn the sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reports gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by all druggists everywhere, and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 94 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid, in plain wrapper.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it, unless a gain of weight is desired.

If vegetables are wilted they should not be pared or prepared in any way until they have been revived in water. The wilted surface makes waste in the preparation.

Italians Repulse Heavy Attack By The Austrians

Prompt Counter Thrust by Cadorna's Men Proves Effective ---Fighting is Severe---Attempt to Surround Monte Seluggio Positions is Frustrated---Destroyers Made an Attack Upon Austrian Town of Parenzo.

ROME, July 18.—The repulse of a heavy attack by the Austrians in the Upper Posina Valley, in the Trentino, as a result of an Italian counter-attack was announced by the War Office.

The announcement follows:

"In the Upper Posina area the enemy attempted to stop our advance, delivering a heavy attack supported by concentrated artillery fire between Monte Santo and Monte Toraro. We made a counter-attack and after severe hand-to-hand fighting repulsed the enemy along the whole front.

"In the Tovo Valley an attempt was made to surround our positions northwest of Monte Seluggio, but the effort was frustrated by our fire.

"Hostile artillery again shelled Cortina di Ampezzo. We retaliated on our usual targets in the Drave Valley. On the Upper But at the head of Raccolana Valley and on the Isonzo front there were intermittent artillery actions.

"On July 15, our aircraft bombarded camps in the Folgania area. Throughout Sunday the enemy displayed much aerial activity, bombarding several points in the Campnica and Adige Valleys. There were no casualties and no damage was inflicted. Our batteries drove off some hostile aircraft which were making for Bergamo, Brescia and Padua. Sunday night, five hydroplanes dropped bombs on Treviso, killing one person and wounding a few others. One machine was brought down by our fire. Two occupants of the machine were killed."

AUSTRIAN TOWN BOMBARDED.

BERLIN, July 18.—(By Wireless to Sayville)—The town of Parenzo, in Istria, was bombarded by Italian destroyers on July 15. The only damage of note occurred when the tower of a public building was struck, says an Austro-Hungarian Admiralty report. Ravenna, Italy, has been raided by Austro-Hungarian naval air craft, which returned safely.

"Three Italian destroyers," reads the statement, "shelled the town of Parenzo for a short time on the morning of July 15. Two private houses and tower of the parliament building were damaged. There was no other damage and no casualties occurred. The destroyers, struck by the fire of defensive batteries, left immediately.

"In the afternoon, Austro-Hungarian naval aircraft bombarded Ravenna and the batteries of Corsini and returned safely in spite of violent defensive fire."

COOP AND LENT'S CIRCUS HERE THURSDAY, JULY 20TH

On Thursday, July 20 Peterborough will be the Mecca for thousands of visitors from the surrounding country for the "Coop and Lent" All New United Monster Shows, will exhibit there on that date.

These Exhibitions are completely new this year, and no other organization that has ever been seen hereabouts covers so broad and comprehensive a field of up-to-date Circus diversion.

The large and varied performances naturally demand an arena of vast dimensions, utilizing three rings, two stages and a spacious hippodrome track and obviously the features to fittingly fill so extensive an area can only be those that are big in action and necessitating large numbers and groups of participants. THERE are Oriental and European novelty acts of wonderful daring and skill, and the equestrian acts far outshine anything hitherto presented together under canvas.

The racing contests evoke tumultuous enthusiasm, and collectively the performance, the Menagerie, the Aviary and Field Museum, etc., are said to be unexcelled in originality, quality and quantity.

PINNED IN SHAFT BOY JOKES AS HE DIRECTS RESCUE

NEW YORK, July 18.—His right arm crushed and his leg broken, James W. Peterson, thirteen years old, laughed and joked with firemen while they worked for more than an hour sawing him out of an elevator in an apartment house at No. 518 West 111th Street. The boy had endeavoured to operate the elevator and was pinned between the roof of the car and the third floor. In the midst of the work Dr. J. C. Smith, of the Knickerbocker Hospital, determined to give the boy an opiate in order to relieve his pain. James flatly refused to take it, saying he could hold out until the work was completed. He took an intelligent interest in the work of the firemen, directing them as they drilled away parts of the steel cage and chopped the flooring. When he was extricated and placed in an ambulance his strength failed him and he collapsed. At the hospital he was in a critical condition.

Acting on the information furnished by Mrs. Helen L. Stearn, of No. 601 West 182nd Street, the police arrested Benjamin Brown, operator of the elevator. Mrs. Stearn said she was in the building at the time of the accident, and was certain that Brown had run the car to the third floor, leaving James in charge while he delivered a package. She says Brown told the boy to run the elevator back to the first floor. Brown is held at the West 125th Street Station, accused of criminal negligence.

To prevent hot water bottles 'singing' screw stoppers down tightly as soon as they are filled, and after they are taken into the bedrooms unscrew them for a moment to let the steam escape, then screw them tightly up again.

3 Children Drown As They Bathe

NEW YORK, July 18.—Three children were drowned in waters near New York. Louis Zabininski, eight years old, lost his life in the Raritan River near New Brunswick, N.J., while his father made vain attempts to rescue him. With his younger brother Louis had been taking a swimming lesson under his father's direction. The father's attention was distracted when the smaller boy ran down the stream bank. Telling Louis to stay out of the water, he pursued the child, and returned to find Louis missing. The boy had endeavoured to swim by himself, going beyond his depth.

Zabininski swam under water, but was unable to find the body of his son. Four hours later, when a dozen searchers had joined him, the body was recovered. He had sunk in a deep hole near the bank.

Andrew Guilicuno, eleven years old, of Seventy-Second Street, Long Island City, was drowned in the East River at Sixth Street, on the east bank, while swimming with other boys. Going beyond his depth, he apparently was seized with cramps and disappeared beneath the surface. His companions became panic stricken.

Thomas Rankin, ten years old, who was unable to swin, dived into water beyond his depth in the Hudson River at West Ninety-eighth Street. Other boys who were with him found it impossible to assist him to shore. He lived at No. 160 West 103nd Street. Police of the West 100th Street Station were notified and began a search for the body, which was not recovered.

ALL ENGLAND IS STIRRED BY STORY OF BOY'S HEROISM

LONDON, July 17.—The passage in Rear-Admiral Beatty's dispatch on the North Sea fight which appeals to commentators and stirs all England is that in which the admiral pays a tribute to the heroism of a boy, John Travers Cornwall, of H.M.S. Chester, who was mortally wounded early in action. The admiral says:

'He nevertheless remained standing alone at a most exposed post, quietly awaiting orders, till the end of the action, with the gun's crew dead and wounded all around him. His age was under 16 1-2 years. I regret he has since died, but I recommend his case for special recognition in justice to his memory and as an acknowledgment of the high example set by him."

Cornwall joined the navy in August, 1915, and went into the training school. He had been at sea only a few weeks when he was killed. The captain of the Chester in a letter to the boy's mother says:

"He remained steady at his most exposed post at the gun waiting for orders. His gun, would not bear on the enemy. All but two of the crew were killed or wounded, and he was the only one who was in such an exposed position, but he felt he might be needed, and indeed he might have been, so he stayed there standing and waiting under a heavy fire with just his own brave heart and God's help to support him.

"I cannot express to you my admiration of the son you have lost from this world. I hope to place in the boys' mess a plate with the name and date and the words: 'Faithful unto death.'"

PULLS CHILD OUT OF MUD IN SEWER

NEW YORK, July 18.—While companions held his feet, Joseph Gagano groped head first in a sewer manhole and rescued Mollie Catrille, one year old, as she was sinking in mud at the bottom of the pit. The child was unconscious when brought to the street, but was revived by Dr. Lynch of St. Vincent's Hospital.

The accident occurred at the corner of King and Varick Streets, where there is an excavation for the new Seventh Avenue subway. Mollie ran ahead of her sister, Mary, twelve years old, tumbling at the mouth of the excavation and rolling into the sewer. Factories were letting out at the time and a panic stricken crowd gathered.

Gagano, who is twenty years old and lives at No. 49 King Street, took charge of the situation and commanded that others lower him into the hole. He saw that the child was sinking rapidly in the mud and first seized the girl's hair and then managed to grasp her clothing. Mollie lives at No. 58 and Gagano at No. 49 King Street.

Advice—Often Worth Heeding

—particularly when that advice refers to habits that directly affect one's health and comfort.

Thousands, annoyed by headaches, nervousness biliousness, sleeplessness, etc.—often due to tea or coffee drinking—have heeded a friendly suggestion to quit both tea and coffee and use

Instant Postum

This pure food-drink is made of wheat, roasted with a bit of wholesome molasses. It has a rich, snappy flavour, fine colour and aroma, and it contains no caffeine—the drug in tea and coffee—nor other harmful element.

Freedom from caffein gives Nature right of way to rebuild and vitalize the mental and physical forces.

There are two forms of Postum: The original Postum Cereal must be boiled: Instant Postum a soluble form, is made in the cup by adding boiling water—ready instantly. Some prefer one, some the other; they are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

With most tea or coffee-drinkers the change to Postum marks the start to better health and greater comfort.

Motorcyclist Gets Odd Ride on Engine

MILLVILLE, N.J., July 18.—Charles Norberry, of Fries Mill, who was riding his motorcycle at a thirty mile rate in East Millville, was struck by a West Jersey and Seashore Railroad train and escaped with out a scratch. The motorcycle, with Norberry still on the seat, was caught on the pilot of the locomotive and held fast until the train was stopped five hundred feet from where it was struck.

The engine driver almost fainted when he ran to the front of his engine and saw the young man crawl down from the seat of the motorcycle.

ENLISTED ON WAGER

Lambert, Famous Canadian Jockey, Caps His Fine Career

William F. Lambert, one of the best steeplechase or high-jump riders in America, enlisted for overseas service with the 205th Sportsmen's Battalion. Lambert was discussing the war situation with Fred Emery, a fellow-rider at Hendrie's Farm, on the Waterdown road, near Hamilton, and the talk ended in an argument. Lambert accusing his friend of being yellow. This was followed by a bet and immediately both men started out and walked into the armories through the worst storm of the year, and signed up with the Sportsmen's Battalion. Lambert lost his bet, but he does not begrudge the money, as he considers it well spent.

Lambert was 28 years old, and was born in Galway, Ireland. He started riding in Ireland at the age of 14 years and soon developed into a successful rider on many of the English tracks. He came to America with William Lakeland, the famous English trainer, and immediately started to climb the ladder of success. He soon was recognized as America's best high-jumping rider, and won the America championship at Madison Square Gardens by jumping his horse 7 feet 2 inches. He has ridden on most of the tracks in Canada and the United States, and for some time had been connected with the stables of George M. Hendrie, and rode Sir John S. Hendrie's famous English jumping horses.

TERROR OF BAYONET

Vivid Description of War's Horrors and Hun Cowardice

A vivid picture of trench warfare is drawn by a lance-corporal of the Lincolns, who, in a letter to his home at Boston, Lancs., says: No doubt you have read of the big success we had the other day. I was in that lot, and I am glad to say I came out without a scratch, but I had some very narrow escapes. I think it is only by God's mercy that I am alive now. I did not imagine there was such a thing on earth as the lot I went through.

The bombardment started about four in the morning, and lasted until five o'clock next day, ea time. I thought hell was let loose. The noise of the guns was awful; they nearly deafened me. There were "Jack Johnsons," "whiz-bangs," trench mortars, and "coal boxes" dropping all round me. If it had not been for the steel helmet I was wearing I should have got killed a hundred times over. Such terrible sights I never saw in my life before. At another time I would have died at the sight of such things. To make matters worse, it was raining and snowing all the time.

When the time came for the charge things were awful. The Germans came out of their trenches waving white rags, and any other things they could get, surrendering in hundreds. They are the biggest lot of cowards I ever saw in my life. They cannot stand a British bayonet charge, but they make horrible work of our trenches with their guns. They levelled them down all over, but the German prisoners say their trenches were worse than ours. If they were, God help them! The German trenches were blocked with their dead and dying. I am writing this letter without any clothes on to speak of. I was in an awful mess coming out of the trenches, but still I am quite happy and cheerful.

THE GRENADIER GUARD

How a Crack Battalion Was Selected and Seasoned

The 87th Battalion, Grenadier Guards, in their barracks at St. Johns, Que., anxiously waited the day when their tenure of the historic old fort on the Richelieu River would come to an end and this now famous corps should go overseas. The Guards are a fine regiment—an exceptionally fine regiment. Even in comparison with other battalions which have gone from Montreal they stand out with certain indisputable claims to consideration. First then is the physique of the men. During the first week of recruiting a minimum height of 5 feet 7 inches was the standard but it so soon became evident that there were almost as many men 5 feet 9 inches and over in height available for a special Guards Regiment as there were of 5 feet 7 inches and the minimum height was "jumped" two inches. Two weeks later Brig.-Gen. F. S. Meighen who then commanded the battalion put it up another inch, so that during the six weeks required to raise the regiment, a third of the time only men over 5 feet 10 inches tall were eligible.

It does not follow that because a man is tall and built in proportion, he is any braver or any better marksman than the man 5 feet 2 inches high, which is the regulation overseas standard, but the big, powerful men do certainly make magnificent bayonet-fighters; and, with equal certainty, they make a fine-looking body of men. The men of the Guards worked hard, faithfully and enthusiastically and, as a result, the battalion "found itself." This is a hard thing to analyze but, when a regiment has reached this point in its development, the fact is unmistakable. Then for six weeks, there was an average of thirty men a week going to St. Johns for the sake of trying to join the battalion. This constant inflow of prospective recruits very greatly facilitated the task of Major Gilday in eliminating all the men who were likely to prove physically unfit. The "weeding out" process was thorough in the extreme.

War Kills Hun Papers

The Imperial post office department reports that since the beginning of the war three thousand German daily and weekly papers and monthly magazines have ceased publishing on account of decrease of circulation, lack of advertisements and the steady rise in price of white paper.

WOUNDED REFUSE WATER

Each Takes No More Than a Sip—Chaplain's Prize

An English chaplain writing to a London paper, says: There is a scene before my mind's eye that will never be forgotten. A battalion attacking just in front of us had suffered awful casualties, and for hours in a continuous stream the wounded are brought in or crawl in, all parched with thirst from the pain they are suffering. In response to a request to the Sergeant-Major for water to give these poor fellows, the appalling answer comes: "We have not a drop of water in the ambulance." Can you imagine a more ghastly state of affairs in the circumstances?

"We were at our wit's end to deal with the situation and meet the heart-breaking cries for water that met us on all sides, while waiting for the return of the messengers sent with an urgent request to the nearest M.L.O. Then it suddenly occurred to me that my own water bottle was full, as it had been filled the night before and not touched. I rushed to bring it, and proceeded to dole it out in a cup. As I handed the cup to each of the wounded men, I said: "Look here, old fellow, there is only a very little water here, and you must only take enough to wet your lips and rinse out your mouth."

Each man, without exception, put the cup to his lips, took one small mouthful, and then passed it on to the next. It is difficult for anyone who has not experienced it, to realize the self-denial and self-control necessary to remove a cup of water from one's lips when consumed by overwhelming thirst. One young fellow came crawling in, and his first words were, "Oh, give me a drink!" I handed him the cup, telling him the state of affairs, and immediately he said, "Oh, there are plenty want it worse than me; give it to them," and he refused to touch a drop.

Here is a soldier of the King arrayed in the modern garb of war. The picture was taken on the British front in France.

Aviator Be-medalled

"Lone Wolf of the Clouds," is the nickname bestowed upon the young French aviator, M. Navarre, who brought down two German machines in one day, bringing up his total to eight. He ascends at daybreak, and will prowl among the clouds for hours awaiting his prey. He has been decorated with the Legion of Honor, the Military Medal, and the Cross of War.

Long before the present war the R.A.M.C. suffered from a libellous misinterpretation of its initials, but now other regiments are in a similar plight. R.N.A.S. is interpreted by some to mean "Really not a sailor," and the A.S.C. "Ally Sloper's Cavalry."

A Parliamentary Yarn.— A good story is told of a certain M.P., well known for his verbosity, who rose to address the House recently. "I will divide my speech under twelve heads," he commenced, to the discomfort of his audience. Another witty member, however, came to the rescue by begging to be allowed to interpose with a little anecdote. "A friend of mine was returning home late one night," he said, "when opposite St. Paul's he saw an intoxicated man trying to ascertain the time on the big clock there. Just then it began to strike, and slowly tolled out twelve. The man listened, looked hard at the clock and said 'Confound you! why couldn't you have said that all at once?' The over-eloquent one heartily joined in the laughter which followed, and took the hint.

He was eligible.—A burly man, the picture of health and strength, walked into the office of a prominent insurance company the other day, and wanted to be insured. "Are you engaged in any hazardous business?" inquired the secretary. "Not in the least," replied the applicant. "Does your business make it necessary for you to be without sleep at night?" "No, sir." "Would your business ever require you to be where there were excited crowds—for instance at a riot or fire?" "Never, sir." "Is your business such as to render you liable to injury from carriages or runaway horses?" "Oh, no, sir." "Does your business throw you in contact with the criminal classes?" "Good gracious! No sir." "I think you are eligible. What is your business?" "I am a policeman."

EGYPT THRIVES IN WAR.

Natives, With No Military Duties, Sell Much Produce to Army.

LONDON, July 9—(Letter.)—A Reuter correspondent with the Egyptian Expeditionary Forces, writes:

"Certain it is that this country remains marvelously untroubled in the midst of the universal uproar, although its peace is constantly threatened. There can be no doubt that it was long ago marked down by our enemies as one of the prizes of the

Caste Barriers Go

Percy Alden, a member of the British Parliament, spoke before the national Conference of Charities and Corrections on "National Stress as a Stimulus to Social Thought and Action." "The war in Europe has started a period of profound emotion," he said; "with it is a vast-output of moral and intellectual energy. Barriers of class and caste have, under social stress, disappeared for a time in England. The reaction from individualism to Socialism, from competitive to collective effort, stands out. The unity of the nation is evidenced in legislation and administration. Rich and poor alike offer their services under the stimulus of intense patriotic feeling."

PILING UP MATERIALS

Here are the latest figures of French munitions productions that the censor will pass: The French army on February 1, 1915, possessed twenty-three times as many heavy guns as at the beginning of the war. It possessed a daily output of thirty times as many shells for the "soixante quinze" guns. It possessed an output of 44 times as many shells for larger guns. The powder factories had twenty-three times the capacity they had at the start. The French stock of munitions not only keeps up comfortably with the terrific expenditure but increases daily.

"Closed for duration of war. Group called up," says a notice in the window of an empty shop in Islington.

TRENCH SLANG

The following are a few of the nicknames "Tommy Atkins" has bestowed upon German armaments and death dealing machines:

"Minnie"—An extremely objectionable young lady. A minenwerfer, or German trench mortar.

Oil Cans—The projectile favored by "Minnie," shaped like an oil can, about 4 feet by 1 foot, and exceedingly full of "bust."

Rufus—The shell that comes whistling over to get the range; it usually does not explode.

Archibald—The anti-aircraft gun.

Pip-squeak—A variety of whiz-bang.

Hows, and Baby Hows—Different types of howitzers.

H.E.—High explosive.

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away, —are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead— and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her Shopping Bag.

(Original.)

Toward the close of the last century there was quite a rage for amateur photography among the young people of New Orleans. There were two members of the Camera club, Wirt Ellsworth and Louise Levan, who took so many photographs together that life came to appear to them to be composed of myriads of beautiful scenes. But suddenly Ellsworth, who was a sugar broker, was offered a fine opening in Havana and went there to make the place his home. From that time forward all the pictures taken by Miss Levan seemed to be so tinged with melancholy. Ellsworth, too, though he ceased to make photographs, found that his ardor was waning in being deprived of the girl's society.

At that time Captain General Weyler was busily engaging in putting many active revolutionary spirits out of the way by incarcerating them, as he called it, incommunicado, which meant literally without communication. In other words, no one was to know where they were, that they were charged with any offense or anything else about them.

Ellsworth was heartily in sympathy with the Cubans, but wisely refrained from taking any part in the revolution. He had gone to Cuba to engage in the sugar business, not to help the people to gain their liberties. But a rival sugar broker, seeing certain lines of business that he had always controlled passing into the young American's hands, secretly lodged information that he was plotting with the revolutionists. Ellsworth was spirited away.

When a month passed and no letter had been received from him in New Orleans, great was the trepidation with regard to him among his relatives. He had only a mother and sisters, who, instead of going to Cuba to find out what had happened to him, contented themselves with worrying. It was then that Louise Levan discovered how much she was in love, and she was ready to go to Havana and make inquiries. But instead of announcing her real purpose she gave out that she was going to take photographs of scenes pertaining to the revolution.

When Miss Levan reached Havana she commenced investigations which soon led to the knowledge that Ellsworth was confined in a prison in the interior. His present business associates told her that he would have taken measures to bring the case before the American consul, but the commander-in-chief had prevented their getting any proof of his identity.

Louise Levan found herself confronted by a problem. How could she secure this proof? Even if she could get into the jail, see the prisoner and make affidavit to the fact of Ellsworth's identity the trickery of the Spaniards would likely thwart her in the end. Knowing her purpose, they could simply remove Ellsworth after the preliminary and rejecting of many plans she hit upon one that she proceeded to carry out.

Going to the town where Ellsworth was imprisoned, she took up her abode in an inn with a view to watching for an opportunity to get a glimpse of him. He might be allowed exercise in the jail yard; he might appear at a window; she might be admitted to the prison. In the first two of these she was disappointed, and all her preparations to gain access to the interior were refused until a prison inspector came to the inn who had a day's leave to inspect the prison. Louise secured an introduction, flattered him and begged that she might send a written account, censored by him, of the treatment of the prisoners. The official, seeing an opportunity to influence American sentiment, turning it from the current reports of barbarous treatment, consented.

The next day Louise went with the official to inspect the prison. In time they passed Ellsworth's cell. He was sitting on a stool, pale, dejected, emaciated, reading a fragment of a newspaper. He did not look up. As the party passed on Louise lagged. This gave her the opportunity she desired. She carried what seemed to be a lady's bag for the purpose of holding handkerchief, portemonnaie and such articles. Instead it was a kodak she had had constructed in New Orleans in a reliable if not snapped, and she had Ellsworth's picture.

The prisoner got unconscious that his bad careers were coming to an end when and that she had the proof required to set him at liberty. The party passed on and until arriving Louise showed the official a report of the inspection, which he approved at once.

A few days later a deputy United States consul with several persons to whom Ellsworth was personally known —Miss Levan was not among them—appeared at the prison where he was confined. The deputy was provided with an order and a photograph. The order read that he was to see the prisoners and if the counterpart of the photograph was among them he was to be at once sent to Havana. When Ellsworth's cell was reached and a comparison made, there was no doubt that the photographed was he.

When Ellsworth reached Havana he was taken direct to the governor's palace, where there was a hearing of his case, and he was released. Turning to go out, a free man, who should he see smiling at him but his old camera companion, Louise Levan.

That was more than two years ago. Now Wirt Ellsworth is one of the most prominent American citizens of Havana, and Louise Levan is his wife

TRANSPORT OF TROOPS BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Numbers and Distance in Gigantic Feats Under British Protection Stagger the Neutrals

Victor Elliott writes from Washington: With thousands of Russians crowded for months fighting in France, naval officials in Washington are still amazed at the accomplishment of transporting such a vast number of men for such a long distance under such severe conditions. The debarkation of Russian troops at Marseilles after a remarkable voyage at first reported to have begun at Archangel, the port of the White Sea which is supposed to have been ice-bound at the time when the expedition weighed anchor, emphasized the fact that the present war in Europe has presented greater problems in the transportation of troops than any other conflict in history.

The manner in which troops have been transported from the four corners of the earth to be hurled into battle on the fields of France, Serbia, Mesopotamia and Gallipoli quickens the imagination and commands the admiration of the observer as no similar series of military enterprises in world history. While looking the spectacular elements of Cæsar's voyage to Britain; of Hannibal's conquest of the Alps; of the march of the 10,000 Greeks immortalized in Xenophon's Anabasis; or the amazing march of Napoleon's legions into the heart of Russia and their calamitous retreat before the "infantry of the sea" and the cavalry of the wild steppes, the problems involved in bringing millions of fighting men across vast ocean wastes, are almost staggering in their complexity.

Britain's Unique Task

Because her colonies are far more widely scattered and because her command of the high seas has carried with it greater responsibilities in this direction, England has been the chief beneficiance carrier of human food for the mighty maw of the modern god of war. She has brought her South African colonials from Cape Town to Oahis; her troopships have semi-circled the globe, a distance of nearly 11,000 miles, to bring Australians from Melbourne to Marseilles, by way of the Suez; her Ghurkas have been brought from Bombay to Bruges; her Indian garrisons from Calcutta to Constantinople; Canadians from Montreal to the Marne, and her Anzacs from New Zealand to Salonica. From her own shores, in the meantime, there has gone forth a stream of Scotch, Irish and English troops to France, to Serbia, to Gallipoli, to Suez and to Aden. The distance between these points aggregate more than 50,000 miles, equal to twice the circumference of the earth. Travelling at the speed which it maintained for a single day during its voyage in 1914, when a new record for trans-Atlantic speed was established, the Mauretania would require two and a half months to complete the aggregate voyage.

All Records Go

France, too, has sent her soldiers thousands of miles by sea, Marseilles being the chief port of embarkation and troops bound for Saloniki, Gallipoli, Albania, and Serbia, while her Turcos, brought from colonial Algeria, have served to swell the ranks of the men under Gen. Joffre in Northern France. A voyage of the Russians from Archangel to Marseilles would not be a distance record for 1916. If her transports were to take the shortest course, through the English Channel, the trip would be less than 4,500 miles, while the arc of the circle described beyond the British Isles, in order to avoid German submarines, would make the actual length of such a voyage a matter of speculation. Whatever the distance traveled, however, it would seem puny compared with the historic voyage of Roshestvenski's fleet from Libau on the Baltic, around the Cape of Good Hope, to the Straits of Tsushima, during the Russo-Japanese war, a trip far more than 15,000 miles. Less fraught with danger but more than twice as long as the Archangel-Marseilles route, was the voyage of the Russian troops who landed in France from Dalny, the Manchurian port. By way of the Suez Canal, this is a 10,000-mile trip.

ENGLISH STARTED KRUPP

Everyone knows the part which Krupp's guns played in equipping Germany and her allies with munitions, but few realize that the money with which the great firm was built on a sure foundation, if not actually came from Birmingham. Alfred Krupp came to Birmingham about 1840 with an introduction from Dr. Siemens to Messrs. Elkington and Mason, electro-platers, the processes of the present firm of Elkington & Co. He offered to them a machine, which he had invented for rolling the metal "blanks" from which spoons and forks are made. Eventually he sold the plant to the firm for $60,000. With the money thus acquired Krupp proceeded to Essen and laid the foundation of the great fortune he afterwards acquired.

GERMAN SPY'S ERROR

Wore Colonel's Uniform, All Correct But Cap

London Opinion says: A young officer in one of our machine gun batteries, who is back from the front on a few days' leave, says that they caught a German spy. He was dressed in the uniform of a British colonel, and was moving around inside our lines, as large as life, asking where certain batteries were located, about the situation of various camps, and for other helpful particulars. Early in the course of his activities, a man was told off to watch him, and after his little game had been revealed he was taken prisoner, and duly disposed of next morning. For you see there had been one tiny flaw in his beautiful get-up as a British colonel, and that was the fact that he was wearing a Tommy's cap!

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire. As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country or been wounded in action are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

PRUSSIA LACKS BABIES

Declining Birth Rate Alarms the Arch-militarists

A Copenhagen correspondent writes, Prussian statistics show a paucity of anything that the most alarming decline of the birth rate is found among the agricultural classes. The cities, the municipalities or large private companies are comparatively secure. This proves that the smaller number of children born is the outcome of a deliberate plan, a defying on the part of these classes. The people who are receiving small salaries dare not be cessary to bring a large number of children when their salaries remain stationary while the cost of living is continually rising. It is the proletarian which agitates Germany is then, what it has always been, the seed bed. The socialists answer thus: Better conditions of living, higher salaries and wages. The other political partian say that this is not nearly sufficient. Small children are a great asset to get the upper hand in Germany, even though the well-to-do people will realize that they shall be able to live far more comfortably and pleasantly with one or two children, or none at all, than with a large number. Herr Naumann, a member of the Reichstag, suggests that salaries are to be regulated by the number of children so that no family gains anything financially by having fewer children.

The problem has even been connected with the question of the change of constitution in Prussia, for which the masses of the people are hoping in order to throw off the galling yoke of Prussian and militarism. It has been suggested that greater political power, a double vote, should be given to those who rear large families. One thing is absolutely certain—anything that the state can possibly do to stop the decline of the birth rate will be done. The question is: Will it be possible to stop the receding tide? In France, so far, efforts have proved futile, and no one here dare say to-day, in the light of the events of the last nineteen months, that the French people are less patriotic than the German. It is evident, however, except, perhaps, the most rabid militarist, that the continued shedding of blood of hundreds of thousands of young men on battlefields must cease and this adds to the general desire for peace, even at a sacrifice of territory, which is becoming stronger and more insistent every day.

Capital of Portugal

Lisbon, the capital of Portugal, has a population of about half a million. Its harbor is one of the finest in the world, and large enough to hold all the navies of Europe. The greatest earthquake on record occurred at Lisbon when, in 1755, in less than ten minutes, the greater part of the city was made a heap of ruins, and from 60,000 to 40,000 persons killed.

ARMY MUST HAVE TOBACCO

Without Ample Supply Soldiers' Nerves Would Go to Pieces.

They apparently have enough tobacco in Germany anyway, whatever else the nation may be short of, and the British Government is now considering what to do about it, says a London despatch. On account of certain commercial exigencies the Germans have to pay cash for their tobacco, and every cigar or cigarette imported means that much money is leaving Germany, which is a good thing for the allies, for the more money Germany sends out the sooner will she be exhausted. But now the military people declare that in these modern days, with the tobacco habit so thoroughly entrenched, it would be advisable to keep tobacco out of Germany. It is held that without tobacco an army's nerves would go to pieces. It is a broad claim, but one which is put forward by experts and which is getting considerable.

It has been a great point of self-congratulation in England that Germany is staying and being forced to her knees by the lack of food. But the well informed in the Government service do not believe that this is precisely true. A prominent official said lately:

"Germany is not starving — yet. She is going without a great many things, but so far as mere subsistence is concerned she is far from the end. However, although her people get enough to eat now, and while there will be enough to keep them going for months to come, the diet they are obliged to have is tiresome. Even if our blockade isn't knocking Germany out of supplies entirely, it is surely making the German people an unhappy and discontented lot."

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

If Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," "a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

TO RENOVATE HAT BANDS

To renovate hat bands when stained by sweat, dissolve 1½ ounces of white castile soap in 4 ozs. of alcohol and 1 oz. each of sulphuric ether and ammonia; apply with a sponge or tooth brush, rub smartly, rinse out with clear rain water. This is equally good to renovate any cloth with fast colored.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

There is always a struggle in the mind of the woman who is not plentifully endowed with money for clothes as to how she can make a garment intended for a house dress primarily and yet have it of a character that will permit its being worn outside the house, especially in the warm weather, when the simple styles are so inviting. The designer who can give such style is truly a sorceress. Look at the illustration, No. 7,816, and judge for yourself.

There's nothing to it—in the making—but there are grace and charm expressed by its simple lines. A tuck is made in the shoulderslige of the waist, which has its closing a bit to one side. The small sweep collar has an inlay of insertion and the long sleeve is finished with a band of the insertion. A belt of material may be used or omitted where the seven gored skirt joins the waist, and the shirt may be made with an under box plait or with habit back.

According to taste, use figured percale, chambray, linen, gingham, galatea or lawn for developing this design. No. 7,816. The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 44 bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 5¼ yards of 36 inch goods and 1¾ yards insertion.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

GERMANS RETREAT NEARLY TEN MILES

BRITISH MAKE SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS

GERMANS IN VOLHYNIA HAVE HURRIEDLY RETIRED TEN MILES

Retreat Was made Necessary When Several Russian Regiments Broke Through the German Front and Threatened to Surround Part of Gen. Linsingen's Army---In Spite of Heavy Mist and Rain British Troops Made Substantial Progress on a Front of 100 Yards in Neighborhood of Orvillers.

CZAR'S ARMIES HAVE RESUMED INITIATIVE

PETROGRAD, July 18.—The Germans have retreated nearly ten miles in Volhynia under the swift advance of General Kaldeim's left wing. In their hasty retirement several thousand more prisoners, a number of heavy guns, and large supplies of war material have fallen into the hands of the Russians. The retreat was made necessary when several Russian regiments broke through the German front and threatened to surround a party of General Linsingen's army. The Russians have advanced their lines to the north bank of the River Lipa and are strengthening their new positions on the entire front. The advance widens the Russian salient extending into the Austra-German front southeast of Kovel, thus removing the danger of crushing enemy attacks on both sides of the Russian wedge. All along the eastern front the Czar's armies have suddenly resumed their initiative.

British Drive Foe From Several Strongholds

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 18.—Despite a heavy mist and rain which are interfering with the Somme offensive, British troops made subatantial progress last night on a front of 1,000 yards in the region of Ovillers, General Haig reported this afternoon. The Germans were driven from several strongly defended points, and prisoners and six Maxims were captured.

Deutchsland's Captain Barred From Wireless

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, Md., July 18.—The United States Government to-day barred its Tuckerton, N.J., wireless station to the captain and manager of the German sub-sea freighter Deutschland.

Russian Troops Everywhere on Offensive

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 18.—Russian troops are everywhere on the offensive on the Austrian front.

"Renewed Russian advances in Bukowina against our positions south and southwest of Molmaha were without success," it was stated officially to-day.

"Our front section near Szklin withdrew into the district east of Gorochow. Covered in west flank by a German counter-attack, Austro-German troops fighting south of Lutsk were withdrawn behind the Lower Lipa without being disturbed by the enemy."

British and French Attacking Says Foe

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, July 18.—Both British and French armies resumed the Allied offensive on both sides of the Somme yesterday evening and last night with strong attacks against German positions, it was officially announced this afternoon. Russian troops attempted unsuccessfully to take advantage of the Austro-German retirement in Volhynia with attacks west and southwest of Lutsk, all of which were repulsed, said the War Office.

BERLIN, July 18.—Writing in prominent newspapers various high authorities urge that the time has come to resume the submarine campaign to its utmost, despite any pledges to the United States. It would seem that high official opinion seems to favour this change of policy immediately.

Local Man is Drowned in West

Mr. Patrick Connolly of Bank of Commerce Staff Victim of Drowning Accident

Word was received in the city the other day of the death of Mr. Patrick Connolly by drowning, at Broadway, Sask., on July 2nd last. Mr. Connolly was a member of the local staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce up to June 27th, when he was transferred to Winnipeg. The drowning accident which caused his death, happened just one week after his transfer to the Winnipeg branch.

The deceased young man came originally from Ireland and had only been in this country a few years. He had lived in Peterborough over a year and had resided at 483 Mark street. Mr. Connolly had a wide circle of friends in this city who will be grieved to hear of his demise.

The late Mr. Connolly was a member of St. Peter's Dramatic Club and had taken a leading role in the production of "Innisfail" on March 17th last at the local Opera House.

SOLICITOR SAYS CITY NEEDS AN INSPECTOR OF HIGHWAYS ETC.

City Solicitor Gordon called the Council's attention to the need of an inspector for highways, sidewalks, etc. This was emphasized by a recent decision in a damage action against the city of Windsor in the Appellate division.

Mr. Parson stated that Mr. Fitzgerald was practically a road foreman this year and the city had no one who could be assigned to this duty.

$219 TO 52ND BATTERY IS MUCH APPRECIATED

Capt. W. E. V. Shaw of the 52nd Battery, Pettawawa, conveyed in a letter to the Council last night the thanks of the battery for the civic gift of $219 which was forwarded through Mr. W. C. Ackerman.

WANT TO STOP THE EXPORTATION OF ELECTRIC POWER

Ontario Government is Faced With Immediate Crisis Caused Big Deficiency of 50,000 H. P. Required for Its Customers.

160,000 H.P. ARE EXPORTED

TORONTO, Ont., July 18.—Faced with an immediate crisis caused by the deficiency of fifty thousand horse power required for its customers, the Ontario Provincial Government has asked the Dominion Government to immediately prohibit the export of all power from the Canadian side of the Niagara Falls to the United States.

Sir Adam Beck, Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Eelectric Power System, pointed out that Ontario was at present exporting to New York State about one hundred and sixty thousand horse power which it could use itself to great advantage in the present war crisis when all is required here to permit manufacturers to continue munitions manufacture. It is expected that the Dominion Government will comply with the demand of the Ontario authorities.

A TRIBUTE TO OAK ORCHARD

Pittsburg Dispatch Calls Perry Alexander the Miracle Man of the Resort Business

Under the heading, "Luxury in camp, Metropolitan conveniences are found in the Ontario wilds at Oak Orchard, the Pittsburg Dispatch says:

William Price, President of the Diamon National, and David C. Wills, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank, Cleveland, have returned from a fishing expedition in the woods of Ontario, where they found in Oak Orchard, a man named Perry Alexander, who has carried the highest civilization into the infrequent haunts of American tourists. The revelation was a surprise to them.

In addition to catching bass from two to four lbs and maskinonge galore, they found in Alexander's establishment every convenience to be had in a Metropolitan Club. The Lodge is very well furnished. Some of the bedrooms have private baths even shower baths, hot and cold water in the rooms, gas lights, etc., etc.

This unusual resort lies about 100 miles from Toronto, 16 miles from Peterborough and about 10 by water from Bobcaygeon. It is located in a picturesque grove at Gannon's Narrows at the entrance of Buckhorn Lake, one of the 25 lakes called Kawartha.

Perry Alexander can safely be called the miracle man in the resort business as he has apparently worked wonders away up there in Canada."

HARRY KIRK ELECTROCUTED

Detroit Papers Tell How Former Peterborough Man Lost His Life.

A Detroit paper gives the following account of the death of Mr. Harry Kirk, a former well known Peterborough resident, and son-in-law of Mr. Edward Courtney, Concession street:

Harry Kirk, 49 years old, of 925 Pennsylvania avenue, was instantly killed when his arm came in contact with an electric wire in the plant of the Gemmer Manufacturing Co., of 731 Merrick avenue, Thursday afternoon. Kirk was employed by the company as a millwright for three years.

Magazines and Books Wanted for Soldiers

Capt E. M. Best, who is leaving shortly to carry on Y. M. C. A. work among the Canadian troops, is very anxious to secure magazines and books for the benefit of the troops on the transports. Reading helps to while away many tedious hours, and there must be in nearly every house in Peterborough books and magazines which have been read and thrown aside Captain Best would like to get some of these, and citizens would be doing the boys a good turn if they could leave some books or magazines at Campbell and Best's store, Hunter street, next to the Post Office, some time tomorrow. Captain Best will be in England for some time, and he would like to visit some of the Peterborough boys in hospital. If any local friends have messages to send to their loved ones, Captain Best will be glad to look after them. Messages can also be left at the Campbell and Best store.

1138 SOLDIERS ARE ABSENT FROM CAMP BORDEN WITHOUT LEAVE

This Total is Only For Eighteen Battalions With Eight Others to be Heard From---Sergt. Major R. T. Biggs of The Mounted Rifles Home From England---Pte Sam McKinley is Officially Considered Dead---To-day's Military News.

CAMP BORDEN, July 18.—The latest parade state to-day shows 1,138 men absent without leave and eighteen battalions heard from.

The battalions not heard from yet include four from London area and four Toronto units.

Under strict military discipline these men are liable to be charged with the serious crime in war time, of desertion, unless they are physically unable to get back. A large contingent of mounted regular troops is now here to form a mounted guard around the camp under the command of the Provost Marshall.

Captain E. M. Best, formerly of Peterboro, and more recently associated with Y.M.C.A. training work in the United States, is in Peterboro on a few days' visit to his brother, Mr. Ray P. Best, of Campbell & Best.

Capt. Best is on his way overseas to carry on Y.M.C.A. work amongst the Canadian troops, a position for which his training in the Y.M.C.A., his knowledge of sports and of what appeals to young men, his geniality and admirable qualities, generally splendidly fit him. Capt. Best will be remembered by Peterboro fans by his powers on the lacrosse field. His many friends were glad to see him again, and will unite in wishing him every success in his work among the troops. Capt. Best looks well in khaki.

Mrs. McKinlay, formerly of 310 Margaret avenue, and now of 493 Aylmer street, has received word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Sam McKinlay, of the 2nd Battalion, who has been missing since the second battle of Ypres, in April, 1915, is now officially considered as dead, the authorities having been unable to find any trace of him in the German prison camps, or elsewhere. The report says that it is evident that Pte. McKinlay met his death between April 22 and April 26, near Ypres. Two brothers of Pte. McKinlay are in khaki.

The 238th Forestry Battalion should appeal to the many lumbermen in Peterborough County. It affords them an enjoyable trip to England, congenial work under ideal conditions, the same pay and patriotic allowance as the combattant forces and working hours that are much easier than in the same line of business here. The Forestry Battalion is not a fighting unit and will not go to the front but it will do a very useful work in providing pit poles for the mines and props for the trenches. Sergt. Stanley, at the recruiting office, can give full information in regard to the unit. The medical examination is not so strict as for combattant units and as a result, some of the men rejected by the 93rd Battalion have already signed on for the 238th.

Quite a number of 109th men on leave from Barriefield were in the city yesterday.

Among the Canadian soldiers invalided home who arrived on the Empress of Britain is Pte. J. Sandbach of Peterborough. Pte. Sandbach was a member of the 39th Battalion, and is being sent home as a result of an attack of penumonia and pleurisy. He formerly resided on McDonnel street. His wife, who went to England when the 39th went overseas, has recently returned to Peterborough from the Old Country.

Sergt. Roy Sandercock of the 109th Battalion, Lindsay, former captain of the Lindsay Junior Hockey Team, passed through the city to-day on his way to Barriefield, to join his regiment. He has been in charge of the recruiting station in Lindsay since the Battalion went into camp. This morning he bade good-bye to his brother, Mr. Thomas Sandercock, 12 Inverlee Avenue, and expects to go overseas shortly.

Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs, who left Peterborough with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., is home from England on a short leave, having to report for duty again on the fifteenth of next month. Sergt. Major Biggs has been attached to the Strathcona Horse in England since the 8th C. M.R. was broken up in January, and his commanding officer is Col. Young, a brother of Lt.-Col. T. W. H. Young of Peterborough now at the front as Medical Officer of the 2nd Divisional Engineers. Sergt.-Major Biggs' reports that nearly all the 8th men are in France, with the exception of several officers and non-coms., who are in training duties in England.

Writing to his wife, Pte. Jas. Willshaw, a Peterborough boy with the 59th Battalion, speaks of the fact that practically all the battalion is now in France. He himself expected to be across the Channel by the time his letter reached Peterborough. Pte. Willshaw says: "We had a competition to-day for the man who could put the most bullets in and out of the rifle. I got seventy in and out in one minute and won out of 250 men. Mr. Park gave me five shillings for doing it."

GOOD ATTRACTIONS FOR NEXT SEASON

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, proprietors of the Grand Opera House, have received word from their booking agents that some excellent shows have been booked for Peterborough for the coming season. Among them might be noted Col. Henry Savage, Big Production "Every Woman," Twin Beds, Hobson's Choice, A Pair of Silk Stockings, When Dreams Come True, and the Bohemian Girl. Theatre goers will be pleased to see such a good list of shows already booked.

COMPLAINTS SHOULD BE MADE DIRECT

The Property committee's report to the Council last night included the following:

We recommend that the Sanitary Inspector confer with the garbage collector regarding the time he collects on the various routes, and that the Inspector notify the people of the hours of collection, and that the people be informed that complaints should be made direct to the Inspector. 'Phone 933.

METAL PRODUCTS CO. GETS A NEW SIDING

Will Switch From Belleville Line into East End of the Property —Company Has 249 Men On Payroll

SIDING TO FACILITATE SHIPPING OF SHELLS

Permission for a siding across Perry street from the Belleville line of the G.T.R. into the property of the Peterborough and Metal Products Co. was granted by the Council last night, on the understanding that it remain only for the duration of the war. It will cross Perry street close to the Belleville line and extend along the east side of the main buiding to the office, providing room for two cars.

Mr. Jones, representing the company, stated that this was a necessary facility for the company, because the siding on the west side of their property was considerably obstructed by oil cars unloading at the Imperial Oil Company's plant. An alternative was considered from the Lake street side to the Port Hope line, but was not feasible. Mr. Jones stated, and the Company was hard pressed to handle their shipping under the exlating conditions.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, the first reading of the by-law to grant the Company's request.

Ald. Duncan moved an amendment seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the request be refused.

"It's a shame," commented Ald. Duncan, "that Perry street be cut up with another railway. There are already three lines crossing the street within 400 feet.

Mayor Duffus said he would object to the siding were it not for the fact that it was not a permanent one, and its present use was to celeritate the shipping of shells. He considered it a shame to oppose the company's request.

"I don't care whether you're ashamed of it or not," retorted Ald. Duncan, flaring up; "they can't get in from the other side. I say it's a shame to cut up Perry street with another track."

Mayor Duffus replied in a mollifying one: "I respect your opinion, but under the circumstances I think we should grant them the permission they ask".

Ald. Stratton—"And they agree to remove it at the end of the war."

Ald. Duncan—"The Kinnear Company wanted to cross George Street until we absolutely refused them. Then they found a way in from the rear.

The Peter Hamilton Co. got the privilege of putting their moulding shop on Water street and were never asked to take it off.

The amendment was defeated. Ald. Duncan called for the vote on it, as follows:

Nays—Ald. Edgar, Dobbin, Weir, and Evans.

Ald. Stratton was down stairs at the time and Ald. Langford refused to vote until he heard the by-law read in the second reading.

240 MEN ON PAY-ROLL.

Ald. Edgar stated that the Company had agreed to employ 50 men and had on their pay-roll at the present time 249 men who aggregated $3,300 a week. The Company, he said, should get every support the city could give.

Cautious William Langford, with his microscopic eye, peering for jokers, loopholes and "niggers in the wood-pile," presented the question whether a Company having once received permission to lay a siding could not be made remove it. He was assured that every precaution was provided for any and every eventuality of that kind by the company's agreement.

PTE. J. SANDBACH, Peterborough member of the 39th Battalion, who has just reached Canada, having been invalided home.

CRAZED NEGRO KILLS SIX PEOPLE AND WOUNDS THREE

Barricades Himself in House and With Help of His Wife Holds Chicago Police at Bay for Hours Despite Rifle Volleys and Dynamite Attacks.

IS FINALLY SHOT

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, July 18.— Holding off practically all of Chicago's police force, withstanding dynamite attacks and rifle volleys from all sides, Harry McIntyre, a negro, was finally fatally wounded to-day after killing six persons and seriously wounding three others. Crazed by the heat, the negro first opened fire on a white woman neighbour, killing her as she carried her baby out of her home. One policeman and other persons who sought to quiet him were met with further shots and killed. Then the negro and his wife barricaded themselves in their home. Police reserves were summoned. They fired in volleys and hurled dynamite into the house, riddling the home, but for hours the negro and his wife, armed with several rifles and pistols, held the hundreds of attackers at bay. After the police had besieged McIntyre in his home for hours, Detective Sergeant Ed. Hughes walked into the front door while the negro was firing through the windows. He took no chances with McIntyre but shot him at once and McIntyre died later at the hospital.

Haying is well under way in Peterborough County. More than half the crop has been placed under cover and another week of fine weather should see the finish.

THE HIGH COST OF CUT PRICES.

An eyeglass from an incomplete stock, and fitted by an incompetent adjuster, is expensive even at $1.00. For glasses that will not only look good on you but will give the greatest satisfaction in wear and price, see Dr. Lacey, at the Peterboro Optical Parlors, 410 George Street.

When a baking dish gets burned in using it should not be scraped; simply put a little water and ashes in it and the burned surface will come off easily without injuring the dish.

TWO HUGHESISMS.

Sir Sam Hughes was in his best vein in his speech at Lindsay on Saturday, which means that some of his remarks were as extravagant as the Militia Department has shown itself. The doughty Minister of Militia calmly told his audience that 4,800 men from the counties of Victoria and Haliburton had donned the uniform of the Canadian expeditionary force and he added that when the Huns made their recent terrible attempt to reach Calais that it was the boys from those counties that had repelled them. As regards the last statement, surely there is no one in Canada who does not know that the men who bore the brunt of the attack in the third battle of Ypres were the gallant lads of the Mounted Rifle Battalions. That there was no recruiting in the Lindsay district for the Mounted Rifles is also a well known fact. Peterborough knows to her sorrow what troops held the line near Sanctuary Wood on June 2nd last. With exactly 101 Peterborough men on the casualty list since the first of June this city has every reason to know that her sons were in the front line trenches on that occasion. Then why should the Minister of Militia make such a foundationless statement as he is credited with in his Saturday speech? Will Sir Sam, or will the Lindsay papers, in his behalf, tell us how many casualties among Lindsay soldiers there have been recorded since June 1st? A correct answer to this query would be clear proof that when the Minister of Militia said that the Huns had been stopped by the boys from the counties of Victoria and Haliburton he either did not care what he said or he did not know what he was talking about.

The other statement in regard to the 4,800 citizens of Victoria and Haliburton who have enlisted for overseas is even more ridiculous. Similar statements have been made by the Minister before, and surely he does not think that he can make the public swallow such figures. Everybody in this district knows that the Lindsay district has not been called on for artillery and mounted units. Everybody knows that recruiting in that section has been confined almost entirely to infantry. Nearly everybody knows that recruits were brought into Lindsay from outside points, chiefly from Toronto where, in the spring of 1915, a recruiting office was opened.

But even calling every recruit taken on in the two counties a resident whether he came from Toronto, the North Shore or anywhere else, The Examiner respectfully begs to submit that the Minister of Militia or nobody else, can produce figur s that will total up anywhere near 4,800 or half that number. The facts are well known. For the first contingent the 45th Regiment of Lindsay was called upon to recruit a single company of infantry, as were the other regiments in the district, which was done in all cases. The same procedure was followed in the case of the second contingent, making a total for the 2nd and 21st Battalion of under 300 men from Victoria and Haliburton. When recruiting began for the 39th Battalion some clever individual decided it would be a fine thing for Lindsay to have a contingent of soldiers quartered there. To raise them in Lindsay would have taken too long. However, there were hundreds of men in Toronto anxious to join, and at that time the Toronto battalions could not accommodate them. Why not a recruiting office in Toronto for the Lindsay contingent? The plan was put into operation and soon a stream of Toronto men was heading for Lindsay. Some 700 were collected and these men went to the 39th Battalion and to the 58th which was organized at Barriefield soon after. Afterwards a few Lindsay men went to the 77th at Ottawa, and this brings this history down to the 109th Battalion. During the winter 1,000 men were got together in the counties and outside for the Lindsay unit. Call them all residents of Victoria and Haliburton, add all the figures up, and see how far the total is away from the 4,800 Sir Sam Hughes talked so glibly about. Perhaps the Lindsay Warder will come to the rescue of the Minister and give to the world a detailed statement of the recruiting in the Lindsay district!

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Up at Camp Borden they are planning to dam up a river to make a swimming pool for the troops. Capt. McClellan should be able to show how he won his "high-water" nickname when this interesting engineering feat is being performed.

Some of the London soldiers complain because they had to parade before Sam Hughes. How would they like to be in the German army and come out of the Somme fighting just in time to hear the Kaiser make speeches.

THE PROPER PEOPLE?

To whom does Sir Sam refer to as "the proper people?" Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr Lemieux and other Liberals have done their share of the work. If by the "proper people" Sir Sam means Premier Borden and his Nationalist Ministers, we admit that the young men of Quebec have been neglected by them. Premier Borden has yet to make his first recruiting speech in that Province. There are men in the Dominion Cabinet who have bitterly opposed Canada taking any share in Britain's wars. Some have wanted to shoot holes in the British flag. Yet the Premier made them Ministers of the Crown.—Hamilton Times.

GERMAN DISMAY.

The truth can no longer be concealed from the people of Berlin and other large German cities, though in smaller places and in the country the masses may still be kept in ignorance. Since the beginning of the British drive, the German civilian population have been fed on tales of small successes at Verdun; but neither have the newspapers been allowed to tell what is occuring in Picardy nor are military critics such as Major Moraht writing with their usual freedom. Apparently there is a conspiracy of silence regarding the most ominous cloud Germany has experienced since the beginning of the present war.

But some inklinz of the truth is leaking through, and we are told the populace of Berlin are in a condition of mingled amazement and dismay. In the region overswept by the British the second line of defence was considered impregnable. Now that the third line has been reached, and General Haig's forces are pushing the foe back as far as four mils beyond the original trenches, it is only too well realized what must follow. As one correspondent says, in quoting a neutral traveller who has just reached Amsterdam from Berlin, "the British effort is a spiritual equivalent to an invasion of Germany."—Hamilton Spectator.

THE ROSS RIFLE.

So conflicting has been the evidence of experts and military men as to the merits or demerits of the Ross rifle that it has been difficult for laymen to decide whether the Laurier government was wise in establishing the factory for the manufactur of that arm and whether Sir Sam Hughes was justified in equipping the Canadian troops in this war with that weapon. Sir Sam Hughes, it must be remembered, although in opposition, approved of the original action of the Laurier government.

There have been many of us who, while not inclined to criticize owing to lack of expert knowledge, have felt that it must at least be an inconvenient thing to have the Canadian troops armed with weapons different to the rest of the British armies of which they form a part. To these and to the kith and kin of our fighting men who have been disturbed by recent controversies, the announcement to-day that hereafter the Quebec factory is to make an improved Lee-Enfield and that the Canadian troops are to have the same kind of rifles as their brothers in the trenches, will be welcome.

In the earlier discussions of the question, suggestions of demands by private monopoly crept in to confuse the issue. Apparently these have been cleared up, or else they have been conceded because of the situation created by the war. — Ottawa Free Press.

MARSEILLES IS BRILLIANT IN WAR TIME

MARSEILLES, July 17.—At first this semes a different world from that of Paris. The streets are full. At least, the Cannelbiere—known to sailors of every port from the Phoenician days—is filled with a chattering crowd. There are no purring fliers overhead. Windows are lighted all night long in defiance of the Zeppelins that have never come this way. The cafes are brilliant up to the closing hour and so jammed with men and women that it is hard to find a seat. Every shop is open for business and each seems to be getting it. Prosperity seems rampant. In spite of the varied uniforms that turn the street scene into a kaleidoscope war seems very far away.

"Thank Heaven," said my companion, devoutly, "for light and colour and movement. I had not realized before how very dull we are in Paris. Let us forget the war."

We hailed a little open face cab and told the cabby to drive to the Hotel Splendide. The Splendide is that hostelery which has installed bathtubs and a plate washing device, and is almost indecently proud of them. For centuries people have gone away from Marseilles talking bitterly about its hotels. The driver did not cluck to his horse. Instead he regarded us combrely.

"Two francs," said he. "It is the war."

Argument failed to make him abate his price. Horse food, he said, was very dear. So that in the end he drove away with an empty cab and we turned into the bar which in normal times is the drinking resort of fashionable Marseilles. At the score or more of oak tables British officers were sitting. My companion was an Englishman. Therefore he ordered English ale.

"There is none," said the waiter. "For weeks we have had none. C'es la guerre."

Four months ago at this very table, my companion sat with an American lady and seven British officers. The fact moved him to reminiscence. He is not a voluble man. What he has to say is said in the fewest words possible.

"I saw her last week in Paris," said he. "She spoke of our last meeting. Five of the seven good chaps are dead in Flanders."

ALL RACES THERE.

On the Cannebiere the tailor shops advertise that they make a specialty of British uniforms. They might well broaden their offer. As we sat at a table on the payment before the Café Riche the variety of uniforms passing impressed themselves on us. Two tables away sat a Serbian, wearing the cross of Karageorgevitch. Two tall Sikhs, their beards trained back over their ears, stopped to speak to a third. Little Annamese soldiers, who are principally employed in the munition factories, wandered by in clumps. Turcomer and Senelgalese and Gurkhas and French and Belgian soldiers passed ceaselessly. A Highlander, very drunk, pipe in mouth, wabbled gravely past.

"Have a thistle, Scotty," said an inflamed red gentleman from Pittsburgh, who sat at the next table. The Highlander regarded him for a time.

"Ye dirrty Irish," said he sourly. Two English soldiers became good Samaritans and led him around the corner just in time to escape the military police, who were sweeping the streets for soldiers. They had made fair haul. A dozen or more fine, straight lads of Canada and Australia were in their hands. Not drunk, these chaps. It was only that the two ends of the earth had met, and in the meeting had forgotten the rules. They were on their way to punishment for being out of bounds after 10 o'clock of the night.

We wanted bouillabaisse. Bouillabaisse is a fish soup which Marseilles claims as its own, and the praises of which have been sung by innumerable writers who have been made victims of its sounding name. Its excellence depends upon the things which are put in it to disguise the taste of fish. There is no more true bouillabaisse in Marseilles. The lobster is lacking.

"So many fishermen have gone to the war."

One used to find at the door of every continental hotel a gorgeous individual dressed principally in gold lace and who called himself a porter. His principal function is to extort more francs from timid strangers after the strangers have already overtipped every one else in the hotel. A small grey-haired individual, rather modest in gold lace, stood at the door of our hotel. The inflamed man from Pittsburg welcomed the vision with a cheer.

IN DISGUISE.

"At last I can find out how to get to my train," said he. "Porters know everything," but the man in gold lace deprecated his personal ignorance.

"I am a stranger in Marseilles," said he.

The man from Pittsburgh began a remonstrance, and then thought better of it. There was something about the porter that distinguished him from other porters. By and by the Pittsburgh man came back more luridly inflamed than ever.

"That guy," said he, "is a British admiral.

The table waiters limped or were one-eyed, or were too young for service. The hotel boots were too old. My chambermaid was discovered in tears. Her husband, she said, had just been wounded at Verdun—"but pardon! How could I serve monsieur?" The trams went by jammed to the doors. Marseilles has the cheapest tramway service in France, all things considered. The cars were operated by women. My companion had been moodily watching the passing crowd.

"Not 10 per cent. of the men were out of uniform," said he. But he was wrong. Fully one-third were in civilian attire. Of course, if one excepted the graybeards and the cripples and the youths, not one man in ten on the streets of Marseilles had escaped service. One-legged men, one-armed men, one-eyed men, were everywhere. Many of them wore the military cross, bestowed for valor. A little dump car line was engaged in carrying concrete to one of the harbor works. The cars were operated by boys 15 years old, or perhaps 14. Old men stirred the concrete and dumped the cars.

There are few finer views in the world than one gets from the corner table of La Reserve restaurant on the Corniche. In other days one must order a table in advance and then make peace with the waiter. The corner table was not occupied when we came. Half way down the balcony—the only portion of the restaurant in use—sat a French officer with a girl—he was going to the war. An old man and two old women sat at one table, eating gloomily. At the fourth table, a mother and father beamed upon a boy who has just come back. One arm was in a sling. There was no one else in La Reserve. Down the long, white road one sees from a window a squad of men tramping heavily, military fashion, hands swinging in rhythm.

"There are the happiest men in Marseilles," said the local resident.

They were German prisoners of war on their way to work.

A Place of Leanness.—A short time ago a group of factory hands went into a waxwork show. The showman was explaining the different waxworks, and when he came to the last one he said, "This one, gentlemen, is George IV., Emperor of India, one of the greatest monarch since the time of William the Conqueror." "I see', mestur," interposed one o. the lads, "I thought that George IV. was a very stout chap." "Very likely he was," said the showman. "But if tha'd been here as long as he has without any grub tha'd have shrunk a bit thisel'."

OSLER FINDS NERVES CHIEF WAR PROBLEM

Typhoid is Virtually Conquered Through the Lessons Learned in Other Great Conflicts

STRAIN TELLING ON THE MEN

LONDON, July 15.—Sir William Osler, Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford, formerly of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, recently gave an insight into the potent effect of medical science as applied to the war.

Sir William laid stress on these two outstanding points:

That typhoid fever, which in nearly every great war had been an enemy as formidable as the bullet, has in this war been so combated as to be a negligible factor.

That the opposing armies, because of the terrific nature of fighting with heavy artillery, find themselves confronted with a grave problem in the breakdown of soldiers from shattered nerves.

That typhoid fever has been conquered as an insidious enemy which in former great wars sapped the strength of the opposing forces is due, Sir William said, to a perfect system of vigilance among them devoting their time to the medical phase of the war, not alone in the use of preventive serum against infection, but in applying every precaution that goes to keep the camps and trenches clear of germ life.

As to the treatment of neurasthenic cases developing from incessant strain under the noise and havoc of neverending combat, Sir William said the leading scientists of England, France and Germany are devoting themselves attentively to finding the most accurate methods of effecting cures that may be permanent.

In England to-day, as in France and Germany, huge hospitals in the most advantageous environment have been established — scores of them — where soldiers are put under expert handling in the effort to restore shocked nerves. Already effective results have been obtained in England and France. But, says Sir William, many men must emerge from the war unable to take up their former places in the fight for existence because their nerves are gone, and it is with the problem of what to do with them that all the warring nations will have to deal when the conflict is ended.

Dr. Osler, since the beginning of the war, has been at the forefront of the work undertaken by medical science in England. He not only conducts laboratory work at Oxford, but every day makes a tour of visit to three or more of the hospitals where the "nerve" cases are treated, personally supervising hundreds of patients himself. With Dr. Osler in this activity are Sir James McKenzie of Oxford, Sir Clifford Allbutt, Regius Professor of Medicine at Cambridge, and Dr. Morley Fletcher, another prominent British scientist.

TYPHOID STAMPED OUT.

"Typhoid fever, a deadly foe in every great war before this," said Sir William, "scarcely exists among the soldiers of to-day. In former modern wars it was above all other diseases the most fatal. Over and over again it killed thousands of soldiers before they ever reached the firing line, while the deaths at the front were appalling.

"In the Spanish-American war the American troops had a terrible experience with it. In six months from June to November, 20,738 officers and men out of 107,073, or practically one-fifth the entire number, had typhoid fever, and 1,580 died.

"In the Boer war there were 57,684 cases of typhoid fever, of which 19,454 were invalided, and 8,022 died. More soldiers were lost from the bacilli of typhoid than from the bullets of the Boers.

"This terrible record ought to impress one with the importance of the fight that has been made against enteric or typhoid fever in this war.

"It is hardly fair to say, though, that it has been alone in this war that medical science has been able to combat the deadliness of typhoid. In the Russo-Japanese war the medical men grappled with the problem so that the mortality was greatly reduced beyond what it was in former wars. It was demonstrated in that war that definite results could be obtained by a system of adequate sanitation and by other means at the disposal of those who took up the work. It was really in the Russo-Japanese war that strides began to be made looking to the ultimate conquering of the typhus enemy."

Three distinct phases must be considered, said Sir William, in the fight against typhoid in the modern army:

The work accomplished in the Russo-Japanese war.

Work in the American army as a result of their experience in the Spanish-American war.

Innoculation of troops in the present war before they are sent into the field.

"It may be said that as a result of the achievements in sanitation in the Japanese war, besides the experiments in inoculation of troops in that war, and also of American soldiers after the experience of the Spanish-American war," said Dr. Osler, "that the great war of to-day started with a workable basis that enabled us to achieve immediate results in our work. We knew the foe we had to deal with and we started early in the war to eliminate him as a fighting force. It has been gratifying to say that we have accomplished so much.

"But it requires constant work to protect enormous armies from the ravages of typhus and our campaign has been sleepless.

A CLOSE WATCH NECESSARY.

"The ease with which the typhoid germ may be spread through a camp is one thing that necessitates constant watch. A soldier on active service may take typhoid with him or he may contract it in the country. In a large body of men there will always be a cretain pertage of "carriers" who may act as a focus of distribution. For instance it would not be impossible for a cook having typhoid to contaminate the food of an entire company.

"How typhoid may spread is shawn not alone in the alarming number of cases I have spoken of in the American army at the time of the Spanish-American war but during the great American civil war. The official figures of the Northern Army were 79,455 cases and 29,336 deaths, an appalling record. Again, in the Franco-Prussian war there were 8,000 deaths in the German ranks from typhoid, 60 per cent. of the entire mortality. Unless strict vigilance were observed in the present war it may be assumed that the percentage of mortality would be stupendous.

"It is not in the British training camps in England that the danger of typhoid lies but in the field. In the Spanish-American war it was not possible to pitch a tent in a place free from likelihood of typhoid. In England it is not possible to pitch a camp in an infected district. When we consider then the slight number of cases in Belgium and France we must regard it in the light of experience gained in the typhoid campaign in the last ten years. The opposing forces have reaped the full benefit of hard work of the scientists.

"The method of guarding against the typhoid contagion is broadly speaking, to keep a supervision over the health of the whole army, but this comes down actually to a supervision over the individual fighter. It is to be regretted in view of the effective results of innoculation against typhoid fever that innoculation in the British army is not made compulsory. Now the soldier has his choice about it with the result that, realising the danger of infection he usually submits to innoculation, but not always. So there is always an element of chance for the typhoid germ to propagate and spread. In our laboratories to-day we are able by simple blood tests to determine if a man is susceptible to typhoid. If we find that he is we can at once give the treatment that his special case demands. If this were made compulsory with each soldier the last remote chance of any danger to the army from typhoid would disappear.

"The remarkable record in the British Army in France and England of only 40 cases of typhoid in the last year has been reported by Surgeon-General Keogh. This includes the Canadian and other British troops.

The French army, too, is maintaining a splendid record in putting down the typhoid foe under the supervision of Dr. Vincent, the Paris scientist, the number of cases in the ranks being very small. From the reports of German scientists I gather that the Germans have been equally successful in keeping typhoid down. All along the western front it appears that health conditions, so far as typhoid goes, are good.

"Along the eastern front, the work has not been so effective. Typhoid has developed badly also cholera and dysentery. They apparently do not apply the same methods of fighting disease as we do in our own armies. The Russian army has had some difficulty with typhoid. In Austro-Hungary there has been in the last five months 412 cases of cholera in the army with 166 deaths. In Turkey and Asia conditions have been worse than anywhere else throughout the war, many cases of typhoid, cholera and dysentery attacking the native units.

"When the experience of this war is considered in relation to the eastern and western armies it becomes clear that typhoid fever, if scientifically fought, may be regarded no longer as a menace. It is no longer the deadly, first rank remedy."

TREATMENT OF NERVE CASES.

Turning to the tragedy, as he called it, of nerve attacks of soldiers in the present war, Sir William said that it was something that assumed "a great problem for the nations at conflict." Sir William is personally devoting himself to the hospital maintained by Mrs. William Waldorf Astor at Cliveden and at the Singer home at Paignton, both of which are ideal. In these many hundreds of soldiers' broken in health have been, since the war began, gradually brought back to the control of shattered nerve power. Many have been sent from the hospital completely restored; others are still under treatment for what to the scientists, is one of the most difficult things that medical science has to combat.

"In this war it is likely that many of us are a bit 'jumpy,'" said Sir William. "Nerve is a special trait of the Briton, who has always shown a rugged capacity to 'hold on.' But in this war we are undergoing a change of gear. Unthought of levels of energy are being tapped to meet the strain put upon us.

"The soldiers in the field are undergoing a strain such as was never experienced in any other world war, at least upon such a gigantic scale; they are under the din of shell fire, the crash of shell day and night. It is but natural that strong willed men who never knew what 'nerves' were before, should give way. A limit sometime has to be reached in man's endurance. It is not alone the British soldier who is affected by the terrible uproar of the battlefield, the dreadful scenes of the battlefield, but the men of all the armies.

"Dr. Oppenheimer, a German scientist, writes in German medical publications of the breakdown of German troops from shattered nerves. It is but a natural consequence of modern day warfare.

"I don't mean to say that the British army or the allies are breaking down at any alarming rate from the wear and tear of the war. That is not so. But I am thinking of the cases of the many hundreds of men we get in our hospitals and what the future holds for them. By careful painstaking treatment we are able to bring a man out of a condition of pitiful neurasthenia and put him so that he is able to master his nerve forces once again.

"But when the war is over we will have to consider that many of these men are no longer as rugged as they once were, and for them some adjustment must be made in the scheme of lifework. What are we to do? How is the British nation to handle it? How are all the warring nations to meet it? That is a giant problem to come when the war is done."

CAPTURED PAPERS SHOW FOE'S STRAITS

HAVOC WROUGHT IN BRITISH OFFENSIVE REVEALED BY DOCUMENTS.

LONDON, July 18. — An official statement says in part:

"The following captured documents are of interest as showing the very heavy casualties which the enemy has suffered in recent fighting:

"From a company of the Sixteenth Bavarian Infantry Regiment to the Third Battalion, Sixteenth Bavarian Infantry: 'Severe enemy artillery fire all calibres up to 28 centimetre on company sector. Company strength, one officer, 12 men. Beg urgently speedy relief for company. What remains of company so exhausted that in case of attack by the enemy the few totally exhausted men cannot fight on.'

"From another company of the same regiment to the Third Battalion, Sixteenth Bavarian Infantry Regiment: "Very heavy and intense enemy fire on company sector. Completely lost its fighting value. Men left so exhausted they can no longer be employed in fighting if heavy artillery fire continues. Company will soon be entirely exterminted. Relief for company urgently required.'

"From the Second Battalion to the Third Battalion, Sixteenth Bavarian Infantry Regiment: 'Battalion has just received orders from Lieut.-Col. Kumme that it is placed under orders of the Third Battalion, Sixteenth Bavarian Regiment, as a section of the reserves. Battalion consists at present time of three officers, two non-commissioned officers and 19 men.'"

Two Minds with a Different Thought—A benevolent old lady looked out of her parlor window one day and saw a man walking up and down the pavement, apparently in great dejection. There was something pathetic and appealing in his manner, so she took a sovereign, put it in an envelope, and wrote on the envelope, "Never say die." She slipped out of the house in the most casual manner she could assume and handed the envelope to the man as she passed him. Next day the same melancholy man called at her residence and presented her with ten sovereigns. "It's funny," he said; "you're the only one that backed the horse called 'Never Say Die.'"

ROMANCE OF A POOR CIGARETTEMAKER.

As some cigarette smokers may know the best Turkish tobacco is grown in what was formerly European Turkey, in that country, Southern Macedonia, where the Bulgars and the French and the Serbians are now tramping the fields in blood-soaked mire. Up among the rocks of the mountains that separate southern Albania from the Monastir district there is soil in which tobacco grows so fragrant that was never exported at all until recently, but was consumed entirely by the Turks of high rank, including the Sultan himself. Such tobacco would bring as high as $25 a pound—five Turkish lbs.

It is a peculair fact that it was through the late King Edward of England that Turkish tobacco became famous over the rest of the world. Fifty-five years ago a poor Armenian, who made a scanty living in London by selling cigarettes, received a visit from a stranger who had heard of his cigarettes from a club friend. They had a cha and the stranger as he was about to leave congratulated the Armenian on the excellent quality of his tobacco, and enquired why he did not open a store. The Armenian replied that he had not the necessary capital.

"Oh, that doesn't matter," replied the stranger, cheerfully: "here is my card. Go and take a shop." And then he walked out. The poor cigarette maker smiled and shook his head; until he happened to glance at the card. He understood then that his visitor had been the Prince of Wales.

With the Prince's card he had no difficulty in raising the necessary capital, for a big trade was assurred him, and until the day of his death King Edward remained one of his best customers.

The poor Armenian's trade grew idly and he sold his Turkish cigarettes to most of the crowned heads of Europe.—Exchange.

A GOOD 'LISTER.

The other day some men were watching the boatmen on the canal struggling with one of their boats, which seemed to be nearly under water. One young fellow started chaffing the boatmen by asking them if it was a submarine. An old boatman replied "It's a better boat than you are a man, anyway." "How do you make that out," inquired the man. "Can't yer see it's 'listing!" was the stinging reply.

The Orator Got a Ripe Response. It was a thrilling moment. The t orator's voice was getting horase, b his ardour remained undiminished, a he was hanaguing about the Goverⁿment's neglect of the war necessities "Gentlemen," he shouted, with m politness than diplomacy, "the fac titude of the Gover-nent is hintolle able." Their promises remind me the teacher "oo was tryin' to show boys wot faith was. "If I told yer says 'e, 'as I had a shillin' in m pocket, and you couldn't see it, bu believed me, that 'ud be faith.' Bu gents, wot we wants is facts, not pr mises. Give me somethink rea somethink I kin grasp, something—" "Right-o, matey!" yeledl a voice fro the crowd. "There's one!" And an el erly egg hurtled through the ai struck the orator's left optic, and d corated him in an instant.

When Appetite Fails And Health Declines Follow This Suggestion

REQUIRES ONLY A COUPLE OF SMALL TABLETS AFTER MEALS TO FIX YOU UP AGAIN.

A New Blood-Food Called Ferrozone Sure to Restore You Quickly.

"About three years ago," says Mr Meehan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run-down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. I not only cured me of Dyspepsia and Biliousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim.

Thousands use Ferrozone—they all feel better; try it yourself — sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CHOLERA INFANTUM
Cured By Using
DR. FOWLER'S
Extract of Wild Strawberry

Cholera infantum is one of the most common, and at the same time one of the most dangerous summer complaints of infants, and many children have died who could have been saved had the proper remedy been used on the first sign of the trouble.

Cholera Infantum begins with a profuse diarrhoea; the stomach becomes irritated, vomiting and purging set in and the child rapidly loses flesh, and becomes weak, prostrated and lanquid.

Mrs. B. A. Cirwell, Rosaway, N.S., writes: "I can recommend most highly Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. A friend of mine whose little daughter was ill with cholera infantum was given up by the doctors. The little one's mother asked me to come in and see the child. I told her I had a bottle of 'Dr. Fowler's' and asked her if she would try it. When the bottle was half used the child was well. This cure was a miraculous one for I thought the child was dying at the time."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past seventy years. Any one who has ever used it will not accept a substitute. See that you don't. When you ask for "Dr. Fowler's" be sure that you get it.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's also very cheap and beats anything else to pieces. You can get this at any drugstore and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

1916 FARM LABOURERS' EXCURSIONS VIA CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

According to present indications, the demand for farm labourers in the West this year will greatly exceed the supply. The Canadian Pacific are perfecting arrangements for these excursions, the first of which will be run early in August. Date will be announced later. Repair Work Will Cost More

Shoe Repair Men of the City Announce an Increase in Price

Shoe repair men of the city have announced an increase in the price of repair work to take effect at once. This is due to the increase in the cost of leather, which will also effect the retail trade. A new scale of prices for different lines of repair work has been prepared and signed by all the repair men of the city.

Store Will Close As Usual Thursday Noon

With the coming of the Circus to Peterborough on Thursday, July 20th, some of the stores were hesitating as to whether the regular Thursday afternoon closing would be observed as usual. Enquiry, however, discloses the fact that the stores will close at noon, and shoppers are asked to bear this in mind.

WIFE BEATER GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE

His Wife Pleaded for Him in the Police Court this Morning.

For not driving his horse as close to the curb as possible, and thus breaking the traffic regulations, a local driver was fined five dollars. The accused admitted being warned by an officer, but had disregarded it, and hence his appearance in the court.

A short, stocky, dark individual, who claimed to hail from Montreal, appeared on a charge of stealing a ride on a C.P.R. train and was remanded one week for sentence. The prisoner admitted having been a patient in the Beauport Asylum, Montreal, but claimed he had "come away." His appearance and actions verified his statement so well that Chief Thompson suggested his being held for one week in order to learn something of his past pedigree.

A local citizen, a shoemaker by trade, answered to a charge of drunkenness. Being well known to the local police as a heavy imbiber, His Worship decided to throw around his weak person the kindly protection of the law and placed him on the roll of blacklister, where drinks cost ten dollars apiece and are attended by heavy risks to all concerned.

The young man who was remanded from yesterday on a charge of assaulting his wife, appeared this morning and his sentence was suspended. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the young man and Mr. D. O'Connell for the complainant decided upon an amicable settlement for the young couple. Mr. O'Connell's appeal to the bench for suspension of sentence, which was backed up by the consent of Mr. Kerr and of the tearful young wife, was all that saved the youthful wife-beater from receiving a severe sentence and drawing upon him the traditional vengeance of the law upon men who do not treat women properly.

CARL POTTER'S GOOD WORK

The many friends of Carl Potter, son of the Rev. J. G. Potter of Montreal, and formerly of this city, will be pleased, to learn of his recent success in the Medical Matriculation examination into McGill University. For the past two years he has been under the care of a specialist in Osteopathy, who expects to finish his intricate work next month by the insertion of a bone graft where the bone cyst developed. During the time of the major operation he was compelled to lose the work of the High school, but during the past winter he took up the matriculation work with great persistence, with the encouraging result mentioned.

DEATH OF JOHN FORSYTHE BERLIN

Well Known Shirt Manufacturer Died Suddenly on Sunday Morning

WAS MARRIED HERE

Berlin, July 17.—Another of Berlin's most prominent manufacturers and highly-esteemed citizens passed away suddenly Sunday morning in the person of John Forsyth, president of the Forsyth-Kimmel Button company. Mr. Forsyth had been in apparently good health, having made a trip to Toronto on Thursday. He remarked on his return Friday that he had enjoyed his trip very well and was feeling in excellent health. Saturday he was taken with an attack of neuritis and was ordered to bed by his physician. Sunday morning, however, Mr. Forsyth arose for breakfast but retired again shortly afterwards. He expired within a few minutes after going to his room. Mr. Forsyth had a wide circle of business acquaintances and close friends who will be shocked and grieved to hear of his sudden demise.

The deceased was born in Preston on February 9th, 1850. He was married in 1883 in Peterborough to Miss Elizabeth Brooks who predeceased him fifteen months ago At the time of his marriage Mr. Forsyth was manager of the general retail store at Bright, owned by Cameron and Co. Later Mr. Forsyth went to Grand Rapids, Mich., where for a few years he was engaged in a commercial capacity.

The deceased had been a resident of Berlin for the past 31 years. He was a well-known commercial traveller, being one of the first to sell buttons out of Berlin. He founded the firm of John Forsyth & Co., shirt manufacturers, 13 years ago, establishing in the Staebler Block.

Mr. Forsyth was ever active in church affairs being a member of Trinity Methodist Church. He also took a deep interest in civic affairs though he never took an active part in public life. He was particularly fond of botany being expert in various branches of the science. He was a member of several fraternal organizations as well as commercial travellers Societies.

The deceased is survived by one son, Claude Forsyth of this city. One brother and two sisters also survive. They are Brunell Forsyth of Lakeview, Montana; Mrs. Cowan of Threeforks, Montana, and Mrs. Chas. Huber of Berlin.

The funeral will be held from the residence at 2.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

TWENTY PEOPLE LOST LIVES IN A TERRIBLE STORM

Special to The Examiner:

RALEIGH, N.C., July 18.—An appalling toll of damage and loss of life was taken by a storm which swept North Carolina was revealed by every despatch reaching here this afternoon.

Twenty persons are known to have perished.

Girl Forced to Live on $7,479 a Year, Though Insisting She Needs $18,500

New York, July 18.—Miss Lorena Carroll, 16 years old, of No. 57 West Seventy-fifth street, must continue to exist on a paltry allowance of $7,479 a year. How she is going to do it is a problem, because the young lady in a lengthy petition to Surrogate Robert Ludlow Fowler, averred and affirmed that she could not possibly live in a manner befitting her station on a cent less than $18,500 a year.

Surrogate Fowler, however, is of the opinion that $18,500 is too much for Miss Carroll, and he accordingly refuses to be disturbed by her plea that she can't live on $7,479.

Miss Carroll is the daughter of the late Joseph D. Carroll, who died on Nov. 23, 1912, leaving an estate worth $1,100,000. She is the beneficiary under two trust funds, aggregating some $150,000, created by her father's will, and is also to receive the residuary estate, valued at $500,000, when she becomes of age. At the present time she is receiving the income from the trusts which amounts to $7,479.

According to the schedule of expenditures filed by Miss Carroll, the following are the necessary expenditures which she must incur in a year:

Rent, $2,500; household expenses, telephones, flowers, gratuities, $2,500; wearing apparel and toilet articles, $3,000; education, including private tuition in French and music, $2,000; automobiles, chauffeurs, etc., $3,500; travelling, vacations, socials, parties, luncheons, theatres and spending money, $4,000, and physicians, opticians, dentist and medicines, $1,000.

Miss Carroll's mother in a supplementary affidavit, says that she cannot possibly provide for her daughter's needs, inasmuch as she only receives the income from a trust fund of $100,000. This income, Mrs. Carroll says, is barely sufficient to pay her rent.

In spite of these pleas, however, Surrogate Fowler is unmoved. So Miss Carroll must continue to live on $7,479 a year. In view of her affidavit how is she going to do it?

CLEAN UP SALE

We announce an Automatic Price Reduction Sale of

WOMEN'S DRESSES

The price of every Dress in the store will be reduced $1.00 each day until sold

FIRST, let us explain the plan of this automatic reduction sale. The dresses are now marked at prices which are in many cases considerably less than what the dresses have been selling at during the entire season. Each day we shall reduce the price of the dresses one dollar. For instance, dresses that are now marked $7.50 (though formerly marked at $10.00 and $12.50) will be sold on Wednesday morning for $5.50, on Thursday forenoon for $4.50, on Friday for $3.50, on Saturday for $2.50, and on Saturday night after 7.30 o'clock for $1.50.

Quite naturally it is to your advantage to purchase immediately, for there will be others waiting for prices to go lower, and the very dress you were planning to purchase will be sold. Don't wait until the price reaches the bottom, because there will be dozens of others who will make it a point to be on hand to buy the dress they want at the price listed for that day's selling.

No alterations, none sent on approval, or C. O. D.

The prices at which the dresses will go on sale, beginning To-morrow Morning, are as follows:

Dresses that have been selling heretofore at $10.00 and $12.50 are now marked:

Wednesday 5.50
Thursday 4.50
Friday 3.50
Saturday 2.50
Saturday Evening 1.50

Dresses that formerly sold at from $5.00 to $8.00 each are now marked:

Wednesday 3.50
Thursday 3.00
Friday 2.50
Saturday 2.00
Saturday Evening 1.50

A number of the dresses will be on display in our show windows, with price tags attached showing just what price will be each day.

C.G.E. WANTS OIL ON PARK STREET

Mr. E.G. Patterson Says Dust is Not Only a Discomfort to Employees But Injures Machinery— Other Council Business

MRS. FRICK CLAIMS DAMAGES

In the civic family the police force might be regarded as the protecting father; the Utilities Commission as the promising youngster who may help pay off the mortgage; the Board of Educaiton as the star boarder who takes all he can get and comes back for more; and the Council as the drudging mother whose work is never done and who never sees a pay envelope. And some might be unkind enough to add that everybody works but father.

And in the Council's invarying round of unending toil, last night's extra session was a sample of its labour in and out of season.

A letter from Mr. E. G. Patterson, general manager of the C.G.E. works, requested that Park street be oiled. To the discomfort the dust causes to the employees, he pointed out that it even gets into the fatcory, injurying valuable machinery.—Referred to the Board of Works.

City Treasurer Frank Adams asked the Council to date his leave of absence from May 1st to July 31st for the reason that during April he had attended to the issuing of paving debentures. He also mentioned that his sight was much improved and he hoped to resume his duties on August 1st.

Ald. Stratton stated that Mr. Adams' contention was correct and moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the request be granted.—Carried..

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, agent for the Chikren's Aid Society, reported the reception at the shelter of William Wordsworth Floyd and John E. Anderson, for whose maintenance the city would be charged $2.00 a week.

Improvement to Collegiate.

The Board of Education asked for $1,900 to cover improvements to the ventilation system at the Collegiate Institute and other repairs.—Finance committee.

The Board also reported they would require only $2,000 of the $15,000 previously provided by the Council for alterations to the South Central school.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the Board of Education be asked to provide particulars of the alterations they contemplate at this school.

Ald. Edgar—What's the use?

Ald. Stratton—We might recommend that they undertake more.

Ald. Edgar — From what I have learned $2,000 will not do much.

Ald. Duncan—They themselves said that $2,000 or $3,000 wouldn't begin to touch it.

Ald. Weir— Give them what they ask. I'd be willing to grant them $10,000, but they should know their own business.

Claims Damages.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry, representing Mrs. Adam Frick, Jackson Ave., stated that their client would present a claim for damages for injuries sustained on Ware street, on June 24th, when she fell over a section of abandoned sidewalk thrown to one side when a concrete walk was laid. Frick had two ribs broken and received internal injuries.

Funeral of Mr. Geo. Matthews

Public Service Was Held in The Baptist Church

The funeral of the late George Matthews took place at Lindsay on Sunday afternoon. At two o'clock a private service was held with the members of the family, at the home on Kent street, by Rev. Herbert Bryant. At three o'clock the remains were taken to the Baptist church, where a large gathering of relatives and friends had assembled.

The service was conducted by Rev. H. Bryant, pastor of Lindsay Baptist church, who was assisted by the pastor of Murray street church of this city.

The floral tributes from Lindsay, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and other places spoke of the esteem in which the deceased was held by those who had known him. The sons and sons-in-law were the pallbearers.

The helmet and sword worn by Mr. Matthews when in the year 1866 he went forth to the call of his country, lay upon the British flag which covered the communion table in the church.

All the members of the family were present with the exception of one daughter, Mrs. Wolverton, of Nelson, B.C., who is on her way to her mother's side, and Mr. W. Matthews, who is at present in England.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

City Needs a Motor Driven Chemical Engine

Matter Will Probably be Discussed at a Meeting to be Held This Evening—Fire Department is in Need of Several Horses

TRIP OF INSPECTION

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council will meet this evening. It is understood that one of the matters to be dealt with is the question of providing several new horses for the fire department or putting in a piece of motor driven apparatus. On Saturday last His Worship Mayor Duffus, Ald. Stratton and other members of the City Council also Fire Chief Howard, visited the Lindsay fire department, and inspected the new motor driven fire truck.

Chief Bell showed the visitors about the fire hall and they expressed themselves well pleased with the neat array of equipment and the manner in which the fire hall apparatus is looked after. He also gave them a test run on the fire truck, covering several streets and demonstrated the auto truck to the entire satisfaction of the Peterborough deputation.

HORSE DIED.

The committee will have to decide whether or not it would be better to invest in some more horseflesh, with a regular feed bill of forty cents a day, or buy a motor truck at sixteen or eighteen hundred dollars. The runs in this city are unusually long. Only last week the department lost a horse as the result of a long run on a hot day.

The concensus of opinion is that the city would do better to invest in a motor truck. The fire departments throughout the country are installing motor driven apparatus, and it is only a question of time until this city will have to follow suit.

Never boil dish towels with washing powders or soda in aluminum utensils. It will leave a blackened mark. Clean aluminum with paste prepared for it, or rub blackened or scorched surfaces with mineral wool.

PATRIOTIC ENTERTAINMENT AT VIAMEDE

On Thursday evening the 13th inst., a successful entertainment and flower sale was held in the Viamede pavilion, Stony Lake, in aid of the Secours National. The affair was undertaken by Mrs. Bunn of Cleveland, Ohio, whose efforts were heatrily seconded by the entire household.

Mrs. Oxley sent a generous contribution of exquisite roses, which were sold by Misses Constance Butcher, Katherine Currie, Terry Currie, Ralph Bunn, Frank and Alan Butchart and Jeffry Brock. Mr. George Butchart took charge of the door, and needless to say all these young people acquitted themselves in a highly commendable manner.

Everyone purchased flowers from the energetic young salespeople, and the audience presented a most attractive appearance, besprinkled as it was with the soft, velvety colouring of choice roses and other delicate flowers.

Dr. Bunn, of Cleveland, took charge of the programme, which was interspersed with dances to add variety and relieve formality.

The audience was favoured with several songs by Mr. W. G. Armstrong of Toronto, the celebrated Canadian vocal authority, whose beautiful baritone voice charmed his audience. Mr. Armstrong was accompanied on the piano by his talented wife.

Frank Butchart pleased everybody with his recitation, "The Patter of the Shingle," and Constance Butchart and Katherine Currie added their quota of song.

As a result of this very pleasant evening a cheque for $22 was sent to the Secours National in Toronto for the French Flag Day Fund.

GOOD WORK OF MISS M'CABE'S PUPILS

COLLECTION OF NIGHT SOIL RAISED TO 40c

Alderman Stratton strongly objected to the Council's advancing the price of night soil collection from fifteen cents to forty cents a month. His argument failed to move the rest of the Council and the by-law passed with all its new provisions. He quoted from the figures previously prepared by the late Sanitary Inspector Spence showing that fifteen cents was a sufficient price if the Council would properly enforce the old by-law.

Alderman Edgar, setting up a defence of the innovation, stated that Mr. Spence's report was rosy enough except that it did not work out in that manner. The city was "going in the hole" every night by the mere fact that a sufficient number of calls could not be made to even pay the contractor. Besides if the price were too low it would not encourage sewer connection.

Alderman Stratton moved that the price be reduced to 25 cents, but none of the aldermen supported it.

The new by-law is designed to compel the careless to observe it.

PRESIDENT AND CABINET OPEN WAR ON SHARKS

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 18. — President Wilson and the Cabinet today decided to give all possible federal aid to fight to drive away the ferocious sharks which have been making prey of bathers along the New Jersey coast. As a result William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, directed the United States coast guard to do whatever it can in assisting local authorities to remove the menace and prevent further loss of life.

Captain Ellsworth P. Bertholf, commandant of the coast guard, communicated immediately with the officers of the Fifth Life Saving District, comprising forty stations along the New Jersey coast. He learned that the situation was much improved and that steel nets were being constructed at at least three bathing beaches—Asbury Park, Spring Lake and Beach Haven. These nets, the officials say, are adequate to keep the sharks away.

Captain Bertholf learned also that bathers along the New Jersey coast have been advised not to go into deep water until the danger of sharks has been removed. Coast Guard officials expressed the opinion that there was no such general influx of sharks along the coast as has been feared by those who are on the scene. They think that possibly only three or four sharks have strayed into the locality from the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

Fisheries Bureau Puzzled.

William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, informed the President and the Cabinet that he had discussed with the Bureau of Fisheries the possibility of giving aid in driving the sharks away, but that no feasible scheme had been hit upon. He said the bureau stood ready to do anything practical to relieve the situation.

Representative Isaac Bacharach, of Atlantic City, N. J., conferred with the officials of the Bureau of Fisheries. On returning to the Capitol he introduced a resolution appropriating $5,000 for the purpose of having the bureau co-operate with State authorities in rounding up the sharks. Here is the text of the resolution:

"Section 1—By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that the Department of Commerce is authorized and directed to co-operate with the State authorities in connection with extermination of man-eating sharks now infesting the waters of the Atlantic Ocean along the coast of New Jersey.

RESOLUTION PROVIDES $5,000

"Sec. 2—That the sum of $5,000 or so much thereof as is necessary, is hereby appropriated from any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose authorized by this resolution."

"The officials of the Bureau of Fisheries have been giving careful consideration to measures for the prevention of fatalities from the attacks of sharks on bathers, such as have recently occurred on a limited section of the Atlantic coast, but reluctantly have been compelled to come to the conclusion that no certainly effective steps can be recommended.

The most reasonable and the most obvious suggestion is that an effort be made to catch the sharks, either by trolling from boats or by means of baited shark hooks, buoyed to within two or three feet of the surface and securely attached by stout lines to anchored buoys or barrels at intervals of four or five hundred yards outside of the life line. This would serve the double purpose of catching the predatory fish and of giving warning of their presence in a particular locality.

NO EXCLUSIVE "MAN EATERS"

"There are always a few sharks off the coast, particularly in summer, but the recent deplorable tragedies are entirely unprecedented in temperate waters, although the bureaus has had reliable reports of similar occurrences in the tropics. There are no 'maneaters' in the sense of implying exclusive or common addiction to a diet of human flesh. The sharks as a whole are promiscuous flesh eaters, living principally on live fish, but ready to eat any animal matter dead or alive. Under stress of hunger they become quite bold, and while it is impossible to make a positive statement to that effect, it is probable that a few individuals, temporarily deprived of their ordinary food, have been driven by stress of circumstances, to attack prey which ordinarily they would avoid.

Boy Blacksmiths of Japan Are Models

In Japan boys are apprenticed to learn a trade much younger than boys in our country are, says Northwestern Christian Advocate. Thousands are put in shops to learn to be blacksmiths, when an American boy would still be in school. A Japanese father has so many boys that he has to put them at some useful trade in order that they may bring in money to support the family. The boys have to work long hours; from 7 in the morning until 6 in the evening.

They are faithful workers, the busiest you could find anywhere in the world. Even when a visitor comes and stands in the door to watch one of them work he will not look up from his work. He has no thought of play as he is at work; but when his hours are over no boy likes to go out and have a little fun more than he.

Japanese blacksmith shops are open on the street so that the boy at his anvil sits within a few feet of the sidewalk. The shops are closed at night by putting boards in the front and barring them well. There are no doors with hinges. The hinge is unknown in Japan; what doors there are are made to slide back and forth.

There are many more blacksmith shops in Japan than in our country; there is one every few doors and in walking along the street you may hear the clang-clang of hammers.

The boy wears a black apron with pockets; this he takes off when ready to start home in the evening. He wears wooden shoes—flat boards with straps over them to keep the shoes from falling off. His stockings are called tabis and come only to his ankle. And always there is a separate compartment for the big toe. An American boy would have a hard time in keeping a pair of Japanese shoes on, yet a Japanese boy can put up a mighty good foot race with nothing to hold his wooden shoes on except his big toe.

Cannot Understand Why Walter Johnson Is Being Hit

Clarke Griffith Unable to Solve One of Season's Mysteries

One of the mysteries of the season to Clark Griffith is why Walter Johnson is being hit with such unusual frequency.

"I think Walter has as much stuff as he ever has had," said Grif the other day. "In fact, I believe he has more, for now his curve ball is more effective than it ever was.

"If there is any solution to the enigma I think it rests in the fact that the league is getting used to Johnson. For two years or more the batters were scared of their lives when facing the big fellow. But he has hit few men and his control is so good that the batters are beginning to feel they can stand flatfooted against him and at least take a solid smash at the ball. With his terrific speed the ball travels from the bat like lightning, even though it is hit with but a fair swing. Right field hitters invariably hit to left field and vice versa, against Johnson, showing that even those hits which are made are on the fluke order.

"Johnston is being hit more because the batters are facing him with greater courage. Players have been hit by Walter and still lived and the batter figures that what one man can do another can.

"That's the only explanation. Johnson is as good as he ever was. Some days I think he's even faster than he was as a kid. He's always in perfect shape and he is a willing worker.

"In an attempt to shut off the fluky hits I have shifted the outfield for Johnston different than for any other slabster in the game. Against left-hand hitters the left fielder plays on the foul line and the centre fielder directly behind shortstop, while the right fielder stands in his normal position. I figure that nine out of ten left-hand batters, if they are lucky enough to slam Johnson's fast ball, will hit it late and the drive will be to left field. A left-hander hitting the shower curve will drive it to right field. For that reason the right fielder plays in his normal position.

"The shift operates the other way around with right-hand hitters up. It has been successful in cutting down many drives, but still Johnson is being hit more than he ever has. Of course, the average batter would rather get a safe hit off Johnson than eat a seven-course dinner. That is an added equation Johnson has to work against. But it is the fact that the batters have schooled themselves to stand up to the plate with the big fellow working that has improved their record and hurt his."

Comiskey Was The First Man To Play Off Initial Bag

(By Malcolm MacLean)

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, was the man who changed the system of playing first base.

It is a generally well-known fact that Comiskey first covered first base the way they do to-day. He made a fielding position out of it, and, we are told, stood even further from the base than they do now.

Back in the early '80's Comiskey went with the old St. Louis Browns to play a series in Pittsburg. It was Comiskey's first trip there and the first time Honest John Kelly, the famous umpire of former days, had ever seen him.

Pittsburg went to bat and the Browns took the field. Bushong was catching and Silver King pitching for St. Louis. Bushong wondered why Kelly didn't go behind him to call balls and strikes. Looking around he saw Kelly standing several feet off line, watching Comiskey.

"Why don't you call time?" asked Bushong.

"Why, he's playing all right."

"Haven't you fellows any first baseman?" inquired Kelly, "and have you two right fielders? What's the idea of that?"

The catcher had to explain to the umpire that Comiskey had invented that way of covering the base before he'd let the game go on.

* * * * *

We are told that Comiskey, when manager of the Browns, insisted that his pitchers cover first while he himself went after grounders to the right or left of him. This was another of his inventions, which still is followed in modern baseball.

WAITING FOR KING TO COVER

One day, King was pitching and two were out. A ball was hit to Comiskey and he stood still with the ball in his hands, waiting for King to cover first. King evidently thought that Comiskey could run over and touch the base himself, for he sauntered towards the plate. The runner was safe and two men who were on base scored, beating the Browns.

That cost King a fine of $100. It showed how strict Comiskey was in having the players follow his system of play.

The old-time outfielders didn't play for certain batters the way they do to-day. In fact, the outfield switches for every man who comes to the play nowadays.

This meant the old-timers had to go fast when the ball was hit. Curt Welsh, one of Comiskey's great outfielders of the St. Louis Browns, was a star.

It is told, as an actual fact, that no fielder, past or present, could get and get them like Curt could. He watched the battery signs from where he stood and knew where each batter was liable to hit.

George Moreland says that he has seen Curt turn around as the pitcher got ready to throw, and sprint for a certain portion of the field at full speed. Then he would turn and catch a fly which other fielders couldn't even try for.

OFTEN HIT BY PITCHER

Moreland, a statistician of years' standing, is a first cousin of Curt's, and tells many stories about him. He says Curt was a wonder getting hit by a pitched ball. Old-timers were stars at this feature of the game more than they are to-day.

One winter Moreland had occasion to visit Curt at a porcelain works where the latter had a job. He found Welsh airing a set of pads. These pads Curt wore when playing ball, and could get hit on the shoulder or hip or chest without scarcely feeling the blow. Yet, just to make it good with the umpire, he often would fall and writhe as if in agony.

It was an old stunt but we doubt if anybody wears pads to-day for that purpose. In fact, umpires are more lenient to-day in letting hit men take their base. A fellow can have his uniform grazed and get to first, but they had to make strenuous efforts to dodge the ball before they could earn the decision some decades ago.

* * * * *

George Moreland was scouting for the Pittsburgh club in 1896 and heard of a chap in Richmond who got hit by the pitcher at least once a day. He looked him over, and recommended him to the Pirates. The (then) owner refused to take a player who couldn't get out of the way of a ball.

Tennis Court In East City

A new tennis court has been established in East City. It is located on the grounds adjoining the Separate School, and is conducted under the auspices of the Sodality of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The court which is open to the entire parish will accommodate twelve players at once. The grounds are in excellent shape.

Two of the 1912 O.A.C. Champion Half Back Line Killed in Action

Two of the best Rugby players ever turned out of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph were recently killed in action. One of them was Flight Lieut. Jack C. Simpson, who on July 1st attacked single handed a fleet of eight enemy air machines, fearlessly sailing into the midst of them. He was shot through the head and is buried behind the British lines in France. Simpson was a grand Rugby player, and captain of the Junior Intercollegiate Champion of 1912. He played centre half one of the outer halves was Hubert C. Herder, son of W. J. Herder, editor of the 'Evening Telegram,' St. John's, Newfoundland. He was a lieutenant in a Newfoundland regiment, and was killed in action a few months ago in the engagement in which the men of Newfoundland distinguished themselves.

Herder and Simpson were in practically all the offensive plays of the "Aggies" that fall of 1912, and were two splendid young men. The Ontario Agricultural College has given the best of its under-graduates and graduates for the Empire's protection.

NUMBER OF YOUNG MEN DECREASED.

PEMBROKE, July 17.— The town assessment roll, handed in this week, shows a decrease in the population of 400. That is largely due to the war, as fully that number have gone from here. The total assessment is $4,486,075, which, less exemptions, brings the actual assessment for taxation purposes $3,900,500

One Killed, Six Hurt As $500,000 Fire Sweeps New York State Arsenal

NEW YORK, July 18.—One man was killed and six firemen were overcome by smoke in a spectacular fire which started from an unknown cause in the New York State Arsenal at Thirty-fifth street and Seventh avenue. More than four hundred thousand rounds of ammunition were stored in the arsenal and for a time there was danger of an explosion, but it was prevented by unusually efficient work on the part of the firemen, who risked their lives as they worked to extinguish the flames. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

Three alarms were sounded within as many minutes after the fire was found, and there responded in quick succession Engines Companies Nos. 54, 34, 26, 21, 16, 2 and 1, together with Truck Companies Nos. 24, 12 and 4 and Patrol Company No. 3. The fire was blazing fiercely along the Thirty-fifth street side of the arsenal within a few minutes after it was found and the firemen were compelled to chop their way through the great iron fence guarding the building on that side and thereafter batter down the barred doors with heavy timbers, before they were enabled to get their hose into action.

There were many officers of the adjutant general's staff on duty in the arsenal at the time the fire started, including several women stenographers and porters. Lieutenant Colonel H. A. Bostock ad Colonel Oliver D. Bridgeman, with Major Wm. A. Nivser, had just completed their day's work and were preparing to leave the building when John Cummin, a caretaker, notified Colonel Bostwick that there was a strong smell of smoke on the first floor near the east end of the armory.

Investigation was at once made and Colonel Bostwick found that entrance to the storeroom on the first floor, where was quantities of ammunition, uniforms and camp equipment of various description were stored, had been shut off immense volumes of smoke. He directed that the valves controlling the flood pipes on this floor be turned on at once, and that was done without delay.

The fire, however, had gained such headway that the water had little effect. Flames were pouring out of the lower windows of the great building on the Thirty-fifth street front a few minutes past six o'clock when the first of three alarms was sounded. The men of Engine Company No. 16 were the first to respond to the alram.

Thrilling Rescues.

Entrance to the armory was prevented by the iron fence surrounding the structure, as well as by the great central doors leading to the store rooms on the Thirty-fifth street side. The iron gates were hacked apart with the aid of axes and the heavy door shattered by a battering ram handled by ten sturdy firemen. When the door fell inward, dense volumes of smoke poured out to balk the firemen, but within a few minutes four streams of water were playing upon the blazing interior.

Fire Marshall Thomas Brophy, on reaching the scene, gave orders for ladders to be raised on the buildings adjoining the armory in Seventh avenue, and within a few minutes a dozen firemen were fighting the fire from the top, while others were at work below. Among the firemen above was John P. McNamee, who made his way to the third floor. He was over come by smoke and a few minutes later was found by J. B. Corrigan, of Truck Company 4.

The rescue of McNamee was one of the thrilling incidents of the fire. Walter O'Leary, of Rescue Squad No. 1, was on a ladder reaching to the third story and when the unconscious fireman, who weighs more than two hundred pounds, was lifted out to him through the window by Corrigan he brought him down the ladder in safety amid the cheers of the spectators. McNamee was revived with the aid of a pulmotor.

Officers Forced to Leave.

Meanwhile, Andrew Moran, personal chauffeur of Colonel Bostwick, had attempted to extinguish the flames by throwing more than a score of buckets of water upon the fire, but despite the efforts of Colonel Bostwick and his staff, the fire gained such headway that it forced all out of the building. A few minutes later Colonel Bostwick was in consultation with Deputy Fire Commissioner Guy Scull, Chief Inspector Schmittberger and Inspector Jmes S. Bolan, of the Third Inspection District, and gave them information of value regarding the fire and its location.

Before the arrival of the fire engines, Moran, aided by Thomas McNally, manager to remove two great army trucks from the blazing area, and Moran says that after he returned into the building, he was unable to find McNally. The unconscious man was found fifteen minutes later lying near a pile of case goods, by Peter Klippel, of Patrol Company No. 3. He took McNally to the street, where pulmotors were employed in vain. As it was evident that McNally could not survive, the last rites of the Roman Catholic church were administered by the Rev. Father Loughlin, of the Church of the Holy Innocents, at No. 126 Thirty-seventh street.

Immense crowds had gathered in Seventh avenue and intersecting streets, and fire lines were established at Thirty-fourth and Thirty-sixth streets while mounted police held the crowd in check at Broadway to the east and midway between Seventh and Eighth avenues along Thirty-fifth street. Street car traffic along Seventh avenue was cut off when the firemen reached the scene and was not restored until half-past eight o'clock, greatly to the inconvenience of thousands of persons."

Charles Lentz, engineer of the armory building, helped to flood that section of the lower floor upon which the ammunition was stored. Immense volumes of water poured upon the ammunition in a steady stream. Col. Bostwick informed the firemen that there was no danger of an explosion even if the fire should reach the ammunition, but the firemen breathed easier nevertheless when danger from that source was at an end.

With the crowds watching every move the firemen worked valiantly to subdue the flames. Anthony King, the first fireman to be overcome, entered the building by the Seventh avenue entrance. He returned a moment later, appearing to be ill, but almost instantly returned into the building. Fifteen minutes later he was found lying on the floor of the second story facing Thirty-fifth street and carried out into the street, where he was revived with the aid of a pulmotor, and removed to the house of Engine Company No. 34, in an ambulance.

George Lantelme, of Engine Company No. 16, narrowly escaped death after he had entered the building through the large entrance in Thirty fifth street. He was found staggering along the floor half unconscious struggling for breath, and when taken to the street he fought fiercely in an endeavour to return to the blazing structure. Despite his protests he was carried to the ambulance by his comrades and removed to the New York Hospital.

Reserves Called Out.

When the second alarm was sounded, Inspector Schmittberger arrived and he at once ordered the reserves from the West Thirtieth street police station, as well as of the West Thirty-seventh street and those of the West Forty-seventh street, to turn out for duty. Later the reserves from the East Twenty-second street and the East Thirty-fifth street stations were summoned the immense crowds these policemen the imense crowds were thrown back and the operations of the firemen thereafter were unhampered. Tenants of adjoining buildings were warned to be prepared for any emergency and scores of them prepared to vacate the instant orders to the effect were given.

Efforts were made by the National Guardsmen who were on the scene to prevent the distruction of the records on the second floor, but few of these were saved. Six girl stenographers who were just preparing to leave when the alarm was sounded did excellent work, but the dense smoke prevented them from accomplishing much in the way of saving valuable records. Within fifteen minutes after the fire was found the entire structure appeared to be in flames. Smoke poured in volumes from the twenty-two windows on the Thirty-fifth street front and the ten windows on the Seventh avenue side.

It is estimated that five thousand rifles, together with fifteen carloads of equipment, were destroyed, in addition to thousands of condemned uniforms. In the building was a valuable collection of guns, sabres, bayonets, blunderbusses and antique armour gathered by the late Colonel Joseph G. Story, most of which was destroyed. As far as could be learned there was no insurance upon the property.

Officers of the State Guard, as well as fire officials, are at a loss to account for the origin of the fire. Colonel Bostwick states that there was nothing in the building that could have caused the fire by spontaneous combustion. That it might have been of incendiary origin was suggested, but this was scouted by the officials. The rules against smoking in the arsenal are stringent and as far as is known no one on the premises smoked. An investigation to ascertain the cause of the fire is now in progress. In this connection Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy said:

"There were from three hundred thousand to four hundred thousand rounds of .45 calibre rifle cartridges stored in the building. There were also about three hundred thousand rounds of shrapnel, fifty pounds of calcium carbide and one thousand 3-inch shells. The calcium was stored on the second floor. In addition there were about $35,000 worth of medical supplies stored in the arsenal. Until I have completed my investigations I am unable to say what was the origin of the fire. It may be that the fire was due to defective insulation of the wiring."

The arsenal was built in 1859 and has been a landmark in this section. It is three stories in heighth and has a frontage of 209 feet in Thirty-fifth street, and 175 feet in Seventh avenue. On the first floor there were stored trucks, ammunition, rifles and other National Guard equipment. The executive offices of Adjutant Genedal Stotesbury were on the second floor, while on the third floor were tent equipment and the living quarters of the custodian of the building and his assistants.

A few days ago several carloads of equipment, including 8,000 rifles and fifteen carloads of material, were taken from the building and sent to the Mexican border.

WEDDING BELLS

MEYERS—BENTLEY.

A very pretty wedding took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the George Street Methodist Church, when Mr. B. Homer Meyers, son of Mr. F. W. Meyers, was united in marriage to Miss Hilda Bentley, daughter of Mr. John Bentley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., in the presence of a number of the immediate friends of the couple. The bride was given away by her father, Mr. John Bentley. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for parts west.

BOLTON—BATES.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage, Lakefield, on July the 3rd, when Mrs. J. C. Bates, of Burleigh, became the bride of Mr. Wm. Bolton of that place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Barrett. The bride was becomingly attired in a navy blue silk poplin, with silk net and shadow lace trimming and wore a pretty toke hat with white plumes to match. Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Stone attended the bride and groom.

DOES HISTORY REPEAT.

One hundred years ago, 1816, has gone down in history as "the year without a summer" and has been frequently referred to when fearful ones have thought that the cold, wet seasons we sometimes have would bring about similar conditions. In that year there was frost and snow and ice in every month, and crops were almost a total failure. Prices of flour and all kinds of provisions rose to very high figures. In fact the summer of 1816 was noted as the coldest ever known throughout Europe and America.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK. July 18.—Motor stocks and Mexican Petroleum lost about half a point during the initial trading on the Stock Exchange today. The general list opened with irregular and narrow price changes. American tobacco gained a point, at 219.

The early afternoon market was stale and uninteresting. Willy's Overland lent the chief interest by dropping below 68, a loss of nearly 2 points.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Ont., July 18 — Live stock. The long spell of hot weather caused a further break in cattle prices. Receipts light, trade fair. Choice heavy steers, $8.25 to $8.50. Choice butcher steers, $8.15 to $8.40. Good heifers, $8 to $8.40. Hogs, off cars, $11.40 to $11.50. Others unchanged.

To prevent the finger from becoming pricked when hemming or embroidering put a small piece of surgeon's adhesive plaster over it. This plaster can easily be removed, and a roll may be kept in the work-basket for this purpose. This device is much more practical than the silver or gold finger-shields.

IT RAINED CATS AND DOGS.

NEW YORK, July 18.— Sixty-five cats and four dogs were delivered within an hour at the West Forty-seventh street police station last night as a result of an erroneous report that the police of that precinct were offering ten cents each for the animals. The trick played on the police last night is similar to the one "worked" in Brooklyn a few nights ago.

Lieutenant Frey and the other attendants at the station house were furious as cats began to be brought in from all directions. The disappointment of children at being unable to collect for the cats was nothing as compared with the indignation of the policemen.

All of the animals were placed in the main police room and there they remained for two hours until a special wagon from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals arrived and took them to the pound. The wails of children who had lost their pets could be heard for several blocks.

As the motorist turned a corner in a quiet country road he saw a brother of the wheel just ahead, evidently in trouble.

Immediately he slowed down.

"Want any help?" he asked genially.

The other motorist looked gratefully at him as he wiped the perspiration off his brow.

"I do," he whispered. "See that lady in the car? She's my wife, and I'd be much obliged if you'd answer her questions and keep her amused while I'm seeing to this burst tire."

Russians Win a Striking Victory on The East

Germans Driven Over The River Lipa in Wild Disorder---Russians Win a Signal Victory in Southern Volhynia--Austrians' Posts Pressed Back.

PRAISE FOR THE TROOPS

PETROGRAD, July 19.—A Russian victory over Teutonic forces in Southern Volhynia has resulted in their being driven across the River Lipa and beyond that stream, says a War Office statement. Indications are, the statement adds, that the retreat was effected in the greatest disorder.

In the Riga region efforts by the Germans to retake positions they had lost were unsuccessful.

The statement:

"In the Riga region there was an artillery duel. The Germans at many places attempted unsuccessfully to recapture lost trenches.

"As the result of the latest skilful operations of Gen. Sakaroff's troops in Volhynia, we gained a victory on July 16, which brought us 13,000 prisoners and 30 guns, as announced, and enabled us to sweep the enemy completely from the left bank of the Lower Lipa, driving him to Krassoff, and beyond the river. Judging by the abundance of war material the enemy abandoned, they retreated in great disorder. Some of the 17 guns captured were already bombarding enemy positions on the south bank of the Lipa.

"Caucasus front: The offensive on our right wing continued Monday. On the 17th, our brave mountain Cossacks had great success, courageously dislodging the enemy from powerfully organized positions. In some places not only did the Cossacks attain the snow line, but even crossed it.

"In the region of the town of Medjudag they captured two machine guns, a quantity of arms, and prisoners.

"In the region of Taurus we captured a complete Turkish company.

ADVANCE POSTS DRIVEN BACK.

VIENNA, July 19.—Austrian advance posts in the region of Zabie and Tatarow, south of Kolomea in the Carpathian region, have been pressed back by a Russian attack, says the War Office statement. The main Austrian positions, however, have been firmly held. In Volhynia, in the region southwest of Lutsk, Russian attacks failed.

PRAISE FOR THE TROOPS.

LONDON, July 19.—King George sent the following message to Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commanding the British troops on the Franco-Belgian front:

"The continued successful advance of my troops fills me with admiration and I send my best wishes to all ranks. The Emperor of Russia has asked me to convey his warm congratulations to the troops upon the great success they have achieved. (Signed) "GEORGE, R.I."

"The British armies in France offer most respectful and grateful thanks for this further mark of Your Majesty's precious appreciation of what they have achieved. They also respectfully beg that their grateful acknowledgements be conveyed to the Emperor of Russia for His Majesty's congratulations."

Germans Attempt To Recover The Positions Lost To The British

Several New Army Corps Thrown Against the British Positions---All Attacks Were Repulsed---Russians Force the Teutons to Retire---Strong Turkish Posts Seized ---Late War Despatches.

"ARISTOCRATIC BARN" TO HOUSE COWS OF RICH

PASADENA, Cal., July 18.—South Orange Grove avenue, home of the aristocrats, is to have an "aristocratic barn," in which will be housed four aristocratic cows, so exclusive that they will not even be allowed to scrape acquaintance with a fly. John S. Cravens, who owns one of the most pretentious residences in Pasadena, is about to erect the barn at a cost of $3,000 in the rear of his handsome dwelling. Near it will be an aristocratic pump house.

The walls of the barn are to be finished in buff-coloured glazed brick, and the blue-blooded bossies will stamp on floors of cork. A private playground or recreation centre, known in farm circles as a cow yard, will be provided as a place in which the milk-givers may take their daily exercise. It is understood that screens will surround the enclosure to keep out annoying insects.

Are You For "Preparedness"? The best preparedness for man or woman is the preparedness that comes from living in harmony with law. In Summer cut out the heavy foods that tax bodily strength and vigor. Eat Shredded Wheat Biscuit, the food that contains all the body-building material in the whole wheat grain in a digestible form. For breakfast or luncheon with berries or other fruits.

RECORD HAY CROP BEING HARVESTED ALL OVER DISTRICT

Weather Has Been Ideal for Getting Yield to Barns—Prices Likely Lower

Shortage of Labour Is Being Felt in Many Sections.

Over a week of hot weather has made it possible to harvest one of the biggest and best hay crops in this section of the country for years. Day after day of rain at the beginning of the season proved almost ruinous to grain crops, but it produced quick growth in both hay and pasturage.

So big has the crop of hay been that it is expected that the price will drop several dollars, although it is thought the demand will be quite equal to the supply and that there will be no surplus. Already the new hay is beginning to make its appearance on the local market, it being the chief offering for the past several days.

Shortage of Men.

Most of the farmers have the crop harvested, but it is expected that the season will last for a week or more. Shortage of labour is handicapping the farmers in some districts, but if favourable weather continues it will be possible to get the fields cleared. The fact that some one must be sent into the city with the hay for market is also reducing the supply of men.

So plentiful has the crop been in some parts that the barns are completely filled and no space has been left for grain. Whether this will cause trouble later on remains to be seen, although the grain crops generally are not large.

Hay Stacks May Return.

This scarcity of space may result in a return to the old-fashioned hay-stacks, so common in England and European countries. The climate here is not considered as favourable to this manner of storage, as it will rot quickly unless properly built into the stack. Properly built stacks are very tightly packed and made in a conical shape. At the bottom they slope in, so that with running off the stack will fall some distance from the base of the pile. The outside layer of hay is put on after the manner of a thatch, and acts as a protection against the weather.

MORE SHELL ORDERS.

Thirty-Five Millions in Orders To Be Distributed.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 18.—Official announcement was issued this morning by the Imperial Munitions Board that the board has received authority from the Imperial Minister of Munitions to place further orders for the manufacture of heavy shells in Canada for delivery during the early part of 1917. The shells to be ordered are mainly six-inch and 9-point 2-inch, and the new orders amount to approximately $35,000,000 in value.

Belgian Refugees Quit Holland in Large Numbers

From a million after the fall of Antwerp the number of Belgian refugees in Holland has declined to about 65,000, according to official information given to the Associated Press. The rest of the terro-stricken throngs which poured over the Dutch frontier have returned to their homes in Belgium, or gone to England, or France, and, to some extent, to America.

Numerous Belgians are still arriving over the border, driven out by the hard conditions of existence there, but this accession is apparently counterbalanced by the outflow from Holland in various directions. Of the 65,000 still enjoying Dutch hospitality 15,000 are now accommodated in the four refugee camps at Ede, Nunspeet, Gouda, and Uden, while the remainder are scattered among private families.

Apart from several million dollars provided by voluntary donations, the country's hospitality had up to the end of last year cost the Dutch government some $5,000,000, while a sum of $2,000,000 has been voted for the current year that will, unless peace arrives meantime, have to be raised to probably $8,000,000. The Belgian government's offer of reinforcement was generously declined.

Any needy Belgians are free to enter the refugee villages, if private families care to keep them, and there is no objection on the part of the local authorities, the Burgomaster is empowered to allow 14 cents a day per adult towards their maintenance and eight cents per child, while the silent sufferers belonging to the better classes, so-called "pauvres Honteux," of which there are something under 2,000, receive 28 cents a day per person through a special committee.

Excellent arrangements have been made in the matter of education. Under the direction of a Dutch-Belgian commission, as many as 46 primary schools have been established, with 4,500 scholars, in which instruction is given by certificated Belgian teachers. Secondary schools have also been set up at The Hague, Amsterdam, and Middleburg, while an "atheneum" established at Flushing numbers 125 pupils. There are, in addition, technical schools destined for both interned Belgian soldiers and refugees. Grants are made to these various institutions by the Dutch and Belgian governments.

The entire work of relief promises to be a lasting honour to Holland and its traditional hospitality.

We have during the past year placed a large number of our students in positions which have paid $400 to $600 per year as an initial salary.

What does this mean? Simply that in a few years they will be making per year. Our records show this to be the case in the past. How much salary will you draw three or five years hence—if untrained.

Think this over — write us — we'll tell you all about our courses.

Mr. Stephen Leacock

CANADA as a rule very quickly loses her successful authors to the United States—Bliss Carman, for instance, or Arthur Stringer, or C. G. D. Roberts—for the rewards of literature are greater there than here. But Stephen Leacock is still a Canadian citizen in spite of the international reputation he has gained by such publications as "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town," or the "Adventures of the Idle Rich," or "Moonbeams of the Larger Lunacy." Montreal is his winter home, for he holds the chair of Political Economy at McGill University, but in summer he never fails to come back to Orillia, the little town of Ontario which is proud to claim him as her son. In the preface to "Sunshine Sketches" Stephen Leacock gives a delightful account of his early life, which only a sense of humor enabled him to survive. There are, however, many incidents in his career which are not recorded in this preface. The turn of the tide in his fortunes is said to be due to the lucky accident that the C. P. R. found it necessary to acquire the right of way through some land he had bought for a song. Stephen Leacock has the reputation of being as good an exponent of economics as he is a writer of humorous stories, and his lectures attract many students to the great University at Montreal.

Fatigue from Poisoned Blood

Sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels leave impurities in the blood which render it poisonous. Poisoned blood is the cause of tired, languid feelings, as well as of headache, backache and bodily pains and aches.
By awakening the action of these filtering and excretory organs, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse the system, purify the blood and cure such ailments as indigestion, biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation. 25 cts.

MODEST LADY DRUMMOND

Leads In Many Useful Forms of War Work

One of Lady Drummond's striking traits is her essentially modest nature. She loves the work she undertakes sufficiently in itself, seeking no praise for what she accomplishes. One of her greatest efforts has been the establishment in London of the Maple Leaf Club whose hospitality has done so much for Canadian soldiers who do not know their way about the great city. Mr. Steel Maitland, who presided at a concert in London attended by the Anglo-Canadian community in full strength, told the audience that he has been besought by Lady Drummond on no account to mention her name. Lady Drummond also works among the Canadian prisoners of war in Germany.

The statue of Florence Nightingale, unveiled at London in 1915, is the first statue of a woman ever erected in that city, except the statues of Royalty.

Are The Four Fruits Used in Making "Fruit-a-tives"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is the only medicine in the world that is made from the juices of fresh ripe fruits. Thus, it is manifestly unfair to say, "I won't take Fruit-a-tives because I have tried other remedies and they did me no good". On the other hand, the fact that "Fruit-a-tives" is entirely different from any other preparation in the world, is just why you should give it a fair trial, in any trouble of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys or Skin. FAITHFUL TO TREATIES

The entry of Portugal into the war was welcome to all of the allies, and most of all to England. Germany indeed excuses her declaration of war against the Republic on the ground that its Government are "the vassals of England." No, the Portuguese have never been the vassals of England, but her Government, like all the wisest rulers of the land for more than 500 years, are England's faithful friends and allies. Both nations have found their account in a friendship which goes back before the Hohenzollern had set his foot in Brandenburg. The treaty of 1373, which first consecrated the political alliance between the two kingdoms, is still recognized by the signatories as extant and of binding obligation. The "amnities, alliances, unions, good confederacies and league of pure love" which it establishes have prevailed almost without interruption ever since. John of Gaunt, fought for Portugal in the Peninsula as well as Wellington, and neither we nor our Portuguese friends have thought of treating the pledges our fathers gave as "scraps of paper."—London Times.

ALL FOR THE EMPIRE

All Races Testify With Words and Deeds of Sacrifice

After commenting upon the expressions of loyalty from the great colonial statesman, Church Life says: And not only the great Dominions spoke. Lewanika, chief of the Barotse, made utterance: "We shall stand always to be under the British flag." And Griffith, chief of the Basuto, said: "I ask whether, as my King is engaged in fighting his enemies, I, his servant, will do well to keep aloof and watch him being attacked." Somali chiefs arrayed themselves "As one with the government against the Germans—ourselves, our warriors, our women, our children. By God, it is so." In little islands of the seas, scarcely known even by name to most of us, "the small children of the Empire as they called themselves, stood up to help the kingdom of King George."

The chief of the Mohawks in the Six Nations' Council Chamber, told how in ancient days a warrior of his people, if captured by an enemy, was offered the alternative—to remain with the women and children in ignominious safety, or to seek freedom by passing through the path of fire which his captors had prepared. He told how the braves of his people never hesitated, and called on their descendants to follow through the path of fire at the call of the King.

And the whole world—allies, enemies, neutrals—knows that it has not been a lip loyalty. From those great days of August, 1914, onward, there has been throughout the Empire "silence and the mustering of men," and men inspired by the "faith and fire within them" have marched forth in steady streams and have sailed across the seas. Ypres, St. Julien, Festubert, "Anzac," the South and East African campaigns—these names with many other, bear silent abiding testimony to the reality of love and Empire.

KAISER SAVED BRITAIN

Calculated That Empire Would Not Enter War In Time

Frank C. Parsons writes in John Bull as follows: We are sometimes told that it was the Junkers who made this war. Don't believe it. On the whole, the country gentry in Germany (though it is not saying much for them) were less bellicose than the commercial, the military, and the official classes. It was not the Junkers who went roaring for war along Unter den Linden or before the palaces of vassal kings and princelings. It was the German people, the rank and file of the populace, who most keenly understood and shared the Kaiser's aspirations for world empire.

Before the die was cast very few expected that patient, humanitarian, cosmopolitan-minded England would join in so speedily. "England will come in three months hence," said the Kaiser; "but it will then be too late. We can deal with England in her turn." When it was realized that England was coming in—and coming in immediately—it was too late to draw back. The rage of the Kaiser and of the German people (the rage of over-reachers who have over-reached themselves) baffles description; but that rage was combined with the grim belief that Germany was quite strong enough to carry out her original programme.

Nevertheless, a desperate attempt was made, at the instigation of the cautious, to buy off England at the last moment. The advance through Belgium could not be abandoned; but it was agreed that the Kaiser should make the extraordinary suggestion to England that she should "restrain" France while the German armies overran Poland. It was an attempt to sow discord between the Entente Powers; and it failed ignominiously.

The Kaiser sees all his long-cherished plans crumbling to pieces; and no one curses his dream of a short cut to world dominion more than he himself does. A Greater Germany, stretching from the Straits of Dover to Bagdad, is not going to be founded within the next six, the next sixty, or the next six hundred years. Nor is the "residuary legatee of the Holy Roman Empire" going to be the residuary legatee of the British Empire. And yet, if the Kaiser could have afforded to wait, it might have been. I say "might," because the risk to us and to Russia and France would have been tremendous, if the Kaiser had not been so anxious to outstrip death.

Warten Sie bis es losgeht (Wait till the storm bursts) used to be the German cant phrase or sneer for the benefit of English acquaintances. I have heard it hundreds of times, and regarded it as a sort of a joke. But the Germans have not an ounce of humane fun in their temperament. They were in murderous earnest. Thank God, they did not "warten" quite long enough! The Kaiser has saved the British Empire. The knowledge of it is gall and wormwood to him to-day. It will be gall and wormwood to him throughout eternity.

King's Heir and Urchin

The Prince of Wales, home on short leave from the front, was the hero of a startling incident in St. James' Street, London. An urchin who had been riding on the back of a taxi fell into the road, and if the Prince had not promptly dragged the boy out of the road a motorcyclist just behind must have finished him. It was a matter of a second's decision, and the Prince did the right thing. The heir to the throne gave the imp a shake after he had picked him up, and then when he began to howl gave him a coin.

FRENCH WAR MINISTER

Personal Bravery and Ability Won Promotion For Roques

Like Lord Kitchener, General Roques, appointed French Minister of War in succession to General Gallieni, is a brilliant soldier as well as a clever organizer and military administrater. An old comrade of General Joffre, he succeeded the latter as Director of Engineers at the War Office, and to this office he united that of Director-General of Military Aeronautics, of which he remained permanent inspector until 1912.

The new French Minister of War is one of the youngest generals in the French army, and was promoted in peace time to brigadier-general in his fiftieth year in 1906. The outbreak of war found him comander of the Twelfth Army Corps at Limoges, and, although he is not very well known to the general public, he has won the admiration of the soldiers of France for his deeds of personal bravery.

It was for "personal bravery and aptitude of command" that he received the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor in January, 1915, since when he has held command of the First army in the group of armies in the East of France. General Roques received his first commission in the Engineers when he was twenty-two. As lieutenant-colonel he spent seven years in Madagascar under the orders of General Gallieni, and was responsible for the construction of an important railway in that corner of the world.

Boracic should always be kept in the house in case of bad cuts or wounds. Put the powder in a wine bottle and fill up with hot water. Pour some into a small bowl and add sufficient water to make it the right heat. Wash the cuts or wounds in this.

When, through illness, a constant supply of hot flannels is required a good idea is to put a steamer over a saucepan of boiling water on the hot stove and lay the flannels in the steamer. In this way they can be changed easily and frequently, and are much hotter than if wrung out of hot water.

Hank Elwood's Conversion

By EDITH V. ROSS

Hank Elwood one evening stood at the door of his house looking out on his broad acres. There were the farm, well stocked, and crops just springing from the ground; there was the house, well furnished for one of its kind. But Hank was the only person in it.

Hank had always so far fought shy of women. He was not a student of feminine human nature, and he thought all single women did little else than set snares for unmarried men. But he felt lonely.

"I'd ought to have a woman," he said to himself. "But whar am I goin' to find one? Besides, women are a rantankerous lot, and I dunno but if I should git one I'd wish I hadn't."

But Hank was desperate. He went down to Mrs. Blakeley's, an excellent friend of his, and said to her:

"Moll, I want you to find me a wife. I'll tell you jist what kind of a gal I want. She must be"—

"Hank," interrupted his friend, "if I'm goin' to recommend a gal to you you'd better take her on my say so. You don't know anything about women."

"Don't I? I know enough to keep clear of one of the kind to slobber all over a man before she's married and after the knot's tied to jump on him and boss the whole job."

"Oh, you do, do you? Well, I'll tell you what I'll do: I'm expectin' a niece of mine from the east to visit me next week. You kin come in here as much as you like while she's here, and mebbe you can git her. She wants to git married powerful bad. But it's my opinion you'd better let me pick out a woman for you and go in blind on my recommend."

"Reckon I'll come in and see your niece. If nothin' comes of it mebbe I'll try your plan."

When the niece came she proved to be a strapping lass, with a pair of rosy cheeks, and she made a dead set for Hank. Her voice was a low contralto, sometimes with the tone of a man's. She was rather awkward, and her hair was short, which she explained by stating that she had had a fever and it had all come out.

"What do you think of her?" asked Mrs. Blakeley.

"I think she'd make a good farmer's wife," replied Hank. "She isn't one of the kind to sit round and look purty. Them hands of hers are specially fitted for milkin', and washin' dishes wouldn't spoil 'em."

"How about her disposition?"

"I hain't had time yet to make no observations as to that, but she seems to be good natured enough. What do you think of her?"

"I? I thought you was to decide the matter for yourself, you know so much about women. What use would it be for me to tell you she wasn't the kind of a woman you want? Would you pay any attention to me?"

Hank admitted that he had confidence in himself in knowing what he liked and what he didn't like, but if there was any defect in the girl he saw no reason why he should not be informed of it.

"There's nothin' the matter with her, so far as I know," was the noncommittal reply. But Hank did not consider it noncommittal. He made up to Lizzie, as her aunt called her, and did a bit of courting, but he found her coy and not disposed to permit him to be familiar.

"She's the gal for me," said Hank to the aunt one day. "I tried to kiss her, and she wouldn't let me do it. There's safety in that kind of a gal. After a man's married to her he don't always feel unsartin about her every time a good lookin' man comes round."

"That's all bosh," said his friend.

Hank, finding that Lizzie would not permit cooing, assumed that he must first make his intentions known. He was in a hurry to get some one into his home and was much pleased with her. One evening he called at Mrs. Blakeley's. The aunt was washing dishes and the niece was wiping them. On Hank's arrival Lizzie threw down her dishcloth, took off her kitchen apron and joined the visitor on the porch. Mrs. Blakeley went on with her work. Lizzie had been with Hank a few minutes when her aunt heard her break out into a guffaw.

"Aunt Molly," she cried, "what dy'e think? Mr. Elwood wants me to marry him."

The woman went outside. Lizzie had lifted her skirts above her knees, showing a pair of trousers under them, and was responding to the proposal by a clog dance.

"Reckon you don't know so much about women, Hank, as you think you do. Lizzie is a boy."

Hank stood looking on this exhibition for a few minutes appalled. Then turning on his heel he went back to his farm.

It was weeks before he came to see his friend Moll Blakeley again; then he said to her:

"I give in, Moll. I don't know nothin' about women. I'm powerful lonesome at the farm. Get me a wife."

"I don't need to git you one. There's Sallie Perkins, the best woman I know, has been wantin' you for a couple o' years."

"How do you know that?"

"No matter how I know it. If you want a mighty good wife go for her."

Hank took his friend's advice and has been very happy ever since.

A LUMBER AN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

EMPIRE MORE THAN MAP

All of Its Members Have Shown Eternal Loyalty

"The people of Canada do not realize the greatness of the British Empire, and do not appreciate what a tremendous factor for good it has been in the world," said Rev. Canon Alexander W. McNab, speaking before the United Empire Loyalists' Club. Holding in his hand the watch of a Canadian officer who fell in the Battle of Waterloo, he said: "The man who carried this was a man who left Toronto and went overseas to join the Imperial forces. He was the first Canadian to fight overseas in the Empire's cause, and one of the first Canadians to appreciate Imperialism." General Ryerson, in proposing a toast to the British Empire, said that the Empire is something more than a mere map. All of its members have shown their eternal loyalty to the idea of one great and indivisible empire, and their determination to carry this great war to a triumphant end.

CANADA'S MILITIA IS IN NEED OF RECRUITS

Reasons Why Constant Drain to Europe Should be Made up in Home Forces

Capt. A. E. Middleton Hope writes in The Tatler as follows: Practically the whole of the 245,000 officers and men actually serving or having served in the Canadian Militia at the outbreak of the war enlisted for service overseas. Of the total of 245,000 more than 220,000 are now in France or on the way there. This fact is of the first significance. It proves that the men who had some training were the first to offer their services in the Cause of Right. To these men, citizenship meant service.

We have arrived at a point in Canada where the Militia is practically denuded of militarily fit men, and new enlistments are few, notwithstanding the fact that ample well-trained officers and N.C.O.'s are available for instructional purposes in every unit. These instructors, in the main, are debarred from overseas service for various reasons. The fact that new men are not joining the Militia is having its influence on recruiting for overseas. It is becoming increasingly more expensive and difficult to complete the establishment of overseas units, and yet only 85% of the available fit men have so far been recruited.

Strong Reserves Needed

One of the essential principles upon which the military strength of Canada must rely is this: that for every 1,000 men on the firing line and lines of communication in France, we must have 2,000 men as first reserve in England, and 2,000 men in reserve in Canada. The reserve in Canada need not be men enlisted for overseas, but it must be composed of men possessing some military experience. Canada cannot be out of danger from invasion at any time during peace or war, though so long as the present war lasts, the danger is immediate.

The trained military reserve in Canada is a warning to our enemies that we are ready, or only partially so, according to our numbers. Consequently, it is very necessary that the ranks of the Militia be kept up to strength in order that the overseas units be sent over to Europe instead of being maintained in Canada. Every available man, though unable to go overseas, who carelessly neglects to serve in the Militia, is responsible for the keeping in Canada of a man who is able and willing to go overseas.

Compulsion ?

If this neglect continues, it might be necessary in the immediate future to pass an Order-in-Council making it compulsory for every available man to join the Militia. In this event, the members of the Militia now serving, being trained, would become officers and non-commissioned officers of the new units that would have to be formed. It is hard to understand why men fail to appreciate the physical mental and social advantages to be obtained from military training for the simple giving up of say, one night a week. No man who has had the training could deny the benefits derived from it.

May Use Breastplates

So successful in reducing mortality have been the new French steel helmets that it is now proposed to equip troops in the trenches with steel breastplates. Holding up one of the casques at a meeting of the Academy of Medicine, at Paris, Dr. Roussy pointed to a longitudinal rent in its side and said it represented the work of a German bullet fired at a 200-yard range. "But for this helmet," exclaimed the professor, "the wearer would have been killed outright. As it was, the soldier sustained but a slight superficial contusion of the scalp."

School Teachers "Do Bit"

Eleven thousand four hundred British men teachers are serving with the forces and about 9,000 have attested under the Derby system. In addition there are 147 serving with the naval forces and 236 women acting as nurses. Teachers have already gained five Victoria Crosses, while 232 have been killed, 118 wounded and nine are missing.

A Hero of the Cloth

The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Lahore, who was mentioned in the Kut despatches, has shared all the burdens of the ordinary soldier, lived on the same food, and in the great fight at Kut-el-Amara was in the line all the time, risking his life constantly in carrying away the wounded.

RED INDIAN SNIPER

Silent Brave With Canadians is Grand Sharpshooter

A Canadian artilleryman told the following to the Canadian Gazette: "There is in one Canadian battalion a full-blooded Indian who is a marvel with his rifle. He has a telescopic sight, and he is employed as a sharpshooter. He goes about as he likes. He talks very little to anyone—a most silent man. He wanders about the trench, and waits his chance to pick off a German. On one occasion there was a German sniper who had given our men a lot of trouble. Officers with their glasses had tried in vain to locate the mischievous sniper. The Indian came along, and presently he was seen to fire at a big tree, and down fell the sniper. The Indian had seen with his naked eyes what officers with glasses had failed to see. He told me that he put a little nick on the stock of his rifle every time he was sure that he had killed a German. There were 33 nicks on the stock then, and he said that he had two more to add. For some reason or other this Indian never fires twice at the same man. If he misses his mark he does not fire again, but lets the man alone."

GRAND COMPLEXION IMPROVER BETTER THAN COSMETICS

When it's so easy to bring back the bloom of youth to faded cheeks, when skin disfigurements can be removed, isn't it foolish to plaster on cosmetics?

Go to the root of the trouble—remove the cause, correct the condition that keeps you from looking as you ought. Use Dr. Hamilton's Pills and very soon you'll have a complexion to be proud of. How much happier you'll feel — pimples gone, cheeks rosy again, eyes bright, spirits good, joyous health again returned. Never a failure with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; get a 25c box to-day.

King's Busy Life

Since he recovered from his accident at the front, King George has thrown himself wholeheartedly into the affairs of the nation. The average person has little idea of what the labors of King George entail. Only at meals and sleeping times has His Majesty respite from the cares and anxieties of State, and frequently even these periods have been cut down to a minimum. His Majesty personally attends to despatches and other documents from the various various Government Departments, and every Wednesday and Saturday there is an investiture. Of audiences, receptions of Ministers, and the like there is a heavy daily list.

Lord Lovat's Corps

"Lord Lovat's well-deserved promotion to the rank of brigadier-general has been expected for some time past," says an English military expert. "Lovat's and Tullibardine's corps are in fine fighting trim, and contain the pick of Scotland's manhood of all classes of society. Besides being colonel of his two regiments of scouts, Lord Lovat is honorary colonel of the Fourth (Territorial) Battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, and a military member of the Inverness Territorial Forces Association."

WOMEN AND ENLISTMENT

Miss Hurlbatt, principal of Royal Victoria College, Montreal, argues the need for a war register of women needed to help the Empire. She says: "Now there are women who will be diffident about asking men to enlist, so long as they feel that women themselves have not realized that their lives, too, must be dedicated to the task of defeating the enemy. Hence, if there is recruiting to be done, many women will prefer to exert their influence upon their fellow women to ask them to make their offer of service and even to be willing to take training before they dare tell a man what is his duty. It is easy to shift the burden of responsibility. And if war conditions, as they are seen in Europe, teach us anything, it is that no country can afford to let any of its people fall in the test of profitable living, either in expenditure, or the form of occupation. The formula usually considered adequate 'Can I afford it?' has been superseded by another, 'Can my country afford it?'"

SCALLOPED EGGPLANT

Pare and slice one large eggplant, boil until tender, but do not let it cook to pieces. Butter a baking dish and fill with layers of cracker crumbs and slices of the eggplant, with bits of butter and pepper and salt to nearly the top of the dish, having the top covered with cracker crumbs and bits of butter and pepper and salt to nearly the top of the dish, having the top covered with cracker crumbs and bits of butter. Over this pour the water which remains from boiling the eggplant, together with one cup of milk, and bake in very quick oven. This is delicious to serve with chicken.

MOUNT CAVELL IS NAMED IN HONOUR OF the NOBLEST TYPE of BRITISH WOMANHOOD

Miss Edith Cavell. Died for her country Oct 12th 1915.

As one travels Westward from Edmonton on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the mountains increase in number and size until finally they swell into the gigantic Rockies, whose snow-capped peaks sparkle in the brilliant sunshine. Rising one above the other in grand array these giants of the Rockies appear to form an impenetrable barrier over which further progress is impossible. But out from among the mountains flow the hurrying waters of the Athabaska, and here, along the valley of this river is found a way provided by nature. This is the Yellowhead Pass whose scenery has never failed to impress those who have had the good fortune to gaze upon it.

The engineers of the Grand Trunk Pacific Line took the steel along the South bank of the Athabaska and between the two Eastern sentinels of the Pass—Boule Roche Mountain and Roche a Perdrix. The Athabaska river, which extends in places to the breadth of a lake, is followed by the G. T. P. until Jasper is reached, this being the central point in the famous Jasper Park, the 4,400 square mile reserve set aside by the Dominion Government, owing to its natural loveliness, as a playground for the people for all time.

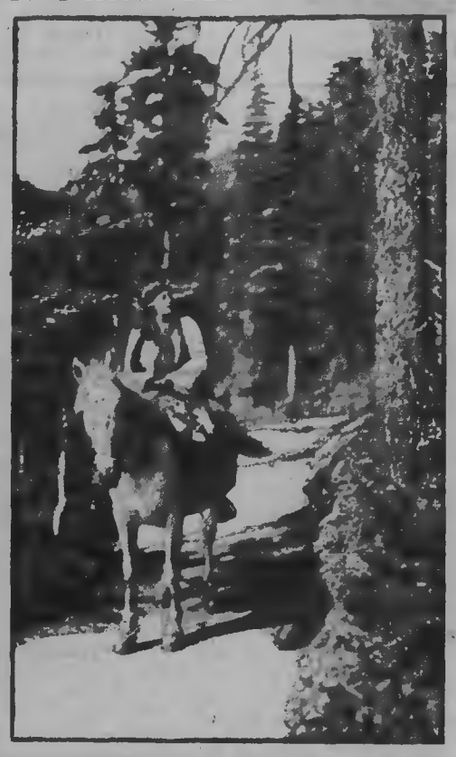
At Jasper the Athabaska River swings away Southward from the Yellowhead Pass and a magnificent view is had looking along the valley towards the point where it makes a junction with the turbulent Whirlpool River. Splendid mountains rise up on either side and one peak in particular attracts the eye by its great height and beautiful symmetry. This fine, hitherto unnamed peak will now, it has been determined, bear the name of Mount Cavell, in honor of the martyr nurse who died for her country, October 12th, 1915. Official action to this effect was taken at a meeting of the Geographic Board of Canada, which is the governing body in all matters relating to place names, held in Ottawa, on March 7th, 1916, and an announcement to this effect is to be issued by Dr. E. Deville, Surveyor-General—thus disposing of the claims put forward in behalf of other peaks for the honor of bearing Miss Edith Cavell's name. Passengers on the Grand Trunk Pacific can see this mountain which is 11,200 feet high, from Jasper Station, and it is also in view from the grade for a distance of more than fifteen miles West of this point. Mount Cavell can also be reached from Jasper Station by an excellent trail, and it will, no doubt, be visited by thousands of travellers in the future. General approval will be expressed at the decision of the Geographic Board. It was first suggested that the famous Mount Robson should be re-christened Mount Cavell, but Canada's highest peak, which is also on the Grand Trunk Pacific, just West of the boundary line between Alberta and British Columbia, is already known by its present name the world over and any change in this regard would have led to confusion.

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

IF Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," "a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

Mrs. Julia Henshaw



IT is not often that a woman is elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, but the explorations made in the Canadian Rockies in search of wild flowers by Mrs. Julia Henshaw deserved exceptional recognition. Her book "Wild Flowers of the North American Mountains," with its beautifully colored plates should become a classic, with the further advantage of being a popular classic owing to the method of arrangement. The flowers are grouped by colors, one section being devoted to White, Green and Brown flowers, another Pink and Red flowers, a third Blue to Purple flowers, and a fourth Yellow to Orange. Mrs. Henshaw, in addition to her botanical studies is one of the leading spirits in the Daughters of the Empire, and was sent last December by Sir Sam Hughes as a Captain in the Canadian Army on a special mission to England and France connected with the distribution of Christmas gifts to the troops at the Front. Our illustration shows the authoress in her mountain costume with her favorite pony at Lake Louise in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

DUSSELDORF GETS BUTTER.

Plenty at Times Reaches the German City From Holland.

Residents of Dusseldorf, Germany, are more fortunate in the matter of obtaining supplies of butter than those of most of the other cities of the empire according to a writer for the Berliner Tageblatt, who, in the course of an article describing life in war time in Dusseldorf, observes that the proximity of Holland is a matter of special importance, and says that since the outbreak of war there is a special organization of that town which deals with the Dutch trade and publishes a monthly magazine.

The statistics which it published in April indicated for example, that between January, 1915, and February 1916, the exports of German sugar h fallen from more than 5,000 tons to two tons, and the imports of from Holland from 22,000 tons to tons. But, the writer remarks, "the figures refer only to legitimate trad end, as quoted in The London Times proceeds.

"That brings us to the subject of Dutch butter. At the time of my visit to Dusseldorf one could buy it in countless shops in unlimited quantities, and without possessing a fats ticket, providing one belonged to the rhich man and was not frightened by the price—80 to 95 cents."

The writer remarks that, while the people of Dusseldorf frankly described this butter as smuggled, the officials fradulent dealings in food are still

"In any case, let anybody who wants to eat butter to his heart's desire make an excursion to Dusseldorf, provided that he has the necessary small change. But let him make haste, for such abundance of butter is to be found, even in Dusseldorf, only at certain times, and then it suddenly dries up again."

The article also points out that fradulent delings in food re still very very lightly punished.

After cooking a new laid egg it very often gets cold through standing. When this occurs put the egg into a cup or small basin and pour some hot (not boiling) water over the egg. You will then find the egg as nice as when freshly boiled.

An Efficiency Force.—The visitor was being shown about by the head of the up-to-date business house. "Who is that dapper youth at the glass topped desk?" he asked. "That is the superintendent of the card index system. He keeps an index showing where the index cases are." "Who is the young man with the grey gaiters, and the efficient ears?" "He keeps an index showing the length of time it takes to index the indexes." "Who is the girl with the golden hair?" "She decides under what index an index to the index of the filing cabinets shall be placed." "And who is that grey-haired man at the disordered desk in the corner?" "Oh, that's old Joggs. He doesn't fit in very well with the rest of the office, but I have to keep him around. He is the only employee who can find important papers when I am in a hurry."

RULES OF HEALTH FOR DYSPEPTICS

DIETING UNNECESSARY.

There are two ways by which people who suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, flatulence, etc., can overcome the trouble. First as practically all cases of the above are directly or indirectly traceable to acidity and fermentation, they can eliminate from their diet all foods which ferment and form acid, such as starches and sugar and foods containing them, thus prohibiting breadpotatoes, fruits and most meats. About the only safe foods are gluten breads, spinach and small quantities of white meat of chicken or turkey. This diet is almost a starvation one but it is sometimes quite effective. The second way, which appeals especially to those who like to eat hearty meals of good foods, is to eat what is reasonably digestible, neutralize the acid and stop fermentation by the use of a good antacid such as bisurated magnesia a teaspoonful of which in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt, instantly neutralises the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work without pain or hindrance. Owing to its simplicity, convenience and effectiveness this latter plan is now being adopted, instead of the old fashioned, expensive weakening starvation process. In this connection it is interesting to note that since the widespread use of bisurated magnesia was established, many druggists have arranged to supply it in 5 gr. tablets, two or three of which are equivalent to a teaspoonful of the powder form and are much more convenient to carry.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND GIRL'S APRON AND CAP.

By Anabel Worthington.

With each succeeding season we note that more and more attention is being given to providing the budding girl with about everything in the way of dress that mother has in her wardrobe. The idea is excellent. It means co-operation. The girl has the desire to take mother's place occasionally, and without realizing it she is training herself as well as helping mother.

No wonder that no persuasion is necessary when we look at the one piece apron in the illustration, No. 7,836. So much is it on the order of the middy that the girl herself will want to make it, and because it is so attractive she will enjoy cooking or doing the lighter housework. Not only is it a practical outfit but it is neat and becoming. Nice enough for chambray and linen, but figured percale and solid color trimming will be desirable; so will gingham also.

It is made to slip on over the head; an elastic at the waistline adjusts the garment to the figure. The laced front, small pocket in the waist portion and a larger one in the skirt have utility and decorative value; kimono style sleeve is used. The cap has the outer edge gathered to a cover that matches the collar and other "trim" of the apron.

The pattern of No. 7,836 is cut in sizes 12, 14 and 16 years. To make in size 14 will require 3¼ yards material in 36 inch width, with ⅝ yard contrasting goods.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

BRITAIN'S BIG GUNS.

Have Now Attained Such Excellence That They Cannot Be Beaten.

That Britain's heavy guns—the 13.5in. and the 15in.—are of the highest possible quality is borne out by the world's artillerists. Sir Robert Hadfield, President of the Faraday Society, who is one of the greatest authorities on projectiles and guns, tells us that whatever the future has in store in the way of development in the power of big guns, our experts may be trusted to produce the world's best.

Sir Robert points out that the muzzle energy of British guns has outranked that of any other nation. So-called big German guns, about which there has been so much written, are, as regards their muzzle energy, very small and inferior weapons in comparison with ours.

Sir Robert also reveals the astonishing fact that the life of a modern high velocity gun is not much more than three seconds. By this he means that if one added up the length of time during which the projectile remained in the gun it would be found that under full service velocities the total time, and consequently the life of the inner gun tube, did not amount to much more than three seconds before the erosion set up interfered with the accuracy of aim.

Several interesting examples are given by Sir Robert of remarkable results that he has witnessed as being obtained from what he calls that "modern high-speed and great-power heat-engine known as the big gun." One of these was that of a 9in. wrought-iron plate being attacked by a 9.2in. Whitworth shot. This plate was swung upon tunnions projecting from either side. In other words, before firing it would have been possible with comparatively little energy to make the plate swing backwards and forwards.

To show how quickly the shot acted, when the Whitworth shot was fired against this plate and perforated it the plate was lifted from its trunnions seating and thrown away some 10ft. or 12ft., yet the hole was properly punched in the plate. In other words, before the plate had time to swing the shot passed through it.

Long and Short.

Two departments of civic life in Britain are exceptional successes—the police-force and the fire-brigades. They are the envy and wonder of Continental nations, and even Americans have a wistful respect for the former, even if they think a fire-brigade which takes sixty seconds to turn out rather on the slow side.

Look at the London policeman on point duty. What a colossal chap he is! He is one of the sights of London, and now that the younger and slimmer men have gone to the Front his girth is a match for his height often.

These men are seldom London born. Speak to one, and you will find he speaks with a provincial accent. His speech is often pleasantly reminiscent of the Mendips, or the Cotswolds, or the dales of Yorkshire, and often enough of Connemara and Kerry. They breed big men in those parts.

He has almost invariably been a sailor, and can go up a ladder like a streak, and hang on to a cornice or a window-sill or a telephone wire by his eyebrows.

A Lifeguardsman makes a splendid policeman but a bad fireman. The fireman's ladder is made to the measure of the sailors' ratlines, and the fireman is as much at home on a burning building as he is on the Bay of Biscay or rounding the Horn.

The Engine Whistle.

It was on Saturday, May 4th, 1833, that there occurred an accident which gave us the engine whistle. It was on the level crossing between Bagworth and Thornton that Driver Weatherburn drove the engine Samson into a market cart containing 50 pounds of butter and 80 dozen eggs. So serious an affair was reserved for Stephenson's consideration. A meeting of directors was called, and the manager's suggestion of a whistle which steam could blow was adopted. He went at once to a musical instrument maker in Leicester, who constructed a "steam trumpet," which ten days later was tried in the presence of the board of directors. In appearance it was like a huntsman's horn, 18in. long and 6in. across at the top.

Her Prayer.

The following amusing incident was witnessed the other day at a London railway terminus. A Salvation Army lassie was selling The War Cry at the windows of the trains. In one of the compartments were a number of "knuts," and one of them, thinking to have some fun at the expense of the sister, asked her if she would offer up a word of prayer for him.

Rising to the occasion, the sister put her hand on his head, and, to the amusement of those within hearing distance, replied:

King Edward's Influence.

The fact that Thomas Hardy recently celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday calls to mind that he owns his house at Dorchester "by permission of King Edward VII." The land on which the house stands belonged to a company of which King Edward, as Prince of Wales, was a member. Mr. Hardy's offer to purchase would have been declined had not the Prince heard of it and suggested acceptance with the remark: "We must do all we can to make our authors contented."

TORQUAY'S RABBIT-WARREN

Towns Which Have Literally Gone "Back to the Land."

The Government appeal to us all to grow, as far as possible, what foodstuffs we can, and otherwise provide our own "rations," has already been forestalled by certain towns in the country. Torquay owns a big rabbit-warren and a fine lot of sheep. It brought about two thousand acres some years back far up on Dartmoor, to get water for the town. By chance there was a good rabbit-warren on the land, and Torquay had the sense to keep this going, and one year recently it sold no less than 10,000 rabbits, at an average of sixpence each, from its very own rabbit-farm!

As there was too much grass there, Torquay also began by buying fifty sheep, and now it has quite a yearly income, too, from its sheep-farms on Dartmoor.

Leeds has stocked the splendid lakes at Roundhay Park, and also the big reservoirs at Fewston and Eccup, with fish, so that anglers from the woollen towns can enjoy an excellent day's sport for the sum of one shilling a day.

The city makes quite a nice little sum annually from this source—for what Leeds does not know about making money is certainly not worth knowing.

Edinburgh owns several meadows in the heart of the city. These fields are put to good use. In the spring they are hayfields, the crops selling for very respectable sums, too, each year. After the hay-harvest is over Edinburgh lets out the meadows for other purposes connected with cattle and farming, and adds a bit more to the money thus acquired by the canny Scottish rulers of the town.

Not satisfied with the milk coming in for its sickly children and indigent families, the Corporation of St. Helens some time ago decided to try its hand at providing better milk from municipal sources. So successful was the experiment that St. Helens continued to increase its supply in this way until to-day quite a large business is done in milk by the council.

Tunbridge Wells had the foresight to buy a hop-garden several years back, and from the very first this has been a notable municipal success. The garden extends over eleven acres, and £500 worth of hops were sold from this the first year the town owned the garden.

Twickenham, having much land bought for hospital and sewage-works, with a view to future needs, has at present set out several acres of this for gardening, and nets a nice little sum every year as the proceeds thereof.

Colchester, some years ago, purchased the oyster-fisheries near it which are so famous, and now it proves that a town council can do as big a trade in oysters, and this as successfully as can the wholesale fish-salesman at Billingsgate or Grimsby.

Surely there must be many other towns which could follow these examples with equally happy results?—London Answers.

Painted in Seventy-two Hours.

There is a picture in this year's show at the Royal Academy which has a singular history. It was painted by an artist who is now a captain on active service, but the picture is not the one which he showed to his friends as this year's contribution. The original was of a sunset over a ploughed field, a fine landscape in a style which has distinguished the artist. Five months ago the painter was home on leave, and he spent it working over his picture. To-day the canvas shows the ploughed field and the sunset; but it also shows six soldiers fallen about a cannon, into the breech of which one survivor is placing the last shell. It is a fine picture, and by no means a pot-boiler. The captain witnessed the incident he depicts. The fortunate thing was that the landscape was ready for the figures—for no Academy picture could be painted during seventy-two hours' leave.

Feats of Beefsteak Champions.

Champion Fried Egg Eater of the Berkshires was the title of Louis Morris of Housatonic, Mass., before he entered into a recent egg-eating contest on a wager. He had a record of twenty-one eggs, and the wager was on his contention that he could easily increase this record to twenty-five. When he reached seventeen eggs he was seized with an attack of acute indigestion, and the doctor worked over him for an hour before he was restored to consciousness and pronounced out of danger. He also has a record for fifty-four ears of green corn.

No Wonder.

In a certain provincial art gallery there is a picture entitled "Saved," representing a large Newfoundland dog standing over a child whom it had rescued from the river.

The other day an old country woman stood gazing at it for quite a long time, and as she turned to go, exclaimed:

Proof.

Two pitmen, members of the Northumberlands, were walking along the streets of Cairo one day when one remarked to his pal:

"Yon's a fine smart chep: yon Canadian."

"Hoo de ye knaa he's an Australian?" asked Geordie.

A GRACEFUL FROCK.

King's blue meteor satin develops this original frock with winged panels on the sides of the skirt, which is shirred three times across the back. A charming feature of the bodice is the beaded cape, done in different shades of blue beads. The high collar takes the line of the cape in the back.

DRESSED FOR AFTERNOONS.

A Non-Combatant Corps.

An army order recently issued, announces the formation of a non-combatant corps. The pay will be that of infantry of the line. Working pay and proficiency pay will not be given. Medical, and Ordnance Corps is paid at the higher rate of these corps. "Working pay" means that a soldier temporarily employed with the Royal Engineers, the Army Service, Army "Proficiency pay" is that given for professional skill in arms or mechanical or trade skill. The pay of an infantry private is 1s. a day. The lowest in the several army corps is 1s. 2d., and the highest is probably 6s. a day (motor transport). Conscientious objectors have nearly all been certified as "non-combatants" by the tribunals.

Army Grows Its Potatoes.

The army has started to grow its own potatoes. Instructions have been sent, or are being sent, from the War Office to every command, indicating the lines which should be followed.

Military requirements are very large and little more than half the usual supplies of potatoes are coming into the markets, with the result that war prices to the public are nearly doubled.

At one camp in Surrey digging operations began last week, and the seed potatoes are to be planted in a few days in rows between the huts. A number of men are being told off each day for digging.

At a lawn tennis tournament in New Zealand a photograph of the late champion, Captain Anthony Wilding, presented by his parents, was sold for £2,625, the money going to the Wounded Soldiers' Fund.

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away,—are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead—and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

The Russian Troops Have Crossed The Carpathians

Germans Counter-Attacking Fiercely on British Front

Russian Forces Have Crossed The Carpathians Into Hungary

Swift Advance of the Czar's Forces Threaten the Rear o the Hungarians and the Austrian Lines North East o the Mountains---Heavy German Counter Attack on British Right Wing Results in Recapture of Part of the Delville Wood.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 19.—Russian forces have crossed the Carpathian Mountains for the first time since their defeat by the Germans a year ago, and have entered Hungary after a day of marching, the Petrograd correspondent of the Evening Star reported to-day. The swift Russian advance into Hungary threatens the rear of the Hungarian and the Austrian lines northeast of the mountains, the correspondent added.

French Make More Progress At Verdun

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 19.—(French Official)—French troops made further progress against the German line northeast of Verdun in grenade fighting last night advancing in the direction of Sainte Fine Chapel at the intersection of the Fleury and Vaux roads, it was officially announced to-day. The War Office reported no important fighting on the Somme front. There was considerable artillery activity last night on the east bank of the Meuse, particularly around Fleury.

German Counter Attacks Make Progress

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 19.—German trpops obtained a footing in the outskirts of the village of Longueval and recaptured part of the Delville Wood in a heavy counter-attack against the right wing of the British army, north of the Somme, General Haig reported this afternoon.

The Germans attacked in large force after dusk last night delivering their most powerful blows against Longueval village which occupies an important strategic position at the intersection of two highways. They succeeded in penetrating the northern edge of the village. The battle continued throughout the night with the greatest violence. The Germans brought up fresh troops and attacked repeatedly. The British counter-attacked at several points and savage fighting occurred on the outskirts of Longueval.

General Haig reported that the struggle for Longueval and Delville Wood continues and is "still violent."

Fresh Advances Are Made By Italians

Special to the Examiner.

ROME, July 19.—The Italians have made fresh advances in Valposina and Pasubio sectors. Several Austrian guns and many prisoners have been taken.

Deutchsland Is Still At Baltimore

Special to the Examiner:

BALTIMORE, Md., July 19.—Due to delay in readjusting the repairing pipes aboard the German sub-sea freighter, the Deutschland still tossed today in the muddy waters of the Patapasco here. Her getaway, it now appears, is likely to be by Friday, but possibly not until Sunday. Her wireless was sealed to-day under neutrality provisions requiring such action after ten days' stay.

The Kaiser In a Preaching Mood

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, July 19.—In addressing a gathering of army chaplains recently on the west front, Kaiser Wilhelm said that this time of sifting and the world was separating wheat from chaff. The Kaiser said: "If Christ entered at this moment through yonder door, could we look into his face? We must make Him the ideal of our practical lives." The Kaiser dwelt on the spiritual benefits of the war to the Germans, and said everybody must admit that the German is great and sacrificing without hesitation or complaint for a great cause.

Claim Russian Transports Were Sunk

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 19.—A Turkish report via Berlin says three Russian transports were sunk, and one ran ashore in the Black Sea by Turkish warships. No mention was made of the troops aboard. Since the Grand Duke assumed the offensive in the caucasus, the Russians have moved many thousands of troops to that front by steamer.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Five thousand dollars of the fifteen thousand dollar appropriation for the fire department has been spent to date. This is a very good showing considering that the year is more than half gone.

STREET LIGHTING.

The Trades and Labour Council want the city to remove the surplus magnetite arc lamps on George street and place them elsewhere. The matter has been referred to the Utilities Commission.

NEW FIRE ALARM BOX.

Fire Chief Howard has been given instruction to install a new fire alarm box at a point to be designated by the committee.

LIGHT ON ELM STREET.

The Utilities Committee will be asked to speed up the work of placing a new line and light on Elm street. It is several months since this work was first authorized.

WOULD INSTAL A MOTOR DRIVEN CHEMICAL ENGINE

City is at Last Waking up to the Necessity for Installing Motor Driven Fire Apparatus—Horses are an Expensive Investment.

DAILY FEED BILL

Ald. Evans, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee of the City Council, has been authorized to accompany Fire Chief Howard to the Fire Chief's convention, which opens in Windsor on August the eighth. The prospective delegates are also asked to investigate the merits of motor driven fire apparatus as it is intention of the committee to recommend the installation of a motor driven chemical engine at some future date, presumably next year. At last night's meeting of the Fire, Water and Light committee, Fire Chief Howard reported a casualty among the equinines at the fire hall. Ald. Evans read the post mortem report of the tragic circumstances relating to the departure of "Fred" of the hook and ladder truck. The need for three or four new horses in the fire hall opened up the question of motorizing a part of the central fire station. The feed bill for horses amounts to about forty cents a day. The committee is unanimously of the opinion that it would be in the interests of the city to instal a piece of motor driven apparatus.

Truck Too Small.

Ald. Evans and Ald. Edgar were in favour of putting in a truck similar to the one in use in Lindsay. This is a four-cylinder and costs in the neighbourhood of sixteen hundred dollars.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Saunders did not think that this would meet the needs of a city like Peterborough. Any number of pleasure cars cost that amount of money, so it is hardly likely that a service able fire truck could be purchased at that price. A motor driven combination chemical engine will cost five thousand dollars or more. At that price the city may expect to get good service. An attempt was made to show that such a truck as Lindsay possesses could be provided for out of this year's appropriation. Both Mayor Duffus and Ald. Saunders were opposed to the prospects of an overdraft. The committee was unanimously of the opinion that any attempt to motorize the Peterborough Fire Department was a move in the right direction.

The matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the committee and the Fire Chief to obtain more information concerning the adaptability of a motor driven truck to local conditions. In the meantime the department will attempt to purchase at least one horse to replace the one that succumbed a few days ago.

UNIQUE SELLING

Not only is the usual cut price placed on all dresses, for instance, $10.00 and $12.00 dresses are priced to-day at $5.50.

But each day the price on all dresses not sold that day will be lessened a dollar. To-day they were $5.50, to-morrow they will be $4.50, on Friday they will be $3.50, on Saturday they will be $2.50, and after 7.30 on Saturday they will be $1.50.

Among them are the beautiful dresses of the season. Although the price will be reduced a dollar each day, do not delay. Come and get your early pick. A large number were sold to-day. Elliot's Store.

THE HIGH COST OF CUT PRICES.

An eyeglass from an incomplete stock, and fitted by an incompetent adjuster, is expensive even at $1.00. For glasses that will not only look good on you but will give the greatest satisfaction in wear and price, see Dr. Lacey, at the Peterboro Optical Parlors, 410 George Street.

Help To Keep The Boys In Smokes

An important meeting of the Overseas' Tobacco Fund Committee is called for this evening at 8:15 o'clock, and all the members of the Committee are requested to be present. Something must be done at once to keep the supply of tobacco going to our men in the trenches. The supply is not now nearly equal to the demand, and organization is necessary.

FIRST LOCAL DRAFT FOR FORESTERS LEAVE FOR OTTAWA TO-NIGHT

Party of Local Men Will Report for Duty With the 238th Battalion --- 33rd Battery Wins Laurels for Itself at Lark Hill---Kingston to Raise a Highland Battalion--- To-days' Military News.

The first draft of Peterborough men for the 238th Forestry Battalion will leave for Ottawa to-night or rather on the 1:28 C. P. R. train to-morrow morning. Seven men will comprise this draft in charge of Sergt. Stanley, and it is expected that a number of others will be sent to Ottawa in a few days. The men leaving to-night are: W. F. Hartley, A. H. Baker, B.A., A Torrence, A Hope, T. Needham, H. W. Watson and C. Breadman. The last three men were rejected at the final medical examination of the 93rd Battalion last week, but lost no time in rejoining the colours.

MANY UNITS GOING.

CAMP BORDEN, July 19.—That from ten to fifteen thousand men from overseas units now training in various camps in Ontario will be on the way east within a month or two is indicated by orders received here to-day. The 126th and 127th battalions stationed here to-day received orders to prepare immediately for departure. This means that all units still in camp in Ontario, up to that number, if they are fairly up in strength and efficiency, will also get similar orders, if they have not already received them.

Word has been received from Niagara Camp that the 119th and 120rd there had received their orders. All harvesting furloughs in the battalions affected must be cancelled immediately and the men will go instead on week-end leave. As it is a foregone conclusion that the majority of the battalions on arriving in the Old Country will be drafted to other battalions, it is thought the authorities will not wait for them to be recruited up to full strength.

The Kingston Standard says: A sergeant of the 109th Battalion, who formerly belonged to the 14th Regiment Garrison Guard, and who was transferred to the 109th Battalion, has deserted his family and regiment. The deserter's family reside in Kingston, and the 109th are wrathy to think that one who drew government pay for almost a year should show a streak of "yellow" when the time for test came.

The Kingston Standard Says: Lieut. Rogers of the 8th C.M.R., who was known in camp last year as an excellent comedian, and the author of the mystical mascot of the 8th, known as "Dave," is among the number reported killed in a recent battle on the western front. Lieut. Rogers was the life of the cavalry camp last summer. He was a good officer, full of fun, music and mischief, and the report of his death will be regretted by all who knew him.

Barriefield, July 19.—Lieut. Godfrey, assistant adjutant of the 8th C. M.R., in camp last summer, transferred to the 39th battalion, and reverted to the ranks so as to get an early chance to get to the front. He was made Sergt.-Major, and recently won the D.C.M. for acts of bravery on the field. Godfrey served in Egypt in 1898, and also served in South Africa.

Kingston, July 19.—There is considerable talk about new battalions, and the city of Kingston is anxiously waiting for the order to start a Highland Battalion in this part of the 3rd Military District. Everybody feels confident that a Highland battalion would catch the best material in the city and county, and would be a comparatively easy undertaking for a commanding officer who was prepared to spend time, effort and money in its organization. The officers from the city and county, whose names are prominently mentioned in connection with the proposed new battalions, are men who would make a success of a kiltie regiment, as they have made a success of business and public offices given them by the votes of the people. It is expected that within a few days the unit will be authorized.

Mr. J. Worboy, 507 Aylmer street, has received the following message of condolence in connection with the death at the front of Private Fred Worboy.

The message reads as follows:

The King commands me to assure you of the true sympathy of His Majesty and the Queen in your sorrow.

W. W. Asquith.

Lieut. R. L. Runsmore of St. Thomas, and son-in-law of Mr. W. J. Voaden of Peterborough has been slightly wounded, but is remaining on duty.

Among those who have sailed for Canada is Lieut. E. Douglas Huycke of Peterborough, and son of Judge Huycke. Lieut. Huycke was severely wounded several months ago.

The Kingston Whig says: The 146th Battalion were successful in winning a baseball game played at Valcartier against the 139th Battalion team on Saturday for $1,000. The game was the result of much argument following a defeat at the hands of the Cobourg unit team while the local soldiers were recovering from inoculation. A lump sum of $1,000 was gathered together amongst the men of each battalion and with an official referee one of the most exciting of games was played. Sergt. Kelly did the throwing for the locals, being caught by Pte. Williams.

The 33rd Battery, C.F.A., composed for the great part of boys from Peterborough, has been winning laurels for itself in England. Sergt. Harold Knapman, in a letter home, says that General Drake announced a little while ago that the 33rd gunners were the best, either Canadian or Imperial, he had seen at Larkhill. In a recent test the 33rd dropped eleven shells directly into a two-foot trench at a range of nearly three miles, having only four misses after securing the range. Sergt. Knapman recently secured the Imperial certificate for range-finding at Aldershot.

Writing to his mother, Mrs. J. Eggleton, 141 Hunter street, Gunner Eggleton, Trench Mortar Battery, 1st Canadian Division, says: "The fighting is still fierce. We scarcely had time to bury our dead last week, but I think this is the beginning of the end. I took part in the Communion service last week. Can you picture it? Soldiers kneeling down in the open before a rude altar spread with out the ceremony of the Church of England. It was administered to us amidst the roar of artillery, a scene one is not likely to forget.

The many friends of Billy Breen, trainer of the Peterborough Electric Hockey Club, will be interested in learning that he has been promoted to the position of Company Quarter-Master Sergeant with the 180th Battalion at Camp Borden. In sending greetings to the Examiner Q. M. S. Breen enclosed the following lines:

FROM ONE OF THE BUNCH.

I am sending you our Battalion Card
For a letter this time instead.
We are drilling all day good and hard
And at night we are ready for bed.

RUSSIANS OPEN THE WAY TO LEMBERG

SOME SALESMEN SPOKE TOO SOON AT CHEESE SALE

First Price of 16 5-16 Cents Was Later Raised to 16 1-2 Cents—Buyers Were Eager to Fill Orders.

RETAIN METHOD OF SELLING

The warmest scramble for cheese the local board has witnessed in many a moon was staged this morning by four or five buyers who were simply ravenous for new cheese. At the last sale on July 5 the top price was 15 7-8 cents. This morning the best figure was 16 1-2 cents, the highest of the year, except the first sale, that registered 18 cents.

At that, some of the salesmen that grabbed at Mr. Thompson's first bid of 16 5-16 cents were kicking themselves when Mr. Kerr shortly afterwards secured a call at 16 1-2 cents. It was the snappiest, sharpest sale the Board has seen, and the coatless farmers who have the selling of the cheese, went away with their feet in the clouds, imaginatively jingling the extra shillings that had been wrung from the buyers in their vigorous bidding.

The Cheese Boarded.

The factories clocked in as follows:
Keene	100
Warminster	120
Shearer	175
Villiers	80
Selwyn	120
Warsaw	175
Westwood	235
Myrtle	180
Ormonde	140
Young's Point	165
Lang	165
East Emily	125
Trewern	145
Norwood	210
Fleetwood	115
Killarney	110
Oakdale	110
Missing Link	75
Mount Pleasant	64
	2600

The Bidding.

Mr. Flavelle opened at 15 cents and Messrs. Hodgson, Kerr, Gillespie, Thompson and Cooke soon rattled the price up to 16 5-16. Mr. Thompson's bid seemed to be the limit. Some of the buyers thought so, for the Ormonde, Oakdale, Norwood and Killarney factories snapped at his call.

Messrs. Kerr, Cook and Hodgson shot the price up to 16 1-2 cents. Mr. Kerr getting the call, taking Keene, Shearer and Westwood.

Mr. Hodgson at 16 1-2 cents bought Selwyn, Villiers, Myrtle and Warminster.

Mr. Cook bought Warsaw, East Emily and Trewern at 16 1-2 cents.

Fleetwood was content with Mr. Kerr's offer of 16 3-8 cents; Missing Link and Mount Pleasant sold to him at 16 7-16 cents; Lang and Young's Point held out until they got 16 1-2 cents, the top price, from Mr. Kerr.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

Continue Present Method.

Mr. Kerr's motion, of which he had formerly given notice, that the call system of bidding be introduced was considered.

Mr. Cook supported him, but Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Hodgson expressed a preference for the existing method on the Peterborough Board. Mr. Kerr's motion was defeated.

By way of comparison, recent sales were as follows:

July 5—2,869 boxes at 15 7-8c.
June 21—2,772 boxes at 16c.
May 30—2,088 boxes at 16 5-16c. and 16 7-16c.

POUNDING HINDENBERG

London, July 18.—A Russian victory over Teutonic forces in Southern Volhynia, has resulted in their being driven across the River Lipa and beyond that stream, says a War Office statement issued to-day. Indications are, the statement adds, that the retreat was effected in the greatest disorder, many of the Austrians being panic stricken. The news of the defeat has also caused consternation in Galicia, where towns are being evacuated.

Gen. von Linsingen's retirement across the Lipa is considered as removing the last serious obstable to the advance of the Russians toward Lemberg.

Vienna admits that in the Carpathian region, near Zabie and Tatarow, the Russians have pushed back Austrian advanced posts, although the Austrian main lines have been firmly held.

In the vicinity of Riga the Russians are vigorously on the offensive against Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army, but all their attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses, according to Berlin.

BERLIN ADMITS RETIREMENT.

The Russian operations eastward, and south-westward of Lutsk, which began last Saturday, apparently marked the beginning of renewed important fighting in this sector, according to reports from war correspondents of the Berlin newspapers. The Russians had employed the comparatively quiet period since July 8, in reinforcing their units and making redispositions of their forces. Especially large masses of troops were assembled westward of Lutsk, with the aid of the double track railways and two excellent military roads.

The new operations began Saturday morning, with a Russian advance from Torchin in the direction of Sadoff. This met with strong opposition at first and was thrown back. Meanwhile, however, strong forces were advancing along the road from Lutsk to Chorukff, and west thereof. These forces encountered the Austro-Germans during the night along the front near Sklin to Ugrinoff. It was quickly apparent that the Austro-Germans were facing greatly superior numbers and a withdrawal of the line was ordered. This was accomplished with little disturbance, through the aid of a strong attack, which held up the Russians until the new line southward of the Lipa had been established.

Fighting along the Moldava-Bressa line in Bukowina is reported to be bitter. In hand to hand conflicts the Austrians are successfully holding the line eastward of the Bukowina border. As during the former occupation of Bukowina, the fighting along the Carpathian heights is taking on the nature of guerilla warfare. There are constant skirmishes between patrolling parties and other small forces.

METCHNIKOFF.

If Elie Metchnikoff could have survived, in full possession of his intellectual powers, for the 150 years which he believed that a human being should live if relieved of certain bacteria associated with senile decay, what might he not have accomplished in the cause of bacteriological science? But he has died at about the Psalmist's 'age of man,' before his discovery of the glycobacteria and the application of it had produced definite results. His indisputable achievements, however, were memorable. If the Bulgarian bacilli have not turned out to be the veritable elixir of life, they have assuredly proved a useful factor in the treatment of certain common ailments.

Metchnikoff's impulsive temperament and his fervid imagination served to give him a place in the public mind which workers in his special scientific field do not often obtain. But they served also to give him a false reputation. His theories about longevity were interesting, but no more important than his theories about marriage and divorce. As a bacteriologist he ranked fairly with Virchow and Pasteur; his theory of inflammation, formulated in 1832, was of no less value to the development of medical science than Virchow's discovery of the leucocytes in ing microbes. He was a student of exing microbes, e was a student of extraordinary zeal and unfailing enthusiasm. He did not live to prove that cancer is caused by a microbe, a theory of Fibiger which he accepted, and can be avoided by eating only cooked food, or to convince his fellow scientists that their own investigations into the causes of that disease were misdirected. But his patient labours produced many good results, his example stimulated others to energetic work in bypaths of research which would otherwise have been neglected. He was a man of large vitality, and essentially a man of his own era, accorded many high honours while he lived. He will be remembered as a discoverer and a true benefactor of the human race as well as the propounder of starting though amiable theories.—New York Times.

HONORARY COLONELS.

General Sir Sam has sprinkled this country over with honorary colonels with the prodigal hand of the Kaiser with iron crosses to get clear of, but we did not know that he carried a supply in his kit bag when he visited the Old Country. He gave himself one when the giving was good, and became honorary colonel of the 45th of Lindsay, Ont., in 1913. In the Canadian Militia List, corrected to April, 1916, the names are given of 332 honorary officers of the Canadian forces. Of these 40 represent appointments from the time of Confederation up till the present Minister of Militia was sworn in, and include the names of H. M., the King, Lord Kitchener and others. During the last two or three years the titles have been distributed with the lavish hand of a generous provider by Sir Sam. In fact, the ordinary ones became so numerous that he was made an Honorary General after the war broke out. Thus it will be seen that our Minister of Militia had a kindly feeling for the honorary officer, and will not have a button taken from their uniforms nor a click of heels omitted by the saluting Tommies.

By the way, for 17 years, the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G., P.C., has been an Honorary Lieut.-Colonel of the battalion in which he was an officer and won an active service medal years ago, but he goes about delivering his earnest, enthusiastic and loyal addresses in mufti, instead of swaggering about the country in uniform demanding military recognition from all and singular. —Montreal Herald.

The German longing for peace is still there, but the change in the war must give it a new direction. When Germany knows her real position, as she must know it now, what turn will be given to the peace longing? It must seem evident even to the most ingenious German mind that the proposal of peace terms on a basis of the retention of Alsace-Lorraine and Poland is not a proposal that can be made to men who surround the German armies with a ring of fire and who, with new hosts and new weapons, are forcing those armies to fight, not for victory, but for life. And only when Germany, or it may be, Austria, sees the truth can there be a real hope of peace. Is it too soon to hope that that time is at hand.—New York Times.

LESSONS TO LEARN.

If, before you were forty years of age, you had achieved a position worth $50,000 a year, and had just put through a $6,000,000 deal, would you commit suicide?

You don't know whether or not you would.

Quick money, big money, success, don't always take life, but they take something. They chain a man to a treadmill, or give him a golden cord with which to hang himself.

We have never noticed much of this in Canada, because our speed records are slow when measured by American standards.

But if the occupation known as "rich American businessman" isn't soon classed as "hazardous" by the insurance companies, we miss our guess.

We do not have much suicide in Canada; most acts of this kind here are properly ascribed to agonizing sickness, first of body, then of mind. The loniiness of the prairies and drink take their toll, but as a nation Canadians are too "average" and too poor to think about suicide.

Also we go slow on divorce, which also reflects a state of mind against destruction.

There is too much divorce and too much suicide "across the line" and Canada, which may have problems just as vast when she has a hundred millions, can draw the lessons of national health as she reads.—London Advertiser.

THE POWER SHORTAGE.

"You had better ask the provincial government."

Such is the reply that Sir Adam Beck finds it necessary to give when asked why it is that there is not sufficient power at the disposal of the Hydro Electric Comission to supply the present needs of the Province.

Sir Adam Beck, the man to whom we have looked as the power minister of Ontario, the man who has been trusted with the spending of millions of our money in the carrying out of our schemes; all he can say is "You had better ask the provincial government."

Is this, then, practically an admission that the hydro scheme has passed over to the group of men at Toronto called the provincial government? Does it mean that this great scheme has passed into the hands of the McGarry-Ferguson-Lucas, etc., outfit? If such be the case, it is high time that he people of Ontario rose up and demanded to know where they are standing in the premises.

The public for some time have had a hard proposition in endeavoring to determine between the Ontario government and the Hydro Commission. The government has not been satisfied to allow the development and sale of power to proceed as it had done formerly. There was a certain element of success attached to the plan, which made them eager to lay their political fist on the undertaking so that it might appear that the Hydro Electric was in reality a child of the seven sleepers in Toronto.

They have gone ahead at times without the sanction of the Hydro Commission. It was a government member, in no way connected with the Hydro Commission who made the announcement of the most recent power plant purchases in the eastern section of the province. And it is the same government that has attempted to handle the situation at Niagara.

It really means this: That on Monday afternoon, July 17, the factories of Ontario, including those making ammunition and shells for the Allies, were compelled to cease operations for a time because there was not enough power. Fortunately the stop was a short one. At the same time here was 100,000 horse power going from the development plants in Canada to users in United States. Truly a fine situation.

And the chances are that the words of Sir Adam Beck are not far from the mark: "Ask the Ontario Government." That is just what the people of Ontario are apt to do. That is just what the people in North Perth did, and there was no mistake in the answer.—Guelph Mercury.

In The Days Of The Giants And Pygmies

There is no evidence to show that men have ever had a greater average height than they have now. For a long time there existed in France, near the junction of the Isere and Rhone rivers, a deposit of gigantic bones known as the "Giant's Field." In recent times bones have been dug out there which were believed to be human, and were said to be those of Teutobodus, the king of the Teutons, who was overcome near the spot by Marius, the Roman general.

The researches of Cuvier, however, proved that these bones together with all the others exhumed in the same place were those of the Dinotherium giganteum, an extinct animal of the tapir species, which measured about 20 feet in length.

The myth of a race of giants has its counterpart in those other creatures of the imagination, the pygmies These fabled people, who were so small that a stalk of grain was a tree to them, which they chopped down with tiny hatchets and brush hooks, were said to inhabit Ethiopia. They were always at war with the cranes, but lived on such excellent terms with the partridges that they were able to harness them to their carriages. They lived at first, according to the fable, in Thrace, but were driven out of Europe by the cranes; and took refuge in Ethiopia.

It is now commonly supposed, says the Washington Star, that the pygmies were nothing more or less than monkeys of small size, like marmosets.

The stories of the pygmies go with the fables of the giants. The men of ancient times were of the same, or nearly the same, height, as those of the present day. The doors of ancient houses, ancient armor, the Egyptian mummies, as well as the fossil bones of men, prove that there has been little or no variation.

Among famous tall men was the Roman Emperor Maximin, whose stature was seven and three-quarters feet. Maximin was a young barbarian, the son of a Gothic father, who first attracted the attention of the Romans by overcoming 16 of the strongest men, one after another, in a wrestling contest, and having been made a centurion, he fought and intrigued his way to the imperial throne.

The normal stature of men and women ranges between five feet and six feet four inches.

NOTICE TO ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS, BUILDERS AND OTHERS

NOTICE is hereby given that no electric wiring or apparatus shall be installed in any building, premises, or erection, in the Province of Ontario without a written permit from the authorised electrical inspector of the district in which the work is to be executed; nor shall any such electrical work be covered from view by lath plaster or other material, until duly inspected.

It is also contrary to the provisions of the Power Commission Act to alter or add to any electrical work without due notice to and permit from the inspector.

It is also contrary to the provisions of said act to supply electric current from any source to any installation of wiring, motors, or other electrical apparatus until a written certificate has been issued authorizing such supply.

Violation of the foregoing or any of the rules and regulations of this commission pertaining to electrical inspection is punishable under the Ontario Summary Convictions Act.

Copies of the rules and regulations may be obtained at 15 cents each upon application to the nearest electrical inspector.

WALLY SCHANG INJURED

Star Catcher of the Athletics Pitched Headlong Against Concrete Walk.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

Javelle water: One fourth cup to a boiler of water will make them very white. The formula for making javelle water is: One gallon of water, 4 pounds of washing soda, 1 pound of common soda, beat all together, add 2 pounds of slaked lime. After it has stopped foaming pour off and battle.

CANADIAN GUNS IN ACTION—A RED-HOT DAY IN FLANDERS — One end of the bombardment which blew German defences to bits on the western front and paved the way for the advance of British infantry in the present big advance. Gunners of the Maple Leaf stripped to the waist serving the guns in a warm corner of the fighting on the western front. Notice that the gun is in a crater or dugout, and is screened with boughs in order to escape the notice of the prying German aviator.

ACTIONABLE ANGUISH.

Tobacco Chewer Sues an Indianapolis Car Company.

Now comes one Robert Bowman, a carter, of Indianapolis, and, being duly sworn, alleges that because of injuries to his jaws suffered when his wagon was struck by a street car, he is deprived of the pleasure that he formerly had in chewing tobacco and demands damages in the sum of $5,000. Now, no one would go so far as to attempt to deprive a teamster of the reasonable use of his jaws; in fact the use of it or them, as the case may be, is commonly looked upon as one of his inalienable rights, such as that of trial by jury.

Any person who has, in the flush of his young manhood, attempted to outjaw one in the act of impeding traffic by keeping his wain in the car tracks will readily understand that when it comes to using or abusing the human jaw the average truckman is, so to speak, in a class by himself, a very viking of vituperation. But, while admitting that reasonable and lawful use of the laws belongs to any and all citizens alike, and allowing that certain pleasurable uses may be arrogated upon occasion, the question still remains, is the anguish ensuing upon being unable to chew tobacco of a nature warranting an action for damages or shall we pray the honourable court to dismiss the suit?

That chewing tobacco as an indoor or sedentary occupation is rapidly going out, no one will deny. Indignant housewives have long ago made their view known vigorously enough to necessitate that whatever chewing is done in the home be accomplished by stealth. Business firms no longer look upon the ability to chew as one of the prime requisites of the successful hireling; the sanitary salesman is coming to the fore. Dentists and physicians still differ somewhat upon the pathological aspects of the chew, so the question seems to hinge upon whether or not the mastication of tobacco is to be classed as a pleasure to be indulged in and cherished.

As no doubt many have observed, the confirmed chewer regards the cutting off of his daily rations with less regret than he does the failure of the scrap supply. The abandoned prefer the chew to the potato, the egg, or the bean. From the expressions of satisfaction which we have seen creep over the faces of chewers upon replenishing the jaw we have no doubt that it is after all a pleasure, the curtailment of which occasions anguish; and, in view of less serious injuries which have brought large sums of money, it must be actionable. The country will await the opinion of the jury with baited breath.— Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

SIR SAM HUGHES PREMIER

LINDSAY, July 18. — Toronto counsel was retained to act on behalf of a client against whom a motion was launched to have him declared a lunatic. The matter came on for hearing before the County Judge at Lindsay.

"Who is the Premier of Canada?" was a question darted at the supposed lunatic to test the state of his mind.

"Sam Hughes," was the unhesitating reply.

The Toronto counsel rose to the occasion.

"You cannot say the man is insane after that answer," he declared.

The judge was convinced.

BERLIN DISCOURAGES PEACE OVERTURES

Even Moderate Element in Germany Would Not Quit Occupied Territory, Stockholm Hears.

STOCKHOLM, July 19.—Regardless of the decision history ultimately will record as to victor and vanquished in the great North Sea naval fight of May 31 and June 1, there is no denying the fact that the battle brought a sudden stiffening to the so-called "war party" in Germany. All talk of Germany being willing to end the war on a basis of the ante-bellum status quo has been ended.

It is being given out now in neutral Europe that Germany will require "a slight rectification of her frontier at the expense of Belgium." It is further asserted that it will be necessary for the Central Powers to keep a strip of Serbia in order that the railway to Constantinople shall always run through "friendly" territory. Germany always has maintained that her colonies should be returned to her. It is now added that there must be "compensation for German losses in the Congo." "Something also must be done," it is stated, "to keep Belgium from being the vassal State of England."

The Rev. Dr. Charles F. Aked of San Francisco, one of the American delegates to the Neutral Conference for Continuous Mediation sitting in Stockholm, was in Berlin on a mission of peace at the time of the North Sea fight. It is commonly reported he was there by invitation of the German Government. At any rate, he seems to have had no difficulty in obtaining audiences from most of the higher officials. The peace conference had entertained the hope that Germany would outline peace terms of a character so extremely moderate as to command immediate respect in all the neutral countries, thus bringing about a public opinion to which belligerents eventually would have to listen.

Aked Finds No Encouragement.

But Dr. Aked brought back a very gloomy report. There seemed to be no thought anywhere that the war would end within another year. The new statement of peace terms that would be demanded by the now dominant "war party," coupled with the Governmental announcement that peace could be had only upon a basis of consideration for the military situation of the opposing armies and without consideration or discussion as to the cause of the war, appears to have chilled even the most ardent of the peace advocates abiding in the Swedish capital. Just a short while before the naval battle the German element in Stockholm was proclaiming the fact that Germany was willing to bring hostilities to a close and to evacuate all occupied territory in exchange for the captured German colonies overseas.

Dr. Aked is said to have suggested to officials in Berlin that the neutral nations would not look with favour upon German retention of any of Belgium and to have received the answer:

"The neutral nations are not going to dictate to the 120,000,000 of the Central Powers. We have bought the land of Belgium with our blood. Germany must be protected against future attacks. Shall we give back all we have won at such great cost? Shall we given up the valuable coal and iron lands of France now in our hands? As to Serbia and Montenegro they have had their lesson, I hope. We will leave Austria to deal with them."

Even the extreme pacifists in Germany are said to have told the emissary from the neutral conference that the time was not ripe for overtures of peace. Irrespective of the conflicting claims of victory, it was said the naval fight had lengthened the war by at least twelve months. The only thing the pacifists could do now was to wait for the right moment and seize it when it came.

Dr. Aked reported to the conference that he found everywhere in Germany the conviction that the German armies could not be beaten in the field and that the Allies could not exhaust German resources. Money and men seemed to be plentiful, he said, and an American living in Berlin asserted there were hundreds of thousands of men, trained to the minute, who had not yet been on any firing line. Extremists of the "war party" were most confident in their military claims. They asserted they had no fear of the English or Russian Armies because of their deficiency in trained officers.

Feeling in Berlin.

It is said Dr. Aked found little sentiment favouring the United States as a mediatory agent. There is a strong feeling in Germany against the United States, engendered partly, of course, by the submarine controversy.

Dr. Aked interviewed in Berlin a number of the men who in July last issued a protest against the suggested annexation of Belgium. This protest described annexation "as a political blunder fraught with grave consequences and calculated not to strengthen, but fatally to weaken the German Empire," and further stated: "We subscribe to the principle that the policy of absorption of annexation in the case of peoples accustomed to political independence is to be rejected."

"This utterance is a voice that nothing can silence," said Dr. Aked. "But, of course, these moderate men are not the only men of influence in Germany, and will no have matters their own way when it comes to a settlement. Between the moderate men and the war party there is constant strife. The continuance of the war, the nature and conduct of the war, are issues sharply drawn between a 'better Germany' and the 'war party.' It is really of more importance to the world as to which of these parties shall win in Germany than the more popular question of who will be victorious in the trenches. If the jingoes win the world will have to deal with a very different Germany —a Germany flushed with victory and uncompromising in her triumph, or else the world must look with anguish upon years of fiercer war, while torture is endured to agony, until blood flows in rivers, and the best fruits of civilization are utterly destroyed."

Dr. Aked said he found much to encourage him, however, as to Germany's possible attitude after the war toward arbitration "as a law above the sword."

Beware of Fake Baking Powder Tests

("THE SPICE MILL" (N.Y.), SEPTEMBER, 1913.)

Unscrupulous manufacturers of baking powder, in order to sell their product, sometimes resort to the old game of what is known as "the glass test." In reality it is no test at all, but, in cases where the prospective buyer does not understand that the so-called "test" is a fake, pure and simple, the salesman is sometimes able to make him believe it shows conclusively that the so-called baking powder he is selling, and which of course contains egg albumen, is superior to other brands which do not contain this ingredient.

"The sale in the State of Utah of baking powders containing minute quantities of dried egg (albumen) is declared illegal. The albumen in these baking powders does not actually increase the leavening power of the powder, but by a series of unfair and deceptive tests such powders are made to appear to the innocent consumer to possess three or four times their actual leavening power."

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

This is the season when she who would have a lily-white complexion should turn her thoughts to mercolised wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, freckled, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any druggistore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion. When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the afternoon or evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

Appreciation of a Peterboro Boy by Another Home Boy

The following interesting sketch of Danny Simmons, the Canadian vaudeville star, written by Croyland Yokome, of the staff of the "Morning Sun," Vancouver, will be of interest to Peterborough readers of the Examiner, and will serve to introduce "Dan," who is about due here on his annual pilgrimage to his native city:

Doing handsprings in vacant barns in Peterborough, Ont., in the "days of real sport." That's how Danny Simmons, "the military hobo," who is the comedy feature of the Pantages bill this week, broke into the show game. In those days he was content to take his share of the pins received at the gate from juvenile spectators who thronged to see the wonderful boy who could do two handsprings in succession, and who was a source of considerable pride among the youngsters of his own locality and who was looked upn with envy by those of other neighbourhoods in that part of the town. And now he's drawing a handsome three-figure salary every week.

Yes, Danny got the show bug early. And from tumbling in vacant barns he graduated into an amateur acrobat of local renown and was given the place of honour on the bill at several amateur entertainments in the old Bradburn opera house on the main street of the town. After winning the applause of his fellow citizens for many seasons by his clever work he decided that the amateur show business afforded a poor means of filling the bread basket and mustered up sufficient courage to try his hand as a professional in a modest way. He secured an engagement with the then popular Marks brothers' repertoire show and turned cartwheels and did clog steps between the acts in "East Lynne" and other "ten, twenty, thirty" classics. Mentioning clog steps, it should be observed that besides doing acrobatic work Danny had acquired a good knowledge of step dancing. He picked up the steps quickly and soon graduated into a finished dancer. He was naturally musical, light on his feet and Irish, so dancing came easy to him. He made a big hit with the Marks company in such metropolitan communities as Lindsay, Smiths Falls and other seething centres of population in Ontario, and having gained considerable confidence in his ability through his success with the "rep" show, decided to hit for the white lights. Going to New York he secured a fat part with a big road show production of George M. Cohan's then popular musical comedy, "Little Johnny Jones," and as the part was an Irish comedy role, he soon became a feature of the show. From "Little Johnny Jones" Danny jumped into vaudeville, preferring "twenty minutes in one" to the grind of hard work and long jumps with a musical show, and has been on the vaudeville stage ever since.

Although he has played all the big cities of the east and west, including little old New York, the "home town" of every second performer on the stage regardless of whether he first saw the light of day at Oshkosh, Medicine Hat or some other equally interesting place, Danny still proudly admits that Peterborough is his home and visits that town every year to see his "folks." Danny Simmons is unaffected, a good mixer and an all round hale-fellow well met. He is an excellent raconteur and always has a fund of witty stories. He changes little in appearance as the years go by, although he is acquiring a generous waist line, and his favourite recreation continues to be fishing for "lunge" and bass in the fresh water lakes in Peterborough district. As a Peterborough Irishman picturesquely expressed it: "He's the same divil's own Dan."

LUCK.

(By E. W. Guest in the Detroit Free Press.)

When I think of the yards that are barren and bare
With never a pink or a white blossom there
And I look at the roses that my fences cram
I think what a fortunate fellow I am.

When I think of the cares that so many folks know
Of the days that are dreary, the nights filled with woe,
And carefree I wander from worry and sham
I think what a fortunate being I am.

Oh, never a blossom of beauty I see
That has come to perfection and glory for me,
But I pause for a moment to stand at its shrine

1916 FARM LABOURERS' EXCURSIONS VIA CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

According to present indications the demand for farm labourers in the West this year will greatly exceed the supply. The Canadian Pacific are perfecting arrangements for these excursions, the first of which will be run early in August. Date will be announced later. CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

Public Opinion

The first taste of New Post Toasties, reveals the fact that something different —something better—has arrived for the breakfast table.

The secret is in the flavour—a self-developed flavour of pearly white Indian corn—not the flavour of cream and sugar upon which other flakes have to depend.

And notice, too, the appearance of New Post Toasties, particularly the tiny "bubbles" on the surface of each flake. These bubbles are a distinguishing feature —produced by the quick intense heat of a new patented process of manufacture.

New Post Toasties do not "chaff" nor crumble in the package, and they don't mush down in cream like other flakes. They're more substantial and are altogether more altisfactory than any flakes that have preceeded them.

The proof is in the eating—have your grocer send you a package.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT---

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Fire Department Free of Cost

Walkerville Distillery will no Longer Maintain Fire Department Free of Cost to the Town

Walkerville, July 19.—Hereafter it will cost the town of Walkerville $10,000 annually for its fire protection, instead of this being a free item. For years the firm of Walker & Sons, distillers, have maintained a modern fire-fighting department at a cost of approximately $25,000 a year. The brigade was organized years ago primarily to guard the extensive Walker plant, but it was always at the call of the citizens in case of fire, and no charge was ever made against the municipality for this service, with the result that Walkerville's tax rate has been probably the lowest of any town in the province. Since the outbreak of the war, however, and more particularly since the provincial prohibition bill was adopted there has been a great lessening in the demand for the Walker firm's products and six months ago Walkerville town council was asked to contribute $25,000 annually as a fair proportion of the cost of maintaining the fire department. The proposition was rejected by the Fire Commission of the council, and the firm made a second offer, this time of $12,500. This, too, was not entertained, the council declaring that $7,500 was ample compensation. The matter was fought and argued in committee and in open council for the half year, until the citizens, apprehensive lest the town be left without fire protection, urged that some agreement be reached. On Saturday it was announced that the council has agreed to pay $10,000 per year in addition to the hydrant charges.

A Short Session At Police Court

Magistrate Dumble had a quiet session at this morning's police court, and but two cases were on hand when the city clock tolled ten. One young fellow who has appeared in the local dock before, appeared on a charge of being drunk and disorderly on Simcoe street and was assessed the customary two dollars and costs, making a gross total of $5.75. The other was charged with driving a car whilst under the influence of liquor and was fined five dollars.

STUCK TO WHAT SHE SAID.

In one of the English Courts a lady, who had appeared more than once as a witness, was on this particular occasion asked her age by the presiding judge. "Thirty," said the lady. "Thirty!" said the judge; "why I have heard you give the same age in this court for the last three years". "Yes," responded the lady, "but then, you see, I'm not one of those persons who say one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow."

The Hot Weather Water Trips

The Steamer "Stoney Lake" Providing Splendid Outings for Our Citizens

Encouraged by the patronage accorded their Lindsay and Healey Falls special trips, the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. have billed the city for another of their water and rail excursions to Lindsay for Monday, July 24th. The charm and enjoyment of a water and rail trip through the beautiful Kawartha Lakes to Bobcaygeon and Lindsay is becoming more and more appreciated every season. The journey by the commodious steamer "Stoney Lake" affords a guarantee of ample room and accommodation and the cool breeze and varied scenery all along the route supplys a much appreciated break away from the heated city. Back to town same evening at 8.30 by special train, leaves no cause for complaint about lateness.

The "Stoney Lake's" excursion to Healey Falls last Monday was well attended, there being close to two hundred excursionists on board, who arrived back rested, refreshed and elated after this delightful water trip.

"Awh, what's the use o' lookin' sad,
And sayin' things 'a goin' bad?
Who wants to hear about all that?
Just take a trip on the "Stoney."

"By-law Was Too Simple For The Aldermen To Grasp Its Potentialities"

Former Sanitary Inspector Spence Speaks in Defence of the Original By-law Relating to the Collection of Nightsoil—1400 Ratepayers Are Adversely Effected—Rate Raised from $1.80 per Annum to $4.80.

Dear Sir,—As one of the 1400 or more ratepayers who are adversely affected by the action of the City Council in raising the price of nightsoil collection from 15 cents to 40 cents per month, and also as the originator of the bylaw, which met with the approval not only of the Provincial Board of Health but also of the majority of the citizens who were benefitted thereby, may I be allowed to say a word or two in defence of the bylaw. It has passed through the stages of construction, obstruction, destruction, leering in its wake ruction.

To put the matter in a nutshell, it was too simple a measure for the aldermen to grasp its potentialities.

Accustomed as they are to wrestling with abstruse and complex problems of hard headed finance that require the genius of a Rothschild to manipulate (though few of them I would wager, got beyond the 'pons asinorum' in mathematics) they could not realise the fact that 1400 closets cleaned out once a month at a cost of 15 cents produces a revenue of $2590 and the work is done at a cost to the city of $2191, the city is saying $329, plus $260, the cost of a dumping ground, making a net saving of $689.

This is the report that Ald. Edgar characterizes as "rosy enough except that it did not work out in that manner," and that the city was "going in the hole" every night.

The latter contingency was provided against by a clause in the contractors' agreement, which if carried out could not put the city in such a predicament.

The truth of the matter is as Ald. Edgar remarked at a former council meeting when the contract was cancelled and the bylaw repealed, they "did not understand the bylaw," and the result is that 1400 ratepayers, the majority of whom are working men have to submit to a tax of $4.80 per annum instead of $1.80.

Yours truly,
C. A. G. SPENCE

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

With The Boy Scouts

"Once you are a Scout you should always remain a Scout." Such advice coming from the lips of one so great and noble as the late Lord Kitchener commands the attention of all. Not long before he went to his watery grave he addressed a gathering of Boy Scouts when he made the above statement and said, always being a Scout meant making oneself efficient, doing one's best, helping other people and serving one's country. "But," he said, "don't merely do this while you are still a boy. Learn it at that time and make it a habit, so that when you are a grown up man you still keep on doing it, you still remain a Scout by doing your duty before all other things, by doing your duty even to death."

That the Boy Scouts of Manitoba are "good Scouts," who strive to live up to the principles of the movement is fully attested in the place they have taken and are continuing to take in the public service of our country. Though not a military organization in any sense of the term it is significant that out of seventy-three Scouts, who at the outbreak of the war, were officers in the Winnipeg district, fifty-five are now on active service. Besides these officers eighty-nine of the other Scouts have joined the colours. On account of age, the majority, of course, have been forced to remain at home. But even these have striven to uphold the name of the organization.

To have received the blessing of the Pope is the good fortune of the Boy Scouts of Uruguay in South America. Judging from a recent report of the doings of the Scouts in Uruguay, they merited this honoured tribute, for they have been "going strong." They have received the highest reward that Roman Catholic Scouts can get—the blessing of the Pope, together with his signed photograph. It will be pleasing news to all Roman Catholic Scouts to know that their efforts to make themselves good, efficient Scouts has the approval of the Pope himself.

Of particular interest at this time, when boys in every part of the country are seeking to belong to the Boy Scouts organization, is the test which has been set for the tenderfoot. It is interesting to note that no boy can become a full fledged Scout until he has passed the test. First of all he must satisfy the Scoutmaster of the troop he wishes to belong to that he knows the Scout law, signs and salute; the composition of the Union Jack; the right way to fly it, and he must know how to tie several knots. He must give his promise to do his duty to God and the King, to help other people at all times, and to obey the Scout Law.

The Boy Scouts of England were by no means the last to send congratulations to Sir John Jellicoe after the recent big sea fight with the German navy. Immediately after the fight Sir Robert Baden-Powell sent a message to Sir John, congratulating him on the splendid victory gained by the fleet. The following reply was received: "Please convey to the Boy Scouts the sincere thanks of all ranks of the grand fleet, including brother Scouts, for their kind telegram."

A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH

Two Year Old Daughter of Mrs. W. G. Perks, 593 George St. Fell a Distance of Fourteen Feet Breaking a Leg

Dorothy Isabel Perks, the two-year-old daughter of Mrs. W. G. Perks, 593 George street, had a most miraculuous escape from death this morning, when she fell over the balcony of her mother's house, to the ground below, a distance of fourteen feet, breaking her leg and receiving a severe shaking up. The injured child was removed to Nicholls' Hospital, where she is resting well.

The little girl had been sitting upon the balcony with her mother and whilst the attention of the latter was divered the child climbed up the railing of the balcony and, losing her balance, fell to the ground below. The child is fortunate to have escaped with injuries as slight as she did. To have struck a pavement below would likely have meant instant death.

The father of the child, W. G. Perks, is at present in France, having enlisted here with the Engineers eighteen months ago.

It is important in nursing a case of diphtheria to keep the patient lying down until the doctor has said that it is quite safe for him to sit up. There is always the danger of heart paralysis if the patient is allowed to sit up too soon.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE IN MESOPOTAMIA PLAN

So Says Carson, and Asquith Admits That Mistakes Were Made—Blames Gen. Nixon Latter Assured the Government That the Medical Supplies Were Adequate.

LONDON, July 19. — Premier Asquith intimated in the House of Commons that there was some basis for the adverse criticism of the conduct of the British expedition in Mesopotamia. After the battle of Ctesiphon last November, he said, General Sir John Nixon, who was then in command, telegraphed that the medical arrangements were quite satisfactory.

Later, Mr. Asquith continued, unofficial reports were received, which seemed to point to a very different state of affairs, and a commission was appointed to investigate the whole matter. The report of the commission had been received by the Government of India, which was holding it until the Indian commander-in-chief had an opportunity to submit his observations thereon. The commission reported that everything possible was now being done. Regarding the transport facilities, Mr. Asquith said, the necessity of attempting to relieve Kut-El-Amara was so urgent that it was thought right to push on the troops in advance of their transport.

Mistakes Were Made.

The Mesopotamian operations had excited widespread and legitimate interest and anxiety, the Premier continued, and incidents had occurred which had aroused a very great doubt whether the best means had been adopted to bring about the ends in view. Every step had been taken on the advice of the military authorities, and the defects in the medical and transport services had been remedied.

The Premier's remarks were brought out by demands for publication of the papers in regard to the Mesopotamian and Dardanelles expeditions. Mr. Asquith said the papers could not be published without assisting Great Britain's enemies and prejudicing the operations now in progress in Mesopotamia. The Premier promised to discuss this subject more at length in the House on Thursday.

Sir Edward Carson, speaking of the Mesopotamia expedition, said that "thousands of people in this country thought it had been conducted with criminal negligence."

Hurled Himself Before Passing Freight Train

WINDSOR, July 19.— A telegram received here from Galesburg, announced the death there by suicide of William J. Smith, a former resident of this city. Mr. Smith left Windsor nearly twenty years ago, and at Galesburg built up a large business in general trade.

For some time past he has been despondent, and this afternoon expressed the opinion to a friend that he feared he was losing his mind. Two hours later he hurled himself in front of a passing freight train, and was cut to pieces. He is survived by a widow and one daughter.

RAIN IS NEEDED TO SAVE RASPBERRIES

FARMERS ARE BUSY WITH THEIR HAY AND GRAIN.

Unless rain comes within the next few days raspberries, which all season have promised to be a bumper crop, will be a failure, according to the agricultural experts and farmers.

Even a slight rain now will help, although it is not thought that under any circumstances the crop will be a large one. Much of the fruit is drying on the bushes and some of it is dropping off. The weather during the next few days will decide the question of a large or small crop.

Much as the rain is needed for the raspberries the majority of the farmers do not want it. The hot weather is most favorable to the hay and grain crops, and except where fruit is grown extensively the gains from the other crops, it is expected, will fully make up for the loss in fruit.

ATHLETE WOUNDED IN BATTLE OF SOMME

LONDON, July 19.—Captain Arnold Jackson, the famous Oxford foot racer, who won the 1,500-metres race at the Olympic in Stockholm, was shot in the thigh in one of the engagements of the "great push" on the Somme. The wound is clean, it is stated, and his chances of recovery are excellent, although it is hardly likely he will ever be able to race again.

Jackson visited the United States about two years ago, taking part in the inter-varsity relay. He had acted as special correspondent at the front for the International News Service.

"What We Have to Say About Our Competitors"

Knocking has been widely used by salesmen with the result that a possible customer not only does not buy the first salesman's line, but does not purchase that of the second either, being turned against both and all similar products.

As an example take a boiler skimmer. If the second salesman "knocks" the design of and result obtained by the skimmer demonstrated by a first salesman, the chances are that you, as a factory manager, will be turned against mechanical boiler skimmers in general.

The best way to treat competitors is to say nothing. In this connection the Egg-O Baking Powder Co., of Hamilton, have issued a book of eight pages. The front page is headed: "What We Have to Say About Our Competitors!" The remaining pages are blank, and it drives home the old lesson that if we cannot say anything good about a person or a competitor or his products, say nothing.

The Above is from "The Canadian Manufacturer" JUNE 1916

If your competitor talks about you put him on the pay-roll. Never mind what he says as long as he talks.

A Queer Folk Those English

An echo of the great sea fight off Jutland, one which throws upon that lurid episode a certain not insignificant sidelight, is the following from a French weekly:

"Since even the Morning Post of London (says La Vie Parisienne) admits that it is so, our good friends, the English, will not be angry with us if we say that they are a queer folk. They recently won upon the sea a victory which may be fairly compared with that at Trafalgar, and they announced the event in a tone so little victorious that the world believed for full forty-eight hours that they had suffered defeat instead.

"It is true that William II. hastened to have public buildings and monuments draped with flags and to give a day's holiday to the school children of the Fatherland, in order that Germany might have time to console herself and do a little celebrating before learning of the irreparable losses suffered by the redoubtable high seas fleet. He knew first the extent of the loss, because the German ships, having fled, had got into port before the British ships.

"But the British knew at least that they had remained masters of the field. And they might at least have begun by telling us so. Really one should not play such tricks on one's friends."

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I noticed by your paper last night that the council had granted permission to the Metal Products Company to put in a siding to their factory for the purpose of shipping shells. While I am not against the concession to this company, or any other, if it will help them to compete and bring work to Peterboro, but the council should act fair with all parties, but it seems to me that new concerns that come to Peterboro can get anything that they ask for while the old established firms are refused any concessions.

The firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, who have been established in this city for 27 years, asked permission to put in a siding to their factory, so that they could ship in car lots to their western factory at Regina, and compete with the western manufacturers, and build up a larger business in Peterboro, and also employ more hands. Their application was refused although J. J. Turner & Sons were to bear all the expense of putting in the siding, which would have cost $600.

The Peter Hamilton Co. also applied at the same time to put in a siding to their factory, and their request was granted, but the siding was never put in.

Now, Mr. Editor, this is not British fair play, but it shows the kind of men we vote for and put in the council to run our business. However, I only hope I shall have the privilege to cast my vote next January for a number of the present council to stay at home and look after their own business—if they can. Thanking you, Mr Editor for the use of your valuable space, I remain, respectfully yours.

American Youth Wins War Cross

NEW YORK, July 19.—The French war cross, symbol of honourable service in the field, has been conferred on the historic parade ground at Sens, near Fontainehlep, among others, upon James Laurence Scanlan, an American enrolled in the Foreign Legion, whose home is in Cedarhurst, L.I.

Mrs. J. H. Scanlan, mother of the American youth, declared yesterday in her home in Cedarhurst that a desire for glory had impelled her son to leave for France with a comrade and neighbour, Russell Kelly, aboard a cattle boat three months after the great conflict started. Now that he had gained it she expressed the hope that he would speedily return to her. There was pride in her voice as she said this, however, and added: — 'Laurence has always been a good, sensible boy."

Scanlan is twenty-two years old and a graduate of the New York Electrical School. Neither his father, mother, two sisters nor two brothers could deter him from departing for the war front. He arrived in time to become a member of the original American squad in the first regiment of the Foreign Legion, of which he is one of the few survivors. His comrade, Russell Kelly, has long been missing and is reported dead.

Young Scanlan fought in some of the most bitter battles of the early days of the war, but, although frequently reported missing, escaped unscathed until the fight at Clarency, on June 16, 1915. There his thigh was shattered by German fire. He was removed to the hospital at Chateau de Passy, in Sommes, France, known also as the "Hopital Francaise de l'Amerique," where he has been for thirteen months, but now expects an early discharge.

An American nurse, Miss Florence Gordon, ministered to the young American. She returend to this country last December, aboard the Patria, of the Fabre line, to spend Christmas here. With her she brought a letter from her Long Island patient and pieces of shrapnel which had been extracted from his leg. These young Scanlan sent to his mother as "the best he could do, as he could not come himself."

GLASGOW PROVIDES FURNISHED FLATS

An interesting experiment is being undertaken by the Glasgow City Council in connection with the housing problem, a block containing twenty-four single-apartment dwellings, furnished ready for occupation, having just been completed in the Calton area.

The tenements are fitted with suitable dressers, cupboards, ranges, electric light and gas cooking grills, and other conveniences, while the furnishings are of a substantial but simple character. They are primarily intended to provide temporary shelter for married couples until they can find permanent abodes, and are to be let at weekly rentals of 6s. Although the cost for wear-and-tear of furnishings and necessary renewals is somewhat problematical, it is hoped that by careful management the scheme will prove self-supporting. Glasgow, it is believed, is the first municipality to undertake the provision of furnished dwellings.

STRATFORD FACTORIES ENLARGING PREMISES

PREPARE FOR WAVE OF PROSPERITY FOLLOWING END OF WAR.

STRATFORD, July 19.—That the manufacturers of Stratford are preparing to take advantage of the era of prosperity which is expected to follow the cessation of the war is indicated by the extensive additions which have been made during the summer.

The McLagan Furniture Co., Avon Knit, R. M. Ballantyne Co., and Williams-Trow Co. have all added to their floor space, while the Stratford Brass Co. is now erecting a substantial addition to its plant. It will be 42 feet square, two stories high.

This company, of which Alfred Hahn is manager, has been in the city only a few years, but has become well established, its brass fittings proving a valued link in the chain of products turned out here. It has recently purchased the building it now occupies, together with considerable ground.

MR. B. K. BERTRAM DIES SUDDENLY

Brother of Mr. Hugh Bertram of Peterboro Passes Away at Collin's Inlet

Well-Known Business Man.

Mr. Bertram was born in Peterborough in 1868, and was the second son of the late John Bertram. He has been actively associated with Toronto's business life for a number of years, and was favourably known by a large circle of personal and business friends. Besides his wife, he leaves three small children. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters, Hugh, of Peterborough, and John and Melville, of Toronto; Mrs. C. W. Pitt of Collin's Inlet, and Mrs. Thomas Bradshaw, wife of the city treasurer.

Mr. Bertram was employed by the Collin's Inlet Company for a number of years. The body will be brought to Toronto to-day for interment. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

RUSS PEASANTS AND LANDED GENTRY ARE WORKING TOGETHER

(By William Philip Simms.)

PETROGRAD, July 19.—City men and farmers, the landed gentry and villagers, are to-day a solid block in Russia, and under the name of "The Central Committee" are working might and main to support the army and the country generally.

The organization composed of landed gentry, peasants and village property owners is called the All-Russian Gemstvo Union. I told of this in a previous paper.

But the towns and cities of Russia have also organized themselves into a volunteer, salaryless citizens' group to assist the government wage war, their name being the All-Russian Municipality Union. And it is this group which, with the All-Russian Zemstvo Union, completes the Central Committee.

The Central Committee, whose members serve absolutely without pay, sits Sundays and week days in Petrograd, acting as a co-ordinating body, centralizing the work of the citizens of the whole empire.

HAVE NO RIVAL.

So far as I can find out this committee and these two great All-Russian Unions combined in it, have no counterpart anywhere in Europe or in the world.

In France the people are heart and soul with the government in their determination to fight the war to victory, cost what it may. In that country all sorts of organizations abound, providing hospitals, ambulances, refugee homes, feeding stations and the like. There is an end to their labours. But the government feeds, clothes, and equips its army through Commissions who deal with industrial corporations principally if not entirely.

In England it is the same. Lloyd George, upon assuming the post of minister of munitions, chose as his battle cry the mobilization of industry, which meant that the industrial plans of the land should be organized to produce munitions and other needfuls for the British army.

A VAST DIFFERENCE.

In Russia the difference is vast. Russia is an agricultural nation. Manufacturing corporations are few compared to England's vast enterprises, or to those of France or Germany. Russia is 80 per cent. peasant.

So the peasants got together with land-owners and villagers, forming the All-Russian Zemstvo union. And the towns people and city dwellers got together in the All-Russian Municipality Union, the two getting together in a central committee — a volunteer citizen organization, not of manufacturers, not of commercial kings, but of rich people, poor people, gentry and peasants — offering their services gratis to the land.

There is, however in Russia an organization resembling Lloyd George's mustering of English industry. It is called the war industry committee and is of considerable importance.

Prior to six years ago there was no industrial group in Russia. Manufacturers worked separately, every man for himself. But with the coming of the Douma, the Russian congress, they felt the need of an organization which would look out for their joint interests in possible legislation to come. Also a new commercial treaty with Germany was to be negotiated in 1914, and here again Russian industry wished to make itself heard.

MUTUAL INTERESTS.

So about 1910 a "Congress of representatives of trade and commerce" met and organized themselves into what corresponds to American merchants' and manufacturers' associations, the object of which was to look out for the mutual interests of its members.

Last year this group of men, taking the tip from Lloyd George in England, and seeing the necessity of giving aid to the army particularly as regards munitions and kindred military needs, formed the war industry committee. This body of men to-day is giving great help to the Russian government.

This is the organization similar to those in England and France. But the Zemstvo and Municipality unions with their central committee are in themselves unique — as is the co-operative movement of Russia with its nearly a hundred million adherents scattered from the Baltic across the frozen steppes of Siberia to the Pacific, from the White sea to the Black.

The city of Moscow began the municipality union after the big Russian retreat. Mayor Chelnokov, the tremendously alive head of the municipal council of Russia's second capital, issued invitations to the other cities and large towns of the empires to join in a city dweller's organization similar to the Zemstvos' or rural one, and they all responded.

Like the Zemstvo, the Municipality union said to the Russian government "Here we are; use us!"

It was soon seen that as the two unions are doing practically the same work, much overlapping might be obviated and more effective work accomplished if a merger could be effected.

FORMED IN 1915.

So the central committee of the All-Russian Zemstvo and municipal unions was formed about the first of July, 1915.

The committee's work has been phenomenal. It has supplied the army, at the army's request, with munitions, munition boxes, daggers, spades, bags, hatchets, snippers to cut barbed-wire, stoves, axes, wearing apparel, barbed wire, hospital supplies, baths and scores of other things.

In England, France and Russia the war industry organizations work for profit as well as for patriotic motives. In Russia the most important organizations by far are the purely citizen ones, and these work without profit to themselves.

They demand but one thing, and that is to serve. Nor do they ever offer excuses by saying this or that is not their kind of work. On one occasion they lent the army 300,000 labourers to dig trenches and fed these workers while they dug. On another they mobilized civilians to build military bridges.

If the army commissary asked the committee for supplies, the commissary got them, whatever the nature. In January of this year it put in a demand for 24,000,000 articles of clothing and the committee, after consulting the Zemstvo and municipality unions, said all right, the commissary should have them.

The work of the citizen committee is not confined to the army. It has opened innumerable creches, taking care of tens of thousands of children, fed seven to eight million refugees, housed the homeless, clothed the naked.

And all for Russia.

REPORT READY BY NEXT WEEK

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 19.—The Meredith-Duff shell enuiry is still being revised by the commissioners and will likely be ready for next week, being first submitted to the government. The report was expected yesterday.

TALES FROM FRANCE

A FIGHT IN A CRATER

To how many of the thousands of men and women at home, who diligently read the papers with anxious hearts and interested minds do the brief sentences of the official news bring out any vital meaning. Imagination, however penetrating cannot infuse reality into the recruiting phrases — phrases often followed by the words, 'fighting continues." It is difficult for them to realize that however inactive our armies may appear on the map, there is a ceaseless and remorseless activity whenever they confront the enemy, like the uneasy motion rippling along the body of a great snake. It is not a battle, it is just a "stunt" as they call it, an evening's entertainment. All day long, from dawn onwards, with the regular exceptions of silence during meals—as an officer remarked, "the war here is being fought between two nations, each of whom is inordinately fond of its food"—the guns of both sides fire intermittently upon the opposing front until dusk steals over the lines, cool and fresh, and gradually the shelling falters and ceases.

The Attack Begins.

"The moon did not rise until one hour after dark, and as we stood on the parados of the trenches we were occupying, the silence was hardly broken except for a few casual short bursts of machine gun fire; the gloom was hardly pierced except for a few brilliant Very lights rising and falling here and there from the German lines, for all the world like Roman candles. We had been informed of the time at which it was intended to rush the lips of a crater the Germans were holding, and were comparing watches, when, without other warning, there arose in the air in front of us a rapid crescendo of sound as of huge kettle drums—the attack had been launched and the bombers were now at work. A moment later widely along the line came the rat-a-tat of the machine guns, and the short, angry little cracks of rapid rifle fire, and at the same instant the fireworks began—not one by one at long intervals as before, but in twos and threes along the line, and at the threatened point so fast that a dozen were in the air at a time. The brilliant lights were shot up, as the Germans tried to see the number of their assailants and the points at which they were being rushed. Madder and madder rose the frantic beating of the kettle drums as bombs were hurried up on both sides. And seen by the rising and falling flares, the whole earth in and around the crater grew red with the bursting bombs and steamy with the clouds of dust, till it seemed a devils caulron near where no man could live. And up from behind the threatened points rose red lights as the Germans signalled to their artillery that they needed their assistance—not once, but many times the red lights rose, and the neighbouring Germans took up the call on their own account till an officer standing beside me remarked dryly, "Fritz seems to be getting the wind up alright"—a phrase out here, the origin of which no man knoweth, forgetting in a panic—and there the artillery bezan, ours as well as theirs.

Neither side dared shell the lips of the crater, round which with bayonet, bomb and knobbery the desperate hand-to-hand fighting was going on; each took up with shrapnel the work of preventing reinforcements being rushed up by shelling the support lines and the main communication trenches.

And now at the beating of the devilish kettle drums and the ceaseless crackling of the rifles was added the roar of the guns and the howitzers, with the sharp scream of the first and the leisurely whistle of the second, followed by the bright flash, white smoke and quick burst of the shrapnel and the heavy krr-umps of the howitzer. We stood in the midst of the great ring, the outer edges of which gave out the wide, dull, red flare of the firing guns, lighting the heavens, and in which in front of us the earth seemed to dance and roar.

In a few minutes the terrific Bacchanlic dance of the bombs died down a little and we said, "They've got it; now they've got to hold it!" After a few minutes more and it all broke out again with even more terrific fury, as the Germans counter attacked. The scene, much more awful than Dore's illustration of Hell in Dante's Inferno, stayed constant for another ten minutes, and the sounds were those of some of master madman's music, and then little by little the fury lessened; the beating of the kettle drums became spasmodic rather than a continuous, restless roar; the rifle fire came in gasps, there fragmentary silences in the sound of the shells.

Bit by bit the tranquility of the summer night resumed its place, and then all went still, stiller than it had been all day. The "stunt" was over. A little later we heard it had been quite successful and our casualties surprisingly few. From silence to silence was just half an hour."

On this particular occasion there was a sequel. Two days later when it seemed to the casual observer as if the Germans were resigned to the success of the "stunt," they broke the dreamy silence of a sunny afternoon by pouring upon our trench a rain of shells for over five hours, after which the ownership of the pitted and tortured ground changed hands once again. "Fighting continues."

(The story of the attack I heard from an officer who took part, and it is given to you practically as I got it.)

The Masonic Grand Lodge In Session

Sixty-First Annual Meeting is Being Held in London

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Ont., July 19.—The sixty-first annual meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada opened here at noon with over five hundred delegates from all over Canada in attendance. The Masons were officially welcomed by Mayor Stevenson. The address of Grand Master Luke dealt especially with the war, lauding the prompt and certain answer that Canada gave the Motherland when the call came for help. The Canadian public has learned from the struggle the important lesson of preparedness and the undeniable effectiveness of a united empire. He paid the highest tributes to Earl Kitchener, both as a soldier and as a Mason. The Grand Master said the finances and growth of membership were both satisfactory. Masons in Canada were numbered at 69,850

Every third garage in Canada is a Ford sales and service station

Service is only important to you when you need it—then it is very important.

Even the best of motor cars, sometimes require attention. If you are a Ford owner, a third of Canada's garages assure you this attention when you need it—without inconvenience and at a minimum of expense.

Every one of the five hundred and fifty Ford Dealers in Canada carries a complete stock of Ford spare parts and is competent to make repairs and adjustments when occasion demands.

No matter where you go, Ford Service is never out of reach if you drive a Ford.

Like the Ford car itself—Ford Service is universal.

OAK HALL

409-11 GEORGE STREET, PETERBORO M. J. MAHER, Mgr.

When the two trains of the Coop and Lent United Monster Shows roll in on the siding of the G. T. R. in Peterborough early to-morrow morning, a goodly number of Mr. Jonnie old boys as well as crowds of eager little Jonnie young boys, their Sisters and their Cousins, and their Aunts, are sure to be well in evidence for the interesting event.

There is an indefinable lure about the Circus that is never completely overcome—that compels interest and takes Mr. Old Boy back to the days when he was Jonnie young boy like the little fellows there that will be dodging ceaselessly everywhere but the right where, or rooted to the spot in gaping amazement as the travelling city of wonder is unloaded with a speed that makes their eyes bulge.

The Coop and Lent Shows are extensive and the Exhibition expensive. The bosses and mechanics of a well-regulated Circus are graduated masters in their different lines, and like well oiled machinery their work fits like a unit, so that the loading and unloading of the trains, the constructing and removing of the huge amusement institutions day after day is one of the modern marvels of organization and execution and the ordinary beholder finds it difficult to comprehend how it is so smoothly accomplished, or in fact accomplished at all.

The Coop and Lent Circus is a 3-ring aggregation with numerous acts and features of high-class American and European novelties of every arenic description, Fancy riding, Hippodrome speed contests, trained animals, and a famous corps of graduate fun-makers who intersperse their artistic nonsense and buffmeries throughout the entire whirlwind performance of skill, art, daring, beauty and sensation, providing a continuous two-hour of keen enjoyment, wonderment and happiness for the multitudes of Jonnie old boys and old girls, and little Jonnie young boys and young girls, that are sure to be in the big canvas coliseum to-morrow.

The big Street parade is declared by the Press of other Cities "A revelation in street pageantry." The cavalcade, fully a mile in length, will leave the show grounds between 10:00 and 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Memories of Matty Will Remain After His Departure

The severest shock that New York baseball fans have had in many a day is the announcemnt of the passing of Christie Mathewson. For sixteen years the big boxman has been the idol of not only Manhattan enthusiasts, but of baseball fans the country over. His services to the Giants cannot be over-estimated. The club used to be a one-man team, and Mathewson was that one man. On his shoulders Manager McGraw rested a great responsibility, and Matty carried it with dignity and honour.

No baseball player has ever developed pitching so consummately as Mathewson. When he was in his hey day, he knew the weaknesses of every batsman in th game and this knowledge of his opponents made him an invaluable asset to McGraw's club.

Without Mathewson the Giants would never have enjoyed the prosperity and success which they have had during the last fifteen years. It was mainly through his efforts that the team won the National League flag five times and the world's series once. In 1905 it was Mathewson who, single-handed, defeated the Athletics.

Big Sax, as he was affectionately known to every New Yorker, will be sadly missed at the Polo Grounds. As long as the strong concrete pillars stand at the Brush Stadium, the fond memory of Matty will remain.

Baseball in Japan Is Mostly a Riot

EPITHETS ARE HURLED AND FISTS FREELY USED BY PLAYERS AND FANS AT GAMES.

In adopting baseball with enthusiasm Japan has developed a fan who transcends his original model, according to Saito Man, the Japanese writer, who deprecates fanism and the fan from the lofty standard of bushido. Writing of a college game he says:

"Now, these noisy 'fans'—the name is very appositely chosen—mass themselves in a great crowd and brandish over their heads improvised paper baggers and lanterns, of various shapes, shake sticks and poles, bellow with horns, cry forth at the top of their lungs all kinds of ejaculations. What do they mean? What is the use and purpose of all this crazy disturbance? They are not content with 'fanning' their own team; they must abuse and down their 'enemy' terribly.

"Witness some of the cries heard on the Tokio High School ground recently, when the high school fought with the Keio team. The high school cried: 'Drivelling idiots!' The Keio retorted 'Suicide house!' 'We are gaikushi in three years' time,' the former boasted. Then don't come borrowing money,' jeered the latter. And so on. They would often come to fists.

"When the game was over the 'fans' of the winning side would go stark mad. They would cry themselves hoarse, singing 'We have won—we have won' and other idiotic songs, and they brandish their flags and other things, throwing very abusive and contemptuous epithets in the face of the defeated team. Then they would probably spend the remainder of the day in riotous feeding or drinking, like German students, while the crestfallen 'fans' of the defeated team would disperse, nursing a dangerous grudge in their minds, and seek spirituous consolation somewhere."

Football Fans Burn Stadium; End Game

Serious Rioting at Montevideo Over Championship Game; Many Persons Injured.

MONTEVIDEO, July 19.—Rioting, in which the stadium was burned and in which the police were compelled to drive the spectators from the grounds, broke up a forball game between the Uruguayans and Argentines, which was to have decided the championship of South America.

The season's play between teams representing Uruguay, Argentina, Chili and Brazil had brought the final down to the two former teams. Tickets for the game beyond the capacity of the field had been sold, and thousands of persons broke through the gates, incaded the seats and poured out onto the field lines.

When the game started the Uruguayans carried the ball down the field and made an attempt for a goal. The try failed and the spectators therespon invaded the field, making further play impossible. The police at first were unable to cope with the frenzied mob, which set fire to the stadium on three sides, but finally charged the rioters and drove them from the grounds. Several persons were injured in the disturbance.

Japanese Tennis Player is Good

Usage has robbed an invasion of American lawn tennis courts from across the Atlantic of somewhat of its savor of a decade and a half ago. Gore, Black, Pim, Mahoney, Lowe, Dixon, the Dohertys, Brookes, Wilding—these and more in stalwart parade have marched over our whitewashed lines and ranged from baseline to net with at least their share of success in the quest for the Davis Cup, as well as for American titles.

But now comes an almost unheralded drive from the opposite direction. Over the Pacific comes a small, Oriental, unaccustomed to American ways dialects, beverages, and edibles, but well versed in the manipulation of the American racquet—so thoroughly versed, in fact, that he sweeps aside a representative field of highly-tested lawn tennis players from the two seaboards, and decorates his imperturbable bosom with the Empire State's title insignia.

If the Japanese, Ichiya Kumgae, now tennis champion of New York State and the Orient, accomplishes no notable sequence to his feat at Utica, he will still have justified amply his invasion of the Occident. His partner in the doubles, Hachishiro Mikami, is certainly far his inferior in playing force and skill, yet the combination reached the final round in the Mississippi Valley tournament and the semi-finals in the competition of the past week at Utica. The progress of Kumagae and Mikami in the doubles rendered the more remarkable by the fact that they must certainly have difficulty in finding wholly worthy opponents capable of giving them the hard practice necessary to develop doubles tactics and team work in their native Nippon.

If remnants remain of the Mikado's one-time ire at the sovereign State of California, solace may be found by that exalted potenate in the fact that one of his young subjects has demonstrated on American soil his mastery at the chief court game over at least one of the phenomenal group of California players. Any linzering doubt that may have survived Kumagae's two previous defeats of Griffin on Far Eastern courts as to the relative strength of the two must be dispelled by the ease with which the Japanese wrought victory on Saturday. And Griffin is no mean player. On the contrary, he is one of the country's best. The Japanese players will certainly have reason to be pleased with the results of their trip, and they will just as certainly have reason for pleasure over their welcome and their treatment here in the Antipodes.

"My dear," said Mrs. Strongmind, "I want you to accompany me to the town hall to-morrow night." "What for?" queried the meek and lowly other half of the combine. "I am to lecture on the 'Dark Side of Married Life,'" explained Mrs. S "and I want you to sit on the platform and pose as one of the illustrations."

CAMPAIGN OF 1916 PROMISES WELL FOR ALLIES

The military correspondent of the London Times, writing from Northern France takes an optimistic view of the outlook for the campaign of 1916. He says:

There can be no doubt that as the days wear on a feeling of confidence in the successful issue of the campaign of 1916 increasingly prevails among those who are best informed of our resources and of the troubles of the enemy.

We have continually growing numbers of men and guns and better preparation for our next effort. The stream of troops and draffts which reaches our front flows ceaselessly, and we receive constant proofs of the admirable efforts made by those who direct our strategy at home towards the building up of a formidable army. The French are justly proud of their feat of holding up, all by themselves, and for four long months, the German enemy in a position none too favourable upon the Meuse, and they are pleased that their valor and constancy have given time to their other Allies to complete their preparations. The extraordinary successes of the Russian Southern Armies have aroused enthusiasm, and as the twenty-six Austrian divisions directly involved in the Austrian defeats are credited with the loss of over 200,000 men, these particular divisions, forming more than the half of the Austrian Armies on the Russian front, are regarded as out of court for a considerable time.

The naval battle of Jutland is also now completely understood, and it is expected that the German Navy will not be worth much for some months to come. Our blockade is not relaxed and the increasing strain imposed by our Navy upon Germany will, it is felt, bring Germany to her senses and make her understand what it costs to incur the hostility of England.

The arrest of the Austrian offensive from Trentino, and the resuscitation of the Serbian army, are both causes for real satisfaction. The Austrian offensive has now involved all the troops which took part in it, and only one division is believed to remain intact and in reserve. The Italian counter-offensive is beginning, and as the masses which Gen. Cadorna has collected are adequate for all purposes it is hoped that this campaign will soon assume a different complexion, and that Austria may not be able to draw much reinforcements for Galicia from the Italian front.

German Reserves.

There is still no sign of any fresh formation from the interior of Germany, and there are, on the contrary, indirect proofs that the creationof new units must be most difficult. captured many prisoners of the 1917 classes in the field. These youths of 16 to 19 have had only three months training, and their incorporation in the fighting units so early shows that the supply of men is running short. Further, it is believed that the 1918 class is now being called to the depots, and these 17 to 18-year-old youths abroad, who are always recalled last, are now being ordered home, showing that youths of the same age in Germany are already in training. There has, again, recently been evidence that German regiments in France are being filled up from depots of German regiments in Russia, and Hindenburg is a man who has more sympathy from us that from the Staff Headquarters.

All these things are straws which show how the wind blows. No one here ventures to estimate how many German reserves are left, in addition to the 1917 and 1918 classes. The Germans, in order to set free more men for the field, are compelling more prisoners to work in the munition factories, and are indenting freely upon the male population of Poland for the same and for industrial or agricultural purposes. It is sheer conjecture to suggest figures, and the best-informed people in this part of the world do not venture to offer any.

German Machine Intact.

With all these circumstances to our credit the fact remains that the German fighting machine is still intact and has to be broken down before we can think of peace. This task remains an exceedingly hard one, and not one man or gun or shell can legitimately be spared from its accomplishment. We cannot afford to reduce Germany by starvation alone. She must be beaten in the field so that the ruling military caste may be convinced, as profoundly as the poor people of Germany appear to be convinced, that the game is up. Even when the supply of men begins to fail, the Germans will only diminish their field formations—for instance, the 4th Battalions which exist in the case of many regiments—and they will fight on defensively as best they can, and for as long as they can, trusting to their valor, science, and equipment to steal victory out of the fire. What we can say with confidence, after reviewing the whole position, is that the conditions are favourable to us, and that it only remains for generalship and hard fighting to take advantage of them.

BOWLING

There will be a meeting of the Executive and all skips to-night for the purpose of arranging the rinks for the coming full rink contest. Every skip is requested to be on hand.

Elliot, Robt. [illegible]11
Pratt has still to meet Fitzgerald and Taylor.

They Needed It Most.

A regiment was drawn up for church parade in the barrack square, but the church was being repaired, and it was found that it could only hold half of them. "Sergeant-Major," ordered the colonel, "tell all the men who don't want to go to church to fall out!" A large number quickly availed themselves of the privilege. "Now, sergeant-major," said the colonel, "dismiss all the men who did not fall out, and march the others to church—they need it most!"

WEDDING BELLS

CUMMER—FOOTE.

A quiet wedding took place at St. John's Church this morning, when Edith Maud, daughter of the late Frederick Foote was married to Mr. Oscar Syrian Cummer of Palmer, Sask. The bride, who was unattended, wore a travelling suit of midnight blue taffeta, with Georgette crepe blouse and Panama hat and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Cornish. Mr. and Mrs. Cummer left on the 11.27 train for Montreal, and on their return will reside in Palmer, Sask.

MRS. ROBT. FANNING.

Mrs. Robt. Fanning passed peacefully away at 4.30 o'clock Wednesday morning at 147 London street. Mrs. Fanning had reached the advanced age of 70 years, having been born in the County Monaghan, Ireland. Her maiden name was Matilda Stewart, and she was a daughter of the late Samuel Stewart and the widow of the late Robt. Fanning, who preceased her five years ago.

She was of a loving and kindly disposition and had many friends. She has been in poor health for the last year. In religion Mrs. Fanning was a Presbyterian and a devoted member of St. Paul's church up to the last few years.

She leaves to mourn her loss, one son, Samuel J. of the B. F. Ackerman Co., and one daughter, Edythe M. who resides at home.

The funeral, which will be private, will be conducted by the Rev. Robt. Pogue on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Friends will please omit flowers.

DRAFT BELGIANS LIVING IN GERMANY

NOW THE MATTER IS CALLED TO THE ATTENTION OF NEUTRALS—REPEALED BELGIAN LAW INVOKED BY GERMANS.

Emmanuel Havenith, the Belgian Minister to the United States, has filed with Secretary of State Lansang a protest in which it is charged that Germany is forcing Belgians residing in Germany to fight against their countrymen, an act which it is stated, violates Article 23 of the Hague Convention, of which Germany is one of the signatory powers, and "all the recognised rules of warfare." The protest takes the form of an official note to the government of the United States.

"The Government of the King," says the note, "has, on various occasions, protested against the violations of the Law of Nations of which the German authorities have been guilty in Belgium. The German Government is now preparing to accomplish a particularly unjustifiable act; it has resolved to force a number of Belgian citizens to take up arms against their own country. Such an act has in all times been regarded as one of the most grave outrages that can be committed against a people, because it reaches even the conscience of the unfortunate victims."

The note then calls attention to "The Rules Respecting the Laws and Customs of War on Land," annexed to Convention IV. of the Hague Convention of 1907, which formally forbids such action on the part of any power signatory to that convention, stating that a belligerent is "forbidden to compel the nationals of a hostile party to take part in the operations of war directed against their own country."

Since February last, the note says, the Belgian Government has been advised that the German authorities have been claiming the right to draft into the military service of Germany, Belgians of military age, who have resided for a certain period on German territory. A large number of such drafts, it is charged, were made during the month of March.

GERMANY'S DEFENSE.

In response to the demands of the Spanish Embassy at Berlin, constantly reiterated, the German Government replied that it was confining itself to an application of an article of the Belgian Civil Code, "by virtue of which Belgian subjects residing abroad without intention of returning, lose their nationality," and that the German government "therefore considered that it was within its right in drafting into the army as 'heimatios' those who have fixed their residence in Germany."

"This argument," says the note, "falls to the ground upon a brief examination of the legislation now in force. The question of nationality is regulated in Belgium by the law of June 8, 1909, which does not in any of its articles, provide for loss of the quality of Belgian on account of residence abroad without intention to return."

It is then pointed out that the article on which the Germans base their claim to draft Belgians resident in Germany, into the German Army, was abrogated in 1909.

It is a legal principle, the Minister adds, that forfeiture of citizenship cannot be presumed, and that under the Civil Code "the absence of intention to return must therefore be proven. * * * In the absence of such proof the Belgian subject would retain his nationality no matter how long his sojourn has been in a foreign cuntry, even though he were born in such foreign country and had never quitted it."

Since the article of the Civil Code on which the Germans rely was abrogated in June, 1909, "it is obviously unnecessary," the Belgian government contends, "that the acts which of themselves preclude the intention to return should be prior to the abrogation of this legal stipulation; in case of contests by the parties interested, it is for the Belgian courts to decide."

Of the efforts of the Spanish Ambassador to Germany, in behalf of the drafted Belgians, the note says:

"When the Spanish Embassy called their attention to the fact that Article VII. of the Civil Code was no longer in force they replied simply they were not unaware of the fact, but that they thought themselves within their rights in applying the article to all Belgians established in Germany prior to June 8, 1909.

NO JUDICIAL TEST APPLIED.

"Thus, for a Belgian to have fixed his domicile in Germany before the promulgation of the present law is deemed sufficient reason for the German government to presume and to decide on its own authority, even in the face of appearances to the contrary, that he has abandoned his own country with the intention of never seeing it again. The interested party denies such intention, but his denials are in vain. There is not the slightest effort to produce proof, no recourse to the competent judicial power. The majority of our fellow countrymen in Germany have gone there to engage in commerce or to manage industrial concerns, and this circumstance at once excludes any application to them of Article VII. of the Civil Code: all of them have satisfied their military obligations in Belgium, which implies beyond doubt, the intention of remaining faithful to their native land; a great number of them, as the German authorities know, have temporarily interrupted their stay in the empire in order to go and serve in the army, which indicates an undeniable intention to return: questioned by the Burgomasters of their communes they have all expressed their detesmination to remain Belgian. Finally, the German government themselves, have since the commencement of hostilities treated them as subjects of an enemy power. Nevertheless the Imperial government has resolved to enroll them in its army and in spite of absence of evidence to the contrary, in spite of their denials, it insists that they have definitely abandoned their native country.

"If current events do not render superfluous any further demonstration in that respect, the preceding statement of facts will in itself be sufficient to enlighten public opinion in regard to the judicial arguments of the German government.

"Moreover, the King's government has grave reason to believe that the new measures have been applied to Belgians who left their native country several years after the promulgation of the law of June 8, 1909. This is proof that Article XVII. of the Civil Code has been cited only in order to give an appearance of justification to the most inexcusable attack upon the law of nations."

Because of the fact that the Spanish government has not been successful in its efforts to secure the liberation of Belgians drafted into the German army, the Belgian government, the note concludes, considers it its duty to bring the matter to the attention of the allied and neutral governments, and "to protest to them energetically against the unprecedented outrage of which a large number of its nationals have been made victims."

FOUR CARS OF OIL LIKELY COVER THE NEEDS OF STREETS

Already two cars of road oil have been used on the streets, and a third is on tap. The last one is a cheaper grade, with a noticeable tarry odor that has been responsible for a few minor complaints. Mayor Duffus stated this afternoon that another car of first-class oil would likely be ordered to complete the season's work. Each car oils 3 2-3 miles of road, and four cars will provide for about fourteen miles. Mayor Duffus remarked that the blacker oil used recently is not an inferior oil and that those who regard tar as malodorous may take comfort from the fact that it will soon disppear.

FACING THE INEVITABLE.

Philadelphia Church Does the Practical Thing Respecting Autos.

To fight fire with fire is an admirable method where fire is concerned and other extinguishers fail. Why shouldn't the application of the system be serviceable in other fields? Like cures like, and there are poisons that neutralize one another.

Now for the special application. The churches, many of them, realize that the automobile is not an encourager of church going. The allurements of a ride through the town, or about the countryside, are hard to resist. The automobile is responsible for many empty seats. What can be done about it?

In certain churches all they do is to lament the affliction. They can't legislate against it; they can't bar it from the streets. It has come to stay, no doubt, but they said the same thing of the bicycle. Anyway, the automobile is here, and it is very comfortable, and very exhilarating, and very alluring. How can these charms be met?

A Philadelphia congregation thinks it can answer the question in a practical way. Instead of standing back and abusing the cars, it comes to the front each Sunday and marshals its automobiles and sends them out right and left with orders to gather up the parishioners and give them a free ride to church. It's a delicate attention and not to be lightly turned down. The congregation realizes it can't fight the automobile, and so it fraternizes with them.

The plan is said to work well. The plan of giving motion-picture shows under church auspices is said to work well, too. And the lesson would seem to be that it is well to meet the inevitable and make the best of it.

BRITISH PREPARE TO RESUME THE OFFENSIVE

French Make Successful Drives Against German Lines

British Artillery Is Systematically Pounding The German Lines

Every Foot of the New German Positions is Being Heavily Shelled in Prepartion for a New Attack--French Troops Resume Their Offensive on Both Sides of the River Somme With Successful Drives Against the German Lines.

400 PRISONERS CAPTURED

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN NORTHERN FRANCE, July 20.—(Special Cable)—Every foot of the new German positions behind the lines captured by the British north of the Somme is being carefully and slowly prepared for a new attack.

Giant British shells are now dropping upon German works from guns stationed miles to the rear. British artillery pieces of large and small calibre, acting in unison, are systematically pounding the new German first lines.

The roar of the guns is continuous, and resembles the heavy roll of thunder. The Germans are replying only occasionally. Either they are seriously out-gunned, or are saving their ammunition.

British aircraft without molestation is directing the fire of the artillery. Since the beginning of the Anglo-French push, German aircraft have been surprisingly absent. Allied flyers and balloon observers have been working in perfect security, obtaining most valuable information. High British officers say that the purpose of the British offensive is not speed, but to recover by slow, steady pushes, every yard of invaded French and Belgian territory at a minimum expenditure of human blood, and by heavy expenditure of powerful explosives of which there is an ample supply. Fighting must go on below as well as above grounds. The Germans have catacombed all villages to each shell fire. At Bazentin-Legrand for instance, the underground caverns sheltered 1,500 men.

The entire Anglo-French front on the Somme offensive area, as far as the eye can see, literally swarms with men and material.

PARIS, July 20.—French troops resumed their offensive on both sides of the River Somme last night with successful drives against the German lines both northwest and southwest of Peronne, it was officially announced to-day.

North of the Somme French infantry established new lines along the Combles-Clery narrow gauge railway, taking four hundred prisoners. South of the Somme, French troops stormed and captured the entire first line trench between Barleux and Soyecourt.

Russians Nearing Passes Through The Carpathians

Infantry Pressing Way Onward to the Fertile Lands of Hungary---Foe Offensive Was Frustrated---Eighty-five Turkish Officers and Twelve Hundred Men Captured By the Russians.

HARBOUR BOMBARDED

PETROGRAD, July 20.—Russian infantry in Galicia is advancing toward the passes of the Carpathians which lead into Hungary. Further north, in the marsh region, the official statement says an attempt of Austro-German forces to take the offensive was broken. In the Caucasus the Russians have made further advances.

The announcement follows:

"On the Riga front artillery engagements continue.. At Lake Miadzial our infantry and lake flotilla, under Lieut. Olschevsky, made a surprise attack on the Germans in the night, throwing them into complete panic.

"On the Stokhod there was artillery fighting at many places.

"We repulsed by our artillery fire an attempt on the part of the enemy to take the offensive north of the Odzer marsh.. Owing to the heavy rains, the Dniester has risen almost 2½ metres, destroying Austrian bridges, buttresses and ferry boats.

"On our left flank, in the region of the rivers Black and White Tcheremosche, southwest of Kuty, our infantry is advancing toward the mountain defiles.

"In the Caucasus, on our right wing, in the region of Djivislik, south of Trebizond and Baibart, and west of Baiburt, we made considerable advances everywhere, dislodging the Turkish rear-guard. In recent days our columns have captured 85 Turkish officers, more than 1,200 men, one heavy gun and five machine guns.'

BOMBS FELL ON CRUISERS.

BERLIN, July 20.—The bombardment by German naval aircraft of the Russian harbour of Reval, on the Gulf of Finland, was announced yesterday by the German Admiralty. Bombs were dropped on cruisers and other warships, numerous hits being observed ,one submarine being seen to have been hit four times.

DROPPED THIRTEEN BOMBS.

PETROGRAD, July 20.—The following official announcement was made here: "Early Tuesday morning four enemy aeroplanes dropped thirteen bombs on the town of Reval.'

British Retake Ground Lost To The Enemy

German Attacks Repulsed at all Points—Russians Occupy Important Passes in the Carpathians—Lemberg is Threatened.

LAST MINUTE DESPATCHES

LONDON, July 20.—British recaptured ground lost to the enemy with heavy losses to the Germans. All attacks on other points repulsed.

RUSSIAN SUCCESS.

PETROGRAD, July 20.—Russians occupy two important passes in the Carpathians. Way opened into Hungary. German communications to Lemberg seriously threatened.

A TURKISH CLAIM.

LONDON, July 20. —A Constantinople despatch claims the Turks captured 6,000 Italians and 24 guns in an engagement in Tripoli.

PEOPLE HAVE FEARS.

LONDON, July 20.—Swiss despatches state that the German military is having great difficulty in subduing the fear of the population in towns on the Rhine. No soldiers are now left in the garrisons.

A FRESH EFFORT.

LONDON, July 20.—Germans make a fresh effort to take Verdun.

Barn Was Blown Down Near Bobcaygeon

Severe Storm in The North Country —Mr. and Mrs. James Switzer Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

INTERESTING CAREER

Bobcaygeon, July 20.—The extreme heat of last week has already had effect. On Sunday afternoon a heavy storm passed over. In the village no rain fell, but there was a heavy rain at Little Bob bridge, and in North Emily in the vicinity of King's Wharf, assumed the proportions of a tornado. A new barn of Mr. John O'Neill, almost completed, was blown to the ground; another log barn of Mr. Sullivan, was blown down ,and the barn of Mr. William O'Neill moved on its foundations. Fences were levelled in all directions, and the cattle of the neighborhood had to be rounded up and put into a field of Mr. Michael O'Neill, which was fenced with wire fencing. Sunday was the hottest day for some years, standing at 94 in the shade at noon. Church services were held at a disadvantage in the sweltering heat.

MISS ORR'S WILL FOUND.

After much speculation the question has at last been settled, and the will of the late Miss Mary H. Orr has been found. Miss Orr passed away in Toronto on June 24th, after an illness from mid-winter, without giving any information as to where her will was, or the combination of locks to obtain access. An expert was brought from Toronto, and unlocked the safe, and a search among the papers revealed her will. By the same she has appointed Mr. W. C. Moore of Bobcaygeon, one of her executors; the other two gentlemen being residents outside of Canada. The other speculative question as to whether Miss Orr left the village any legacy, will of course be known in a few days.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. James Switzer celebrated their golden wedding on Saturday evening, July 15th, in the presence of a few friends who gathered in for the occasion, and of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Neville.

Mr. and Mrs. Switzer were married at the parsonage, Fenelon Falls, fifty years ago, July 15th, then a log building one mile out of the present village on the Lindsay road, by the Rev. John Sanderson, after the banns had been duly published for three weeks from the pulpit. They went in a lumber waggon to have the ceremony performed, and found a tree across the road on their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Switzer are both descended from U. E. Loyalist stock and came originally from the township of Camden in Addington county. Their marriage certificate was written all through in a good hand. Miss Switzer was originally a Miss Day.

LOST VALUABLE HORSE.

Mr. S. Pulver of the village here, lost a valuable horse on Sunday afternoon. While driving into Harvey, near Nogey's Creek Bridge, his horse suddenly fell on the road and expired at once.

Farmer Suffers A Heavy Loss

Barns Were Totally Destroyed—Four Horses Burned to Death

HASTINGS, July 19.—During the severe electrical storm which visited this section on Thursday morning the barns of Mr. Edward Fleming were totally destroyed, together with four horses, some calves, pigs and poultry. Nothing could be saved, as the building was a mass of flames when first seen. The loss will be partially covered by insurance, but Mr. Fleming is a very heavy loser, notwithstanding.

Visited Peterborough.

The 12th of July found Hastings almost like a deserted village, in consequence of the numbers who took advantage of the special train service to visit Peterborough and enjoy the day.

Alive and Well.

Mr. M. Brackenridge, of Westwood, has received a letter from his son, Sergt.-Major Brackenridge (previously reported killed), containing the welcome news that he is alive and well. This is good news to the many friends of the young soldier.

A letter has also arrived from Lieut. Hubbs that he is a prisoner of war, but is in good health.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless) and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, light, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it is cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

HEALTHFUL OCCUPATIONS.

When the Lehigh Valley Railroad decided that it would be fitting recognition of faithful service to grant annual passes good over the company's system to old-time employees and their wives the management was a little surprised to discover sixteen employees in the operating department who have been with the Lehigh steadily for more than half a century. These men are machinists, boilermakers, car repairers, watchmen, carpenters, and plain day labourers. There are probably not many men who held the softer, inside positions fifty years ago who are eligible for passes. Good health is part of the price most of the men who get away from manual labour pay for their success.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Britain Is Not Worried

Ans.: "You do? Well! What is it?"

Ques.: "Working Time, my boy, working time—the time every workman sells you every day. How do you check it?"

Ans.: "Check it? Oh, I guess my timekeepers do that."

Ques.: "They're human beings? Of course, Yes—well, now, who checks the timekeeper? And who checks the man who checks the timekeeper? Why not cut out all the guess-work and let a cold-blooded machine do the work? Print unchangeable figures under lock and key in and out shifts, four or six times a day, if necessary, giving Records that form an original PRINTED wage sheet."

Ans.: "Sounds good—what's the answer?"

Ques.: "Well the answer is an International Time Recorder. Your competitors are using it. Thousands of the World's greatest manufacturers are doing likewise. KITCHENER AS FRIEND

Narratives of Little Girl to Whom He Gave a Doll

Yet this man, "the man of iron," or "the Sudan machine," as great correspondents called him, had a human side, as the narratives of Mrs. Erskine show. Mrs. J. S. Erskine, widow of a former captain of the 10th Royal Hussars, who was for a time attached to the staff of Lord Kitchener, recently gave an interview in which she discussed the man on whom the Empire was relying. At her first meeting of Lord Kitchener she was a lass of four, in short skirts and blouse. When he died she was in the neighborhood of 40. "I was at the engineering depot at Woolwich with my parents when I first saw the then Engineer Kitchener," said Mrs. Erskine. "He was most shy and diffident, but I wasn't. In truth I was just the opposite, and probably that is the reason we became fast friends. Not long after that when he was called to Egypt, he gave me a doll, and I treasured it many years."

Lord Kitchener's only retreat was orderly, but still a retreat. It occurred in London not so long after Royal honors had been conferred upon him by Queen Victoria, whose hand he kissed, although, as he later said, "it was a long way down to reach it." On the day of the retreat the general had been feted at a dozen affairs and finally wound up at a tea where Mrs. Erskine was one of the guests. When he saw his old friend he rushed to her. "'Talk to me! Please talk to me! Never mind what you say, but say something just as though it were important,' he begged me," said Mrs. Erskine. "So I talked to him about nothing, and finally managed to ask him what had disturbed him. 'It's those two women over there,' he said, pointing to a couple of grande dames. 'They have been following me all the afternoon, and I didn't think I ever would escape.'"

One day Kitchener, Capt. Erskine, the latter's wife, and others were visiting friends in Colchester, and ate heartily of greengage plums. "The general saw me devouring quantities, and finally took me to task," said Mrs. Erskine. "'Don't you eat another one of those,' he commanded. 'Why?' I asked. 'Because you'll get the stomach ache,' he replied gravely. 'So will you,' I responded, 'for you have eaten quite as many as have I.' 'I know that,' he replied, 'for I've got it already. That's why I'm trying to save you.'"

Constant Headaches

When the nervous system gets run down one of the most persistent symptoms is headache. Nervous headache has been described as the cry of the starved brain for more blood.

Because of its remarkable blood-forming and blood-enriching qualities, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food ranks first as a means of overcoming nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, headache, indigestion, sleeplessness, irritability and all the annoying symptoms of nervous breakdown.

It is not a mere relief, but thorough cure; for it rebuilds and reconstructs the wasted and depleted nerve cells.

Strange Ways of Britain's "Objectors" and How Army Uses Them—Intellectual and Queer Soldiers

Frederick Palmer writes from British headquarters in France: Unique among all the variegated units of the armies on the continent is the British Non-Combatant Corps, or otherwise the "conscientious objectors," who do not want to fight and are not expected to fight. Not fear, but conscience, is their reason for being excused. Before the war in England, where individual rights are so strongly recognised the Quaker was not required to bear arms because it was against his religious scruples. When compulsion was applied another class arose. They said that they had conscientious scruples against the taking of life. If they would not fight then they must work, the Government decided.

Where a man who enters the army under normal conditions must drill for many months before he is sent to the front the conscientious objector is given a few days' drill, put in khaki and sent to France at once. There he wields the spade instead of the rifle. "There are the N.-C.C.'s doing their bit," said their commander, an officer with a strip of colors on his breast who had been in several campaigns and so badly wounded in this war that he was hardly fit for active service. "They get the same pay as the man in the trenches and the same rations with an extra allowance of meat which is given to the laborers' corps."

Working With Hands

At the time the N.C.C.'s were engaged in railway work. Practically without exception they are men unused to manual labor, but though it was pretty hard at first they said that they would be inured to it in time. One was a B.A. of Cambridge University. None had any complaints to make. The majority were clerks and those who were not were usually shopkeepers. Many were members of the Plymouth Brotherhood, a sect which holds much the same views as the Quakers. These said that it was against their creed to fight and they would not break their creed. They spoke quite frankly about the charge of cowardice which is made against them, and seemed to realize that they were the anathema and laughing stock of the millions of their fellow countrymen who are offering their lives for Britain.

"I do not want to kill anybody. I do not believe in war," one said. As an exponent of passive resistance he was ready to work at command but no powers could make him fight. "If we are sent up to work under shell fire I think that you will find that most of us will not flinch," he added. One of the unmilitary characteristics which amuses Mr. Thomas Atkins is that the N.C.C.'s all address one another as "Mister." One mentioned that their conversation around the mess table was very "intellectual and thoroughly enjoyable."

Are Few; One Deserted

"If you want any proof that England is a free country," said a sergeant of regulars, "you have it in this lot. How much of a chance would a band of conscientious objectors stand in a German army? Meanwhile the fighting army protects them from the enemy and from public opinion. But let them have their way. There aren't many of them." A shirker may not suddenly become a conscientious objector in order to escape service. Anyone who aspires to the N.C.C., must prove that he held conscientious scruples against fighting before the war. One conscientious objector deserted. This backslider decided to fight and went back to England to drill in a line regiment.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside-bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

BERLIN WANTS BUTTER

Scarcity Has Its Comic Side in Home of Kultur

How to get a quarter of a pound of butter, writes a correspondent, is a problem which every Berliner has had to study. Lack of butter has been one of the most difficult of the many problems in connection with food with which the Berliners have been confronted. A young lady who served in a butter shop was a power to be reckoned with. A customer would approach her with an ingratiating smile and greet her as "My dear Fraulein," or yet more softly as "Fraulein chen," and then speak sweetly about the purchase of marmalade, honey, cheese, or other articles of which the shop was full and, after buying many things which were hardly wanted, would disappear only to return next day with a little present and more smiles and then at the critical moment, "Can you please reserve for me a quarter of a pound of butter, my dear Fraulein?"

Young men declared that the only way to get butter was to be the sweetheart of a butter Fraulein. It is even said that married women urged their husbands to the same plan for the same end. Butter scarcity has reigned in the German capital for weary months. Lines of people stood for hours, often only to find the supply exhausted before their turn came. Confectioners who also dealt in butter would only sell to their regular clients. New clients introduced themselves ceremoniously and stated that they had been recommended. As an indication of their good intention they would purchase this, that and the other without asking prices and pay cash.

WHY BERLINERS RIOT

Women Find Hunger of Children is Unendurable

A Berlin correspondent writes: German newspapers often attack the women of Germany because, after years of constant warfare during which they have lost husbands, brothers and sons, while themselves forced to endure untold hardships, they are showing signs of what is termed weakness. "It is most humiliating," says the "Muenchener Nedeste Nachrichten," "to see that, after eighteen months of war, a very large part of our women have not yet learned to understand what wartime conditions really mean. They are sighing, weeping and groaning, because they can no longer get all the bread or meat they want, because pastry made without butter does not appeal to their taste and because they feel disgusted when they have to drink coffee without milk. Once more, German women, we appeal to you, nay we command you, to stop these cowardly lamentations, to submit to existing conditions and not unnecessarily to make life harder to our brave men who are fighting in the trenches."

To an unbiased observer these reproaches directed against the women of Germany, who have taken up and carried their part of the burden of war in a most admirable manner, are by no means justified. The women of Germany have shown fortitude and endurance and if they are becoming unmanageable, it should be remembered that they are not rioting and fighting the police and troops sent against them from selfish reasons, but because they see their babies dying from lack of milk while their older children are growing pale and emaciated, because all articles of food, even the most elementary ones, have risen to prices, which it is utterly impossible for them to pay. They fight the police and attack the provision and baker shops because they know that their wealthier sisters are able to buy even luxuries and that the farmers, large and small alike, are hiding their grain in the hope of still higher prices.

The Crown Prince of Serbia bestowed the Order of St. Sava III. on Lord Swaythling and Dr. Clark, of the Wounded Allies Relief Committee.

INDIA SENT 300,000 MEN TO ALL FRONTS

Loyal Empire Was Denuded of White Soldiers and Artillery—Ex-Viceroy's Amazing Statements

Lord Hardinge, of Pennurst, who was appointed Viceroy of India in 1910 and returned to England after an administration which was commonly described as a highly successful continuation and development of the Liberal policy initiated by Lords Morley and Minto, later disclosed some interesting facts in the course of a statement made to a newspaper correspondent, whom he received at his house in Gloucester Place. Lord Hardinge showed how India's voluntary contributions to the prosecution of the war had justified that dependency being regarded as an integral part of the British Empire united to the central administration by consideration of self-interest and political development, which, in the eyes of the Indians themselves, had assumed paramount importance and had received a most striking exemplification during the course of the war.

For months during the early period of the war India was practically denuded of British troops and the Indian contingents, who went abroad to fight the British Empire's battle, amounted to about twenty times the force which was sent to China at the time of the Boxer Rebellion, not only in men, but also in guns, rifles, ammunition, and stores of all kinds. India gave so unstintedly that, with the exception of a few batteries which remained on the northwest frontier, there was at one time hardly any artillery throughout the length and breadth of the country. "How was this possible?" Lord Hardinge was asked.

Leaders Responsible

"Only because of mutual trust," he replied. "At the outset of the war I had consultations with leaders throughout India. I frankly exposed to them the situation and needs of the Empire, and I was answered that there would be no serious trouble in India. I believed their assurance, and my trust has been amply justified.

"We sent out of the country no less than 300,000 men to the various fields of the Imperial battle-line in France, Egypt, China, Mesopotamia, East Africa, Gallipoli and even the Cameroons. These consisted of both Indian and British troops. When it is remembered that the British army of occupation usually numbers some 73,000 men and that at one time for a few weeks there remained only a handful of British troops, something between 10,000 and 15,000 men, in a country with a population of over 315,000,000, one can realize that such a course of action would have been foolhardy in the extreme had there been any real foundation for the reports of widespread and serious disaffection, spread from enemy sources.

Confidence Justified

"Why," added Lord Hardinge, as an afterthought, "the Indian Empire gave to the British Empire in the critical early stages of the war, when England's resources in artillery were, as was well known, entirely inadequate to the needs of the situation, the whole of its artillery of the most modern and up-to-date pattern, with the exception of a few batteries, which were kept on the northwestern frontier for protection against attack from without. And even these batteries were reduced from six to four guns. India also supplied the British Government with great quantities of shells, rifles, and small-arm ammunition, and the Government of South Africa with shot and shell. From these fact, it is apparent that the Indian Government had full confidence in the loyalty of India, the princes, chiefs and peoples."

Sportsmen Always

A story is told in London about the battle between the German commerce destroyer Greif and the British armed liner Alcantara in the North Sea. The Greif was badly smashed when she torpedoed the Alcantara by a lucky shot, and the British ship also began to sink. The British cruiser which came up, and, firing a shot over the Alcantara, completed the sinking of the Greif, sent this wireless message to the Alcantara, which was read as the ship was sinking: "Sorry—your bird."

Ancient Armor Revived

French poilus may soon fight in ancient armor. The success of the new steel helmet in reducing fatal wounds has started a movement in Paris to protect the throat, cheeks, shoulders and heart region by steel plates capable of turning a bullet.

Too Many Deaths Already.— Lord Brampton, better known as Sir Harry Hawkins, tells of a case where a prisoner, clearly guilty of having murdered in a brutal way both his father and mother, the jury bringing in a verdict of not guilty. The judge, angry at so outrageous a violation of their plain duty, did what he ought not to have done—asked the reason for such an extraordinary verdict, when they knew the prisoner was guilty and ought to have been hanged. "That is just it, my lord," said the foreman of this very distinguished body. "I assure you we had no doubt about the prisoner's guilt, but as we thought there had been deaths enough in the family lately we gave him the benefit of the doubt."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS BLOOD PURIFIER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

A dilapidated looking old man, who was chewing sassafras root with great energy, suddenly appeared in the waiting room of the depot across the river, and as he approached a man who was waiting for the western train he pulled a bottle of liquid from an old satchel in his hand and said:

"My friend, you are looking yaller about the eyes, which is a sure sign that your blood is in a bad state. One bottle of my blood purifier will restore you to health and vigor."

"Don't want it, sir," was the reply.

"All right, mister, all right. If a feller wants to keep on looking yaller about the eyes when a pannycea is at hand, that's his own business. 'Long about the middle of April you'll be on your back with a spell of bilious fever, but you needn't lay it up agin me."

The next person approached was a severe looking woman about thirty-five years old, who was probably an old maid.

"Them yaller streaks at the corners of your mouth denote a torpid liver, ma'am," said the man as he gave the bottle a shake. "Something right here to improve your looks 50 per cent."

"Sir!" she demanded in icy tones.

"Only 50 cents a bottle, ma'am, and made right in my own house from herbs and roots gathered by my own hands. Just opened the campaign, and it's only 50 cents a bottle."

"Go away, sir!" she commanded.

"Don't want any at all, eh?"

"No, sir!"

"All right, madam, all right. Torpid liver may be a good thing to have about the house, but I don't think so Here's your pannycea, and if you don't want it I can't compel you to buy it."

The third passenger was a man with a marked redness about the nose and rough spots on his face. He was busy with a newspaper when the old man approached with:

"One bottle will cure that nose or your money returned."

"What! What's that?" demanded the man.

"And the second bottle will cure all those rough spots."

"Look a-here, you old reprobate! What are you driving at anyhow?"

"I am selling a blood purifier, made of roots and herbs. It's a little early perhaps, but I want to get the start of the buckwheat scratchers. Are you a drinking man or not?"

"Do you mean to insult me to my face, sir? Why, I'll punch your head off."

"Wouldn't do no good, sir. Here's the only genuine blood purifier in the country, and last year I sold 7,000 bottles of it. Invigorates the liver, tones up the blood, and if I can't cure up that nose of yours I don't want a cent."

"I'll purify you, you old assassin!" said the man as he started to take off his coat. But just then a policeman came up and told the old man he must get out.

"And not sell a bottle of my blood purifier in this crowd?" he loudly asked.

"Come, out you go!" said the officer.

"And you don't want a bottle for yourself? You've got a jaundice look, and this medicine will cure it in five big doses."

He was led out and told not to re-enter the depot. But he stood at the door and said to the policeman:

"All right, officer, all right. If the people don't want my blood purifier they needn't have it. It's the season to purify, but I never go agin the law, and if there is a rampage of bilious fever don't say I wasn't around with my pannycea at regular price."

The officer made a move for him, and the old man ambled off down the street to the corner. There stood a man beside the lamppost with deep trouble in his looks and bearing, and after a moment he was addressed with:

"If I ever saw a man who needed it you are the critter!"

"Are you talking to me, sir?" was queried in reply, but the man looked straight across the street.

"Right to you, my friend. You are almost on your dying bed, but there is one hope. It is my blood purifier. It has cured when the doctor pronounced the patient dead. Get a dose down you at once!"

"Thanks, but I cannot change the program now."

"I'll give you the first dose without charge."

But the old man saw a patrolman plunging across the street to gather him in, and he made his escape to stop a fat pedestrian at the end of the block and say:

"My dear sir, you are fat and look the picture of health, but is it solid fat or bloat?"

"What do you mean by addressing such a question to me, sir?" was sternly replied.

"If it's bloat, sir, I have that which will take it away."

"By thunder, you old cuss"—

But the patrolman had followed along and now came up and demanded if the old man had a license to peddle. As he didn't he was placed under arrest, and as he was walked away he asked:

"I hain't kicking any, but I want you to do me a favor."

"Well?"

"Take me before some jedge who's got a plain case of the janders and who'll let me pay my fine in the only reliable blood purifier ever invented by a human man!"

And perhaps the exchange was made.

WHEN CUTTING TEETH

Babies Are Subject to

DIARRHOEA

When the baby starts to cut its teeth, then is the time that the poor mother is under the stress of great anxiety. For some reason or other the bowels become loose, and diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps and many other bowel complaints occur; the gums become swollen, cankers form in the mouth, and in many cases the child wastes to a shadow.

When the child gets into this condition the bowels must be looked after very closely, and for this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

This sterling remedy has been used for teething children, for over seventy years, by thousands of Canadian mothers who will swear by its efficacy.

Mrs. R. J. Waldruff, South River, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my little girl had diarrhoea while cutting her teeth. She got thin and very weak. I had tried different remedies, but all to vry little good. A friend recommended Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so I procured a bottle at once, and after she had taken a few doses I could see a change, and by the time she had taken half the bottle she was cured. I think every home should keep it on hand."

A LESSON IN "BUSINESS".

"No, sir," said a wealthy merchant to his confidential clerk, who had asked for the hand of his daughter; "no, sir; if you were a rich man it would be different; but as it is—". He spread his hand out palm upwards to signify that the young man's chances were hopeless. But they were not altogether without hope. Some months later the wealthy merchant was astonished to find that his confidential clerk had bolted with practically the whole of his fortune. He was still more astonished to receive a telegram from the absconder, who was somewhere in South America, with the following message: "Am rich, very rich, but regret to say am not in a position to marry a poor man's daughter."

ROLLICKING AVIATORS OF EMPIRE IN ACTION

Some Reckless and Amusing Feats—Football Dropped on German Town by One Wag

Some British aviators were chatting one night in camp. The fat man in the far corner began to tell a story of experience. With a wicked gleam in his eye he began: "It was before you chaps came out here, we used to play 'footer' a good deal then. Some wag suggested that we should get an old footer, blow it up as tight as possible, take it up in a 'bus' and drop it plumb into the middle of some Boche town. H—— (I don't suppose you remember him)—jolly good pilot; I taught him to fly a Nieuport myself—chalked 'How's your father?' on it, and took it with him when on a reconnaissance trip. He got to Middlekerke and dropped it slick in the middle of the market square.

What a Herd!

"Heavens! How those Germans ran! You can imagine their feelings to see this dark, awesome-looking thing—it was as black as sin, been left out in the rain and the mud and everything—dropping from the heavens. Then it just bounced in the square, one huge bounce and down again, getting lower every time until finally it rolled into the ditch at the side of the road. All was quiet, not a soul in sight. Presently out of a doorway creeps a fat soldier, has a good look at the ball from a distance, then walks gingerly across towards it. Two or three men follow from adjoining houses, then a woman or two, all looking anxiously at that old football. At last the fat beggar plucks up enough courage to roll it over with his foot, finds out what it is, and gives it a vicious kick across the road."

Strange Bombardment

"Ha! ha! Very good! Very good!" It was a little man who spoke, a little man with a great heart. "That reminds me of the time I went over the lines with M—— for an observer; he'd never been over the lines before, and I must confess that I felt rather shaky as to how he would take it. Luckily we got across without a single shot being fired at us—and then we met a Taube, coming right down wind at about ninety miles and about our own level. I looked at M——; for a time he was too much engaged in watching the other chap coming up to notice me, then he turned and smiled, and I knew he was all right. 'Got the gun ready?' I bawled into his ear. He nodded, and then we cleared the decks for action, so to speak.

"The other chap still kept on and was only about a hundred yards off when M—— opened fire, zipp-zipp-zipp-zipp, seventy-eight of the little beggars slick into the middle of him. At all events he didn't stick it long; down went the nose of his machine, and he was very soon about a thousand feet beneath us. I loosed off all my bombs, and missed every time. I had a shot with a grenade and missed again. I must confess I felt a wee bit flurried that morning—and then M—— began. I never laughed so much in all my life; he laid hands on everything. He even hurled his map case over at that Taube, his hat and his glasses—Government glasses by the way—his revolver and his spare cartridges, his pocket knife and his coat. Thank heaven there was nothing of mine in the front there."

War Hits Conventions

The war is breaking down many conventions in British high society. Girls of high degree ride gaily on surface cars and motor buses, scrub and cook or wash dishes in canteen or hospital, do their own marketing, carry home parcels, and—even in Park Lane—post their own letters instead of ringing for footman or page boy. The daughters of many splendid houses are not ashamed themselves to attend the door, or to go out hatless and coatless into the street, a proceeding which would have been considered beneath their dignity in pre-war days.

DOG THAT WON THE V.C.

Jack, the Famous Pet of the Guards, is Honored

One of the most famous regimental pets that ever lived was "Jack," who was found, when a poor little puppy, by a sentry outside St. James' Palace. Snow was on the ground at the time, and the dog had evidently been ill-treated, so the sentry, touched, picked it up and fed it. The dog eventually became very much attached to the sentry whose regiment, the Scots' Guards, adopted the animal as a pet.

Jack went all through the Crimean War, fighting tooth and nail by the side of his master, and once going so far as to save his life. One of the enemy came at the erstwhile sentry, with his gun clubbed, but Jack went for him! Sad to relate, however, Jack's master was killed at Inkerman. When the regiment came home, Queen Victoria was so touched by the story that she had a miniature Victoria Cross made, which she presented to the gallant little animal, together with the Crimean medals.

Instant Relief for Biliousness

and other Liver Troubles

The astonishing efficacy of Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief is due to its toning effect upon the liver and bowels. It gives strength to the organs and helps them back to health and natural action. In other words it enables the system to cure itself. Don't weaken your liver with purgative pills or morning salts, don't get the salts-taking habit; let Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief bring you natural and therefore lasting cure.

Dr. CHAS. F. FORSHAW, D.Sc., F.R.M.S., a well-known British Scientist, writes:—"Never take Salines or Purgatives for Constipation to force Bowel action is to aggravate the trouble and create the Constipation habit. I recommend as a superior and convenient treatment Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief."

TOMMY'S FRENCH BRIDE

How Naturally Entente Marriage Alliances Are Fostered

Frederick Palmer writes from British headquarters in France: One of the results of the presence of the British army in France is that a good many British soldiers will take French wives home with them. The difference in language, far from being a bar, is an accessory. Mr. Atkins teaches Miss France English and Miss France teaches Mr. Atkins French. There is plenty of leisure for the courtship to develop. Frequently British battalions remain in the same section for months on end. When the men have done their shift in the trenches they return "in rest" as the saying goes, to the same villages where they were before. Usually they have quarters in French houses. In a sense they become members of the community.

With the French men folk away, Mr. Atkins lends a hand with any heavy work that requires a man's strength. Only to-day the correspondents saw a British soldier driving a harrow. A feminine hand does some sewing or cooking for him in return. The romantic atmosphere is not lacking. When the Briton says "au revoir" to his sweetheart and starts for the trenches he may never come back and he is going to fight for France. On Sunday afternoon the girls are out in their best frocks, as they are everywhere else in the world, and walking with them along the roads and lanes are men in khaki. Their conversation is a mixture of French and English. It is not romance alone that leads the Briton to marry in France. He has learned to admire the thrift and cleverness of the French woman and her industry in taking the place of her fathers and brothers who are at the front.

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards Catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach and does little but harm digestion. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit which includes the inhaler, it lasts two months and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

HOLLAND'S CONSCRIPTION

Small Nation Decided on Preparedness Before Present War

For a long time Holland resisted universal military service. She depended on professional or volunteer soldiers as more in accordance with her great democratic traditions. But several years before this war the Hollanders came to a realization of the folly of trusting to a "citizen" army to be raised after war began. Military service now devolves equally on all citizens, although there are exemptions of certain specified classes. About 50,000 men come of military age every year. Of these, about 32,000 are taken into the army and 400 into the navy. Sixty per cent. of the young men escape military service.

The present conscription law had been in force only eighteen months when the war began and so the full effects of its provisions have not yet been realised. The period of training for most branches is fixed at eight and one-half months. This is a very short term of instruction and there is the additional drawback that the ranks are much depleted the third of a year between the departure of one class and the arrival of the new class. Since the war began, however, the army has been mobilized on a war footing and the three classes of 1913, 1914 and 1915 are all with the colors.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

France's Wounded Heroes From Verdun, Pitiable But Hopeful

The sight of the trains of wounded continually arriving in Paris from Verdun was one that will never be forgotten by anyone who witnessed it. The French writer, Andree Viollis, says of them: "They arrive, as do all the others, worn out and exhausted to death. More worn out and more exhausted than others, for they have fought until the breath went out of their bodies, and, withdrawn from the fight, they stand there with bandaged heads, without a thought of time or place or of their wounds. They belong only to sleep, which seizes them, closes their eyes, presses back their dilated nostrils, and gives them a short, feverish and oppressed breath. That is the first tableau. A few hours pass and everything is changed. The men have been given a shower bath, the lukewarm water has soothed the skin and softened muscles which were like steel springs. They have passed through the hands of the barber and hairdresser and clean bandages have been put on their wounds. A night of perfect rest, a good meal—and if they do not say much and scarcely venture outdoors their faces have lost that dreadful expression, their eyes the look of stupor produced by the atrocious hours they have passed through.

"Atrocious hours! Yes, indeed! There are soldiers who have seen Lorette and the fights in Champagne, but all this, they say, was nothing compared to the fights around Verdun. The fighting there reached a brutality which defies all description. To hold out three, four, five days under a hail of shells of the largest calibre and then with buzzing head and broken nerves make a stand against the shock of the attack of infantry in waves right on top of each other, stop them with the bayonet and throw them back into their own lines! That is fighting such as the world has never seen before, but they passed through it and came out of it more firmly convinced than ever of victory and the words you hear on the lips of all of them are 'les Boches ne passefront pas' (The Germans will never break through). They all repeat this phrase. They need nothing more to encourage them, even those who are hardest wounded or most completely exhausted. The hallucination of the battle still exists, but they no longer see its horrors, they see nothing but success."

British Royal Women

The ladies of the British Royal family might almost be competitors in trying to see who can do most for the wounded and sufferers by the war. Queen Mary before the war had devoted herself to her people; since its outbreak, she has worked as hard as any hospital nurse. Princess Victoria has a hospital in which she is immensely interested in Grosvenor Crescent. It is staffed with trained nurses, and helped by women of the Red Cross. Princess Henry of Battenberg's hospital for officers is in Hill Street, Mayfair; Princess Christian has a hospital of her own at Windsor. Princess Alexander of Teck, her friendly rival in all good works in that neighborhood, is often at this hospital devoting herself in every way to its inmates and not disdaining the most menial of tasks.

Russia Guards Resources

The Russian Government has forbidden the export of cheap furs from the empire. Russia is permitting the shipment, after permits have been granted, of the more expensive furs, such as sable, beaver, black and brown fox. The Government also have decided to hold in abeyance all applications for the export of flax and best seed exports.

WONDERWORLD of the PTARMIGAN VALLEY

(1) Lone Tree Lake and Wall of Jericho in Ptarmigan Valley. (2) Snow Cornice on Ptarmigan, showing Douglas in distance. (3) Black and White Douglas. (4) Mt. Black Douglas. (5) Looking down Corral Creek from Ptarmigan Lake, showing Mount Temple. (6) Lone Tree Lake and Lake Myosotis and the base of Ptarmigan Peak.

AWAY yonder in the wonder world of the Canadian Pacific Rockies —the wonder world that yet awaits full exploration—there is a valley where the Ptarmigan live and breed and die, where the mother hen clucks to her chirping brood and where she warns them of the danger of strange two-legged animals known as men, but from whom she is powerless to protect them.

So the wise men who give places their names, have marked this particular region as Ptarmigan Valley, and its guardian peak as Ptarmigan Mountain. In this wild Alpine area, thus named after a bird, will be found one of the thousand beauty spots of our Canadian Switzerland, including every type of scenery that belongs to a mountain area: turbulent rivers, fed by countless glacial tributaries, leaping in headlong flight to the lower levels and the ultimate sea; alpine meadows carpeted with a profusion of flowers, canyon depths, forested retreats opening into expansive valleys, cliffs, peaks, rocky ramparts, snow cornices and ice fields making the avalanches that reverberate like a Flanders bombardment. There are lakes, beautiful beyond compare, deep-hearted pools, waterfalls of all heights, muskeg traps and rock strewn trails, and glacial boulders stranded far from their northern habitant in the mysterious north of a mysterious ice age.

There are moreover signs of wild life on every hand. The Ptarmigan is everywhere, standing stupidly in one's way, deer and bear tracks freshly made on the snow, goat paths that point the way to summits, marmots that whistle, gophers that invade tent and larder as impudently as porcupine, while an occasional bunny or a flying eagle add variety to the mountain zoo..

Let us hit the trail together for this Canadian Garden of the Gods, where nature may be viewed in all her sublimity and variety, and where He who made the hills has placed circles and ranges of mighty summits rivalling each other in towering heights through and beyond the fleecy clouds.

It will be at Lake Louise station that pack ponies will be diamond-hitched and saddle ponies mounted. Heading northward, little but lively Corral Creek blocks the way and demands the first of scores of wading processes with the water dashing over feet and leggins. But water doesn't count on the trail, whether in wet feet or a downpour from the sky, for warmth and dryness are at the end of the trail. And such a glorious trail it is, like an unfolding panorama with new scenes at every turn, a succession of God's canvases in the great gallery of the open air.

It is all uphill for the first league or two. At each succeeding altitude a turn in the saddle held the eye spellbound with the scene to the south where, like soldiers on parade, thirty miles of giant peaks lined up and made a beautiful vision: the Ten Peaks, lordly Temple, Aberdeen, Lefroy dominating Lake Louise, Victoria's Glacier, glistening white. We are high enough to even catch an entrancing glimpse of Lake Louise. It is truly an upheaved world where "hills peep o'er hills and alps on alps arise."

Now it is facing forward as a new world stands revealed. Yonder is a speck of white in an immensity of space. Thanks be, it is a tent and a curl of smoke. How the heart of the trail-hitter warms to the sight! Shelter, food, warmth, a balsam bough-bed, mugs of tea, rashers of bacon, pails of prunes, squares of Banff bread, what more could mortal ask?

The next day, and a red letter day it will prove to be. The early morning sun ushers in a day of wondrous charm that makes every nerve tingle with the glow of life. Radiating valleys on every hand invite exploration, shimmering summits look down upon us as giants upon pigmies, cascades and rapids sing their song of the wild, and the world of men and war seems to belong to another planet. Off we start on another trail, thrilling at every turn with the sensation of the first sight of nature marvels. We make for One Tree Pass, where the footmarks of what have been a giant brute were freshly made. Do not the very names of Merlin Lake and Merlin Castle sound seductive? And little Lake Myosotis is a miniature Lake Louise and no less beautiful, dammed up in a basin formed by the tilting of the strata, the overflow in a trickling stream making the birth of a river. Yonder rise the Walls of Jericho, forbidding in their black and frowning mass. Through the Stoky Valley we make a detour, catching a glimpse of massive Hector to the west, with Cathedral Peak asserting its lordliness of height.

Tramping through fallen timber, over treacherous scree, fording streams on bridges of a single log, and at times having mired in a hidden muskeg, are mere incidents in the day's fun. The happy hours fly quickly until, as the day hurries to its close, we hurried to another camp on the Red Deer, under the lee of the Black and White Douglass peaks, towering over 11,000 feet above sea level and curtains Mount Molar lifting the sky curtains with its tooth-like summit. There were more lakes, more Niagaras, more flower-strewn vales, more litteral ups and downs, for a trail is rarely content to work on the level.

So the happy days sped away until the last one came, the last camp fire was enjoyed, and the final bit of saddle travel as the return journey was made, and a most delightful trip came to an end.

The manager of a factory recently engaged a new man and gave instructions to the foreman to instruct him in his duties. A few days afterwards the manager inquired whether the new man was progressing with his work.

The foreman, who had not agreed very well with the man in question, angrily exclaimed:

"Progressing! There's been a lot of progress. I have taught him everything that I know and he is still an ignorant fool."—Inland Printer.

A little girl being lost, was taken to the police station, and the officers in charge tried unsuccessfully to find out her name. "What name does your mother call your father?" asked one. "Why," replied the child innocently; "she doesn't call him any names—she likes him."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

All women appreciate a design in an apron that is smart and becoming and easy to make, because an apron is a uniform of health, happiness, work and comfort. Often in warm weather an apron is a garment that supplies as the dress—saving not only the dress but one's time, and many times one's temper, as a result of the other "savings."

The design illustrated is one well worthy of your approval, with a full body and skirt section, front closing with loops and buttons; contrasting goods for the collar and belt, as well as for a pocket of generous size stitched to either side of the front. A square yoke would seem to give "balance" to the garment, and long or short sleeves are made, according to preference.

Really nice enough for a garden smock, it deserves to be developed in linen or chambray, but gingham and percale are also very appropriate, and so is striped galatea combined with plain.

The pattern of apron No. 7,946 is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 4¼ yards of 36 inch material and 3¼ yards of 27 inch contrasting goods.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

A Message To Thin Weak Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 Pounds of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women, everywhere, are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin persons body is like a dry sponge —eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to try Sargol, the famous flesh building agent that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh form over your body covering each bony angle and projecting point. All good druggist have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid, in plain wrapper.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

ABOUT YOUR GIRL.

Is she following the fashion set by the undressed chorus girls of the stage?

Is she bedecked in flimsy garments meant to display the contour of a shapely figure?

Is her walking dress cut so low that one would think she was on her way to the opera and so high that the colour of her stockings is discernible?

Are her fingers, neck, and arms covered with gaudy jewels, cheaply imitated on the five and ten-cent counters? Is her face rouged and powdered with the freedom of the brazen demonde?

Is she dining, drinking, and dancing with the giddy midnight throng in an atmosphere of excitement?

Is she joy-riding on Sundays and neglecting the church of her father and mother?

Is the pursuit of pleasure, frivolity and fashion the consuming passion of her heart?

Is she going the pace in a restless desire to shine in the blazing light of the cabaret and to be known as one of the fast set?

Is she walking the primrose path of dalliance with no thought of the journey's dreadful end?

Are her companions lifting her up or dragging her down?

Is she seeking the love of one true man or basking in the sunshine of many without manhood?

Is her modesty a mockery, the prayer book and Bible relics of the past, and mother's advice the played-out whim of the antiquated?

Is she no longer a comfort to those at home, the confiding delight of her mother and the pride of the family circle?

If this is your daughter are you proud of her? Look at her latest photograph. Then take down the picture of her mother or grandmother.

Which do you like the better? And which do the men of real worth prefer?

FRENCH SCORE NEW GAINS ON FIVE MILE FRONT

British Make Substantial Advance To-Day

FRENCH TROOPS WIN NEW VICTORY IN SOMME FIGHTING

Advance Both North and South of the River---French Also Score a Notable Success on the Verdun Front Capturing Strongly Fortified German Work South of Fleury --British Recaptured More Lost Ground and Make Gains Near Leipzig.

RUSSIAN CAUCASUS ARMY VICTORIOUS

LONDON, July 20.—(Special Cable)—During the last twenty-four hours the Allies on the western front have advanced their lines into German held territory, along fronts totalling more than eleven miles. This fact is indicated in summarizing the official French and British despatches received late this afternoon. The British have apparently pushed forward on a two-mile front between Mazentin and Longueval, bringing the British guns nearer the immediate objective, the Heights of Martinpuche. The French north of the Somme River have pushed forward along a four-mile front between Hardecourt and Clery, and south of the Somme heavy fighting is raging in many parts of the line, but the Allies are holding all gains.

PARIS, July 20.—The advance by the French north of the Somme further straightened the French line to conform to the recent British advance. The attack south of the Somme was another gain in the campaign to clear the Germans from the bend of the Somme. On the Verdun front the French scored a notable success in last night's fighting, capturing a strongly fortified German work south of Fleury, northeast of Verdun, and taking 150 prisoners. Another French detachment made further progress west of Thiaumont in the same region. The Germans made an unsuccessful attack at seven o'clock last night on the French posts near Bolante. In the Argonne, two German aeroplanes were brought down in yesterday's fighting.

To-day's announcement indicates that the French have taken in their new victory the entire first line of German trenches on a five-mile front.

More Ground Is Won By British

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 20.—A little more ground, taken by the Germans in their counter-attack at Longueval and in Delville Wood, has been recaptured by the British, General Haig reported this afternoon.

North of the Longueval-Bazentin line the British advanced their lines this morning, making substantial advances near Leipzig redoubt.

Russians Capture The Villiage of Kugi

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, July 20.—Russian troops have occupied the village of Kugi, it was officially announced to-day, repulsing all enemy efforts to advance in the Ougli Arsonovitchi region. The town of Kugi lies sixty miles southwest of Ergerum. Its capture makes further progress by the right wing of the Grand Duke's army pressing back the Turks in the Caucasus.

British Capture a Big German Sub.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 20.—It was announced in the Commons to-day that the British have captured a German mine-laying submarine of class U-35, and one of the submarines captured recently would be brought to London to be viewed by the public.

Official Inquiry To Be Held

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, July 20.—An official investigation of the Dardanelles and Mesopotamian campaigns has been decided upon by the British Government, Premier Asquith informed the House of Commons this afternoon.

"I have no desire to shelter anyone responsible for any alleged shortcomings," said the Prime Minister, replying to recent insinuations that the Government was attempting to shelve the requests for an investigation.

Mr. Harry Armstrong With Coop and Lent's Circus Here To-day

Did you notice the two young equestriennes who headed the Coop and Lent parade this morning, the young lady buglers riding the creamy Arabian stallions? They are the acrobatic daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Armstrong of Somerville, West Virginia, both of whom are travelling with the circus. Years ago Harry Armstrong lived for a short time Peterborough and will be remembered as the cornet player with the Armstrong family band. Theirs was a family of musicians. The father was a old showman with the spirit of the sawdust ring so deeply impregnated in him that after a short residence in this city the wander lust got hold again. During that residence, Mr. Harry Armstrong, now quite an elderly man, made quite a large number of friends and will be remembered by Mr. Finch Miller, Mr. Forty, Mr. Chas. Brownlee and others, especially those who were interested in music. Mr. Armstrong has been conductor of circus bands and has had a varied and successful career. It is understood that he is not actively engaged with Coop & Lent, but with his wife is accompanying their daughters, who are trapeese artists and h pronounced musical ability. Mr. Armstrong renewed old acquaintances day.

The circus, by the way, made a splendid impression on those who saw it unload, witnessed the parade and attended the afternoon performance. The horses were a feature. Arabians and big Belgian percherons being specially noted. A number of chestnuts were beautiful animals. The steam calliope is passe in circus parades now. Coop and Lent have a gasoline motor driven compressed air calliope of fine tone. Its' a nice clean show, and a notable feature is the smoothness with which everything is conducted.

MAYOR HAS CALLED A SPECIAL MEETING ON FRIDAY NEXT

Meeting is For The Purpose of Considering What May be Done to Expedite the Completion of The Trent Canal.

A VITAL MATTER

It is understood that the Trent canal is practically ready for opening to Trenton, except for the Grand Trunk Railway bridge at Campbellford, and so far as can be learned no arrangement has been made for a swing or other passage of boats through the bridge.

In view of the vital importance of the opening of the canal, not only to the manufacturing and business iterests of Peterborough, but to every citizen, and seemingly unnecessary delay in the opening of the waterway, the Mayor has called a meeting to be held in the City Council Chamber at 8 o'clock p.m. on Friday next, July 21st, to consider what may be done to expedite the matter. The public is invited to be present.

European Countries Pay Heavily for Food

Washington, July 20.—War's increase of food prices in Europe, as shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has touched neutrals almost as heavily, as it has the belligerents. The Teutonic countries have felt the pinch more than have the allies. The bureau statistics give the biggest food price advance in Austria, where meats are more than 500 per cent. higher than before the outbreak of hostilities. Beef that in Feb., 1914, sold for 6.3 cents a pound, now brings 38.7 cents. Meat prices in Berlin show increases ranging from 48 to 160 per cent.

The British public is paying on an average 55 per cent. more for its food than it did two years ago, France 28 per cent. and Italy around 30 per ct. Price increases in the neutral countries are shown to be highest in Norway, where 29 necessaries are sold at an average of 63 per cent. more than in 1914. Copenhagen pays more than 34 per cent. more for table articles than two years ago. Sweden 21 per cent., and in Switzerland the range is from 8 to 175 per cent.

EMPIRE THEATRE TO-NIGHT

Synopsis of Photoplay Tennessee's Pardner—Fannie Ward Starring

Miss Ward appears as "Tennessee"—a waif of the plains, a child of the desert. The story opens when "Tennessee" and her parents are making a trip across the continent in a prairie schooner. "Tennessee's" mother deserts her husband, who, in turn is shot, in the chase. "Tennessee" is then brought up in a mission by her father's friend, Jack Hunter, who "Tennessee," for many years believes, is her father. When the girl grows up she starts in search of her "father," is kidnapped, held for ransom and finally escapes to understand the true state of affairs, after many exciting happenings.

MORE RECRUITS ARE WANTED HERE FOR QUEEN'S AMBULANCE

Fifteen Peterboro Boys Are Already in This Unit and Capt, Kennedy is in the City Looking for More---First Draft of the Forester Battalion Left Early This Morning for Ottawa---Recruiting Figures--To-day's Military News.

Capt. Kennedy of the Queen's Field Ambulance, in which at the present time there are fifteen Peterborough boys, is in the city to carry on further recruiting for this popular unit. The Queen's Field Ambulance offers to bright young men who want to serve the Empire an interesting field of service, congenial companionship and attractions that men of other units do not enjoy. The Peterborough boys who are already in the corps are loud in their praises of the officers and of the treatment they are being accorded. The bunch from this city have organized a ball team and the other night succeeded in beating the Carlton Place squad in an interesting game. A large number of the men in the corps are College and Collegiate students and in physique, intelligence and good conduct compare favourably with any body of troops anywhere. Capt. Kennedy will be here for the next ten days and any information may be secured from him at the recruiting office.

The Kingston Whig says: There is a fascination watching the varying marks of the recruiting returns which reach headquarters at the end of every two weeks. Every unit and recruiting office in Military District No. 3 sends in a return to headquarters at the end of each two weeks, and the totals are issued to the battalion commanders so that they may know fully just how they stand, and if their officers are doing the required amount of recruiting work.

The latest statement issued shows that the maximum number that have joined the colours in any two weeks from this district is 2,010, which occurred on March 15th. The minimum was last month, when for the last two weeks the total was slightly over 400. This statement just issued raises the average a little, being 510 of a total.

December 31st	1110
January 15	1370
January 31	1670
February 15	1880
February 29	1520
March 15	2010
March 31	1580
April 15	1380
April 30	790
May 15	580
May 31	730
June 15	580
June 30	400
July 15	510

In all probability this number will commence to climb as soon as harvesting is completed, as this is recognized as being the cause of many men hesitating about enlisting. With the fall and winter coming, however, more will be joining, and the number although it is unlikely that it will go to 2,000 again, will certainly increase much above the present figures.

The recruiting officers have commenced their campaign, and headquarters is confident that with a little more energy expended in the right way the average should be brought much higher.

The Kingston Whig says: The recruiting of men for the batteries has not been carried on as energetically as headquarters wish and more attention will be paid to this branch of the work. The batteries at present stand as follows:

72nd Battery—6 officers, 51 men.
73rd Battery—7 officers, 70 men.
74th Battery—6 officers, 45 men.
75th Battery—5 officers, 51 men.
Ammunition Col.—3 officers, 11 men.

These figures will likely be given a shove upwards so that when the battery starts drill there will be a sufficient number of recruits to make it interesting to all. The question of horses has not yet come up, though horse lines have been laid out in the rear of the lines.

Peterborough Boys Won.

BARRIEFIELD, July 20.—The baseball outfit purchased by the men of Queens' Field Ambulance Corps is certainly of great service. In a game on Monday night two teams, one from Carleton Place boys and the other from Peterborough district men in the unit, met the latter, winning by a score of 9 to 8. The teams are open for other games against teams at the camp. Challenges should be sent to Manager William Hamilton.

Carleton Place		Peterborough
Sinclair	Catcher	Bigelow
Menzies	Pitcher	McCartney
Devlin	First base	Wheeler
Morphy	Second base	Smythe
Hontson	Third Base	Lyle
Scott	Shortstop	Voaden
McDowell	Left Field	Juniac
Forbes	Centre Field	Lewis
Saunders	Right Field	Acker

Sergt. L. J. Barry, umpire.

Official news that seven Peterborough members of the Mounted Rifles are prisoners in Germany was received by their relatives to-day in wires from Ottawa. All seven were unofficialy reported before. The men, who are all at Dulmen, are as follows:

Pte. Harold Lawrence,
Pte. B. F. Casson,
Pte. H. Godfrey,
Pte. Geo. Hutchinson,
Pte. H. Martin,
Pte. Thos. Casey
Pte. Harold Devins.

For the benefit of Bombardier Wm. Ed. Graham's friends, his new address is published. Bombardier Graham was formerly with the 10th Battery, 1st Brigade. His new address is as follows:

CONTRACT FOR SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL LET

W. R. Turner's Tender for Plumbing, Heating and Ventilating Improvements Accepted—Alexander and Miller to do Wiring.

OTHER WORK TO BE DONE

At a special meeting of the Board of Education last night, at which all the members were present, the Property committee's report was adopted accepting the tender of W. R. Turner for all work in connection with the heating and plumbing and ventilating improvements to the South Central school, and the tender of Alexander & Miller for the electric wiring and fixtures complete, and also for one 16-inch blade fan for the ventilating system.

Other recommendations of the committee were adopted as follows:

That the Board exercise their option to purchase the Cooney property adjoining the South Central school property to the east and having a frontage on Sherbrooke street of 45 feet.

Also that the resolution passed by the Board on July 4th authorizing the secretary to advise the City Council that only $2,000.00 of the $15,000 passed by them would be required, be rescinded and that the Council be requested to provide $5,500.00, $2,500.00 of which to be used in connection with the repairs at the South Central school, and other permanent repairs to Public school property and the balance of $3,000.00 to purchase the Cooney property.

The report was presented by Mr. R. Denne, chairman of the committee.

At Mr. W. H. Hill's suggestion, a four inch water pipe will be laid into the South Central school instead of a two inch.

Question of New School.

Mr. Hill referred to the fact that the altered plans for this school represent the view of a minority of the Board. The validity of circumstances by which this situation developed might be questioned, he added, but instead he was satisfied to assist the Property committee in the arrangements finally determined.

A casual discussion concerning a proposed new school to replace the South Central was Mr. V. Eastwoods' cue to comment that for the present the people had enough burdens in providing their share of the sinews of war. The improvements to the South Central school were expected to suffice for two years at least. Then, the erection of a new school might be proceeded with or, even in the meantime, steps to that end might be undertaken.

Mr. Denne explained that Inspector Mowat's suggestion that the rooms on the east side of the school required more light was largely responsible for the idea of purchasing the Cooney property.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A FORMER PETERBORO MAN

Frederick M. Edmunds Died Suddenly of Heart Failure While Participating in a Ball Game—Resided Here for Six Years.

LEAVES A FAMILY

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 20.—Fred M. Edmunds, 58 years old, who was born in England, but who eight years ago came to Canada, locating in Peterborough, Ont., where they resided for six years, when the family crossed the line settling in Fredonia, N.Y., afterward removing to Dunkirk, N.Y., died suddenly of heart failure Sunday afternoon while he was at bat in a ball game in Dunkirk, being played between the Eagles and Moose. Edmunds was pitching for the Eagles, but was at bat when, after fouling, he fell to the ground and died of heart failure before assistance came, although Dr. George E. Ellis, who was watching the game, rushed over to the stricken man and worked over him for some time, but death was instantaneous. Deceased was a charter member and truste of Lake Erie aerie of Eagles, and he had held all the various offices in the lodge. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Gladys Edmunds; one son by a former marriage, Howard S. Edmunds, and four sisters, Mrs. Mary Ann Stevens, Boston, Mass.; Miss Lucy Edmunds, New York city; Mrs. Charles Bonetti, of Portland, Oregon, and Mrs. Charles Noble, of Ashville, N.Y. Interment was Wednesday afternoon in Dunkirk.

VETERAN OF OTONABEE DEAD

Samuel Sargent Was Born Nearly Ninety Years Ago

One of the few remaining pioneers of Otonabee township passed away on Tuesday, July 11th, in the person of Samuel Sargent, who was born nearly ninety years ago on the farm which his father, who emigrated from Ireland, had operated for many years, and on which deceased had lived all his life. Mr. Sargent had enjoyed good health and was a very active man six weeks before his death, when he contracted a cold while on a visit in the city. Developments which followed brought about his death. Deceased was one of the best known residents of the township and was well known in the city. In his everyday life he practiced high principles and always stood as a strong advocate of temperance. He was a very active worker in the Methodist church. Because of his lifelong residence in the township and his intimate knowledge of pioneer days of Peterborough in general, he had a fund of anecdotes and incidents of early life, which made him an interesting person to meet and converse with. He outlived practically all of his neighbors and friends of pioneer days, and it was confidently expected by his family that he would live to reach the century mark, so strong did his constitution appear to be. On two occasions he visited the north-west, of whose future he was always optimistic, even at a time when there were few settlers in the country and its development was but in the stage of infancy.

In 1858 Mr. Sargent married Ellen Johnston, who died 15 years ago. Surviving are four sons and one daughter, who are: Messrs. John M., city; Thomas E., Otonabee; Samuel D., city; W. D., city; and Mrs. J. H. S. Armstrong, Erma, Alberta. One sister, Mrs. Frederick Irwin of Orillia, is the only surviving member of the large family of fourteen children.

The funeral was held on Thursday, July 13, from the late residence, Lot 28, con. 10, Otonabee, to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. R. A. Whattam conducted the services. The pall-bearers were his four sons and two nephews, John Sargent of Westwood and W. D. Johnston of Otonabee.

Prohibition Will Go Into Effect on September 16th

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, July 20.— Prohibition must go into effect in Ontario on Sept. 16th, no matter how much stock remains on the shelves and in the cellars of hotels and liquor shops of the province on that date. This was the reply given to a deputation of license holders to-day by Chairman Flavelle of the Ontario License Board, after hearing their story that sales were light and tens of thousands of dollars' worth of goods would be left on their hands if some extension of time were not given.

THE TRIPITZ POLICY.

A powerful party in Germany clamours for the immediate renewal of submarine warfare on the Tripitz plan of sinking every commerce and passenger carrier at sight. They claim that by such a course the Allies would be paralysed and forced to abandon the war.

It is highly doubtful if results would meet their expectations; but it is not impossible that it may be tried as a desperate last resort by an oligrachy which cannot hope to outlive defeat. Maeterlinck is on record as apprehending that militarism, as the steel ring tightens, will do something more atrocious than it has so far done. Will it return to the Tirpitz policy or will the blow fall on war prisoners in detention camps?

Let us hope and pray that the Belgian patriot may be wrong and that the German people will not permit a wrathful and ruthless oligrachy to make an outlaw nation of them.—Rochester Post.

CANADA'S NEW ARSENAL.

The new Dominion Arsenal at Lindsay, Ont., of which the cornerstone was laid on Saturday, is evidently intended by Sir Sam Hughes to be a big affair. He told those who witnessed the ceremony that it was going to be equipped in such a manner as to make the Dominion independent of the Arsenal at Quebec, so that if invasion came and Quebec were cut off, "as it might be an easy matter to do," Canada would still be able to proceed uninterruptedly with the manufacture of munitions of war. Apparently this, and the fact that 100 acres of land have been secured, mean that the Lindsay Arsenal is henceforth to be considered the principal one, as many Quebec people have feared. Recently the Quebec Telegraph said that "We are not in a position to say that it will ever do so, but every one knows that, ever since the present Ottawa Government came to power, the removal of the ammunition and rifle works to Lindsay has been more or less seriously talked of from time to time and the present move certainly looks like a first step in that direction."—Montreal Herald.

AVARICE.

Even in making arrangements for the disposal of her enormous fortune after her death the late Mrs. Hetty Green's ruling passion was in evidence. Her will was drawn and filed in a small Vermont town for the reason that in Vermont no inheritance tax is imposed. As Mrs. Green was a resident of New York state, the authorities of that state are preparing to contest the right of the executors to have the will probated in Vermont, so it is possible that the estate may yet have to pay inheritance taxes and law costs as well. However, Mrs. Green was consistent in her thrift to the last. "She did what she could" to make sure that all her huge fortune should go intact to her son and daughter and that the public should not get a penny. It was not her fault if a little of it escapes.

Much has been said about the avarice of this old woman, the richest woman in America. It is generally agreed that her passion for accumulating money was mean and hateful. And yet what a common vice is this one of avarice! Every man who already possesses more than he needs and who can leave his children well provided for when he dies, but who keeps on planning and toiling for more wealth that he does not need, merely because of his passion for acquisition—every such man is infected by the same vice which in Mrs. Green was so repellent. Not that the desire for great wealth and the acquisition of it is necessarily ignoble. Such a desire may be noble. Whether it be noble or ignoble depends on the motive. One may desire wealth for the purpose of using it directly for philanthropic purposes; in such a case the desire for riches is sanctified by the motive. Or one may desire wealth because wealth brings with it power and influence. If power and influence are desired because they will enable the possessor to use them for good purposes, then the desire for money as the means of obtaining power and influence is justifiable. But the mere passion for acquisition—the piling up of wealth merely to satisfy the craving to see the pile grow—this is what repels every normal mind.—Hamilton Herald.

"I wish I was twins," said Willie. "Why?" "I'd send the other half of me to school, and this half would go fishing all the time."

BORDEN NOT THE ONLY CAMP.

There is trouble in British Columbia over the moving of troops to camps that were not in fit state to receive them. The people of Victoria and Vancouver have expressed their annoyance at moving troops away from home where they had good camping grounds to others at a distance not so good. The Vancouver Sun, discussing the matter says:

There is an evident disposition in Victoria to ferret out the real explanation for the removal of the troops to Sidney. If no sound military reason can be assigned, what is the answer to the riddle? A similar question is on everyone's tongue in Vancouver. Why was it necessary to sever our soldiers from their friends and move them to another part of the province before going overseas. What advantage from the point of view of accommodation and facilities for drill does Vernon possess which are not equalled or surpassed here? If no military reasons are assignable, what reasons are? We have real estate jobbery on the harbor board, patronage jobbery on the school board, and endless jobbery in connection with the shell committee, the sale of munitions and the purchase of military supplies—where does the rotten part leave off and the sound portion begin? Is it possible that someone's axe is being ground in leasing sites for camps, as in purchasing sites for drill sheds?

Similar questions might be asked regarding Camp Borden. Why were men hustled off to that place when they were content where they were? London has splendid camp grounds. Why force the men away against the wishes of the citizens? What was the matter with Niagara Camp? Who benefitted by the acquirement of the land for Camp Borden?—Hamilton Times.

SUBMARINE'S CREW DREAD DEPARTURE OF DEUTCHSLAND

NORFOLK, Va., July 20.—Foreign warships which have been waiting off the Virginia Capes for the Deutschland were obliged to go out far to sea to-day when a northeast gale made it dangerous for them to lay too close to the shore. High seas and a sixty-mile gale at Cape Henry drove the foreign ships to seek safety in deep water, probably ten miles off shore.

Baltimore, Md., July 20.—Terror-stricken and on the verge of a panic, the crew of the Deutschland dread the order that will start them on their return passage across the Atlantic. None believe they will escape the dragnet being thrown out by the allied cruisers now off the capes. They felt sure that they will fall victime to the enemy cruisers, not through shot from the yawning mouths of the cannons, nor hail from the high-powered rifles in the little British patrol boats, but from disabled engines in a net that the enemy is spreading just off the three-mile limit.

The members of the crew, whose names will go down in history for the creation of a new commercial era, have openly expressed this feeling to friends on Locust Point. They have told these same friends that Captain Paul Koenig, the dapper and daring commander of the submersible, is doing everything in his power to keep up their spirits and make them look on the bright side of the affair, but the men cannot see this side of the venture.

"We are praying every night, and are getting our friends to pray for us," Second Engineer Karl Fruechte told a friend he has been spending his evenings with since the crew have been granted shore leave. This same friend to-day told the story of the terror-stricken crew to a press representative, not knowing at the time he was talking with a reporter.

FEAR ALLIED NETS

"The crew have orders to be ready to leave at any moment," said this friend of Fruechte this afternoon. "They cannot bring themselves about to see how the Deutschland will escape the enemy off the capes. All the men have been talking about since they have been visiting me is of the loved ones they will leave behind should the U-boat find a resting place at the bottom of the Atlantic. It is not the cannon and the other guns the men fear—it's the nets the enemy cruisers will stretch. Entangled in these the submarine cannot escape, her engines will be crippled, and it will be a slow and agonizing death to all on board. When the engines stop the lights go out and the air will stop. That is what the men fear. They talk of it continually while with me at night and they ask everyone to pray for them."

Spellers Tied 5 Times Finally Divide Prize

PORTLAND, Ore., July 21.—After pronouncing the hardest words in the spelling book in a vain endeavour to spell down the contestants in the high school division of the county spelling match, held at Tillamook, Ore., the judges gave up in despair and decided to divide the honours between Ina Williams of Tillamook and Velma West of Bay City.

These two had tied five successive times in writing lists of fifty words taken from spelling books.

WAR ORDERS' TOTAL NOW $3,000,000,000

Philadelphia, July 20. — America, from Chicago east, is now on the shady side of $3,000,000,000 in all its war orders, counting blankets, machinery, locomotives, and other products not coming strictly under the head of munitions.

Twenty-four corporations alone account for more than $1,000,000,000 up to February 1 of this year. This figure is said to be "highly conservative." In other words, this item, comprising scarcely one-third of the country's war receipts, is equal to the entire national debt of the United States with 140 years of existence behind it, during which it financed four wars of its own, innumerable Congressional "pork barrels," and satisfied the wants of 100,000,000 or as many people as France and Germany have combined.

Official reports from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce at Washington show that shipments of war munitions up to date have aggregated $446,000,000 These figures cover munitions in the strictest sense of the word. They do not include locomotives, blankets, rails, machines for gunmaking, or other materials of this class which are indispensable to the nations as part of their war supplies.

It must be remembered also that a tremendous amount of war orders already placed will not begin to run before the fall and next year. Some of these contracts call for delivery as late at 1918.

The war has made millionaires and multi-millionaires of such Philadelphians as Alba B. Johnson and Samuel M. Vauclain, President and Vice-President, respectively of the Baldwin Locomotive Works; Roland L. Taylor, who laid the first stones of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co.; E. T. Stotesbury, William H. Donner, former President of the Cambria Steel Co., and numerous bankers and industrial leaders close to the fountainhead of "big business" have seen wealth virtually pour into their pockets through merger transactions and stock market trading.

The Philadelphia district, taking in South Bethlehem and Wilming.., stands credited with $1,000,000,000 all by itself. As nearly as can be computed, for nothing can be learned accurately with the munition makers tied lip and tongue by the allies, fear of labor disturbances and other factors, including the government, the Baldwin Locomotive Works have received either directly or indirectly, for the Eddystone Munitions Company, orders amounting to approximately $150,000,000. Besides this the company will participate in royalties of at least $2,000,000 from the Remington Arms Company plant at Eddystone, not to speak of two buildings which revert to it on the termination of the war.

The Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co., so William P. Barba, Vice-President of the Nicetawn plant, testified before the House Committee on Naval Affairs on March 23, was working on $60,000,000 worth of war contracts. At that time the Remington Arms plant had not started work on the second order for 2,000,000 rifles for the allies, which it is understood the company took at $16.20 apiece, or a matter of $32,400,000 for the whole contract. In the Midvale business must be included the orders taken by the Cambria Steel Company, which consolidated with the Midvale, brought a dower of rail contracts.

The war orders of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation at one time at least were an open book. They were placed at $300,000,000 up to February last. Charles M. Schwab, the salesman extraordinary of the war-order business, made no secret of scalping the cream of the allies' business before J. P. Morgan made such a bargain as to be appointed the virtual representative of the foreign group. And to prove that his profits were not mere paper figuring, Schwab is reported to have gone so far as to distribute Christmas presents of anywhere from $100,000 to $1,000,000 to "deserving employees." One of these to receive the "cross of gold" to the extent of $1,000,000 as a bonus, it is said, was E. G. Grace, the president of the company. Other of the "boys" fared proportionately well, depending on the way in which they had dug up their talents to further "getting out the stuff."

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation has produced munitions far in excess of any other plant in the country. Its payroll now equals 55,00 men. Only last week Schwab announced he had a war fund of $70,000,000 with which he intended to build his various units, the most recent acquisition to which was the Pennsylvania Steel, with its splendid Maryland Steel Subsidiary at Sparrows Point, outside of Baltimore.

In many respects Bethlehem has surpassed the German-renowned Krupps. From Bethlehem to Reddington, along the Lehigh River, and south almost to Hellertown, the plant is so large that only a few officials really appreciate how extensive it is. And it is still growing. Only last week three large buildings were completed, in which munitions will be manufactured for the Russian government. These buildings represent an investment of $1,000,000 each. Close to Quakertown Schwab is having built the Victor Box Co., at a cost of $200,000, simply to make boxes to transport shrapnel.

As an indication of the secrecy observed even in a proposition so simple as this, the agent entrusted with this work drew his laborers entirely from Philadelphia. Every one of them was a picked man who had worked in constructing buildings for war munitions, and who above all possessed the attitude of being able to keep his lips sealed. This box factory will be completed about Aug. 1. Here hundreds of thousands of boxes will be turned out weekly and they will be painted inside and out. Thus the allies will insure that shells will not rust, no matter how long they may be held behind the trenches.

Bethlehem's output averages 350,000 shells of all calibres a month. These include the English "three 20's," 60-pounders, 10-inch explosives, naval projectiles for England, and a large order of the famous "75's." In addition to finished shells it is making accurately rolled bars out of which England and France will cut Shrapnel billets. It is said that the price of an English 320 or a French 75 at Bethlehem at $12,000, while a 60-pound gun is reputed to bring $22,000.

It is also reported that Bethlehem is making rapid progress in the manufacture of its new siege guns of 42 centimetres, which are to outrival the Krupp "Big Berthas," the guns that pulverized the Belgian defences. The American piece, it is asserted, will throw a shell 24 miles.

The Du Pont Company at Wilmington, next to Schwab, is said to be the big profit maker with a foreign war account of more than $200,000,000. The profits can be appreciated when it is known that powder brings $1.10 a pound. As given out it costs something in the nature of 30 cents a lb. to manufacture this explosive. In June 14,000,000 lbs. went to Europe from Philadelphia alone.

Thus the allies have fared in getting their munition orders into the plants of this country. But ont only have the allies thrown business to America, Germany at the present time, indications here in Philadelphia show, is using America to further the conduct of its defence.

There is no question but that Norway and Sweden are acting as intermediaries for German purchases in this country. The last issue of the drug magazine, Weekly Drug Markets, dated July 10, published the shipment of 115,472 lbs. of taluol from New York to Sweden. Tiluol is one of the prime ingredients in the manufacture of high explosives, and this order, together with others in the past, is taken to be highly significant. It is known that Germany is carrying on a heavy trade with Sweden in the Baltic, and as such materials as this are indispensable to Germany's warfare, authorities here see the fullfilment of America's neutrality promise to Germany: "Anything we have is yours, if you will pay the price and come and get it."

NEED ARMY DOCTORS.

Hint of Conscription to Meet British Situation.

LONDON, June 15 (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)— The Government is calling for more physicians for the army. Surgeon Gen. Sir Alfred Keogh has appealed to the medical profession to "mobilize" voluntarily, otherwise, it is suggested, recourse will have to be had to medical conscription.

Many of the doctors in private practice at home object to mobilizing, even voluntarily. Many members of the British Medical Association maintain that the army has already all the doctors it requires, if it would only learn how to employ them to the best advantage. Some of them even suggest that the War Office should learn how to do it from the enemy. One authority says:

"Already the Royal Army Medical Corps has taken 11,000 doctors from private practice and they are asking for another 4,000, making in all 15,000. This, with 1,500 medical officers in the permanent service, gives a total of 16,500 to attend to an army of about 4,000,000. The Germans, for an army of 10,000,000, have 14,000 medical officers.

"The position at home is serious, as there are only 30,000 medical men and women in practice. With 15,000 taken away no more than 15,000 are left to attend to a population of 41,000,000 men, women and children. How grave the position is may be suggested by recalling that more than 500,000 industrial casualties occur in this country every year, which is hugely heavier than the casualties at the British front in a year at the present war."

It is maintained that the whole problem could be solved, without withdrawing any more doctors, by a reorganization of the Royal Army Medical Corps. Among the reforms they urge are the following:

"Substitution of the army for the division as the medical unit, no doctors being thus kept idle because their division is not in action.

"Adoption of a new system of hospitals at the front and abolition of field ambulances. It is estimated that the latter change alone would save 1,500 doctors in an army of 1,000,000 men.

"Release of doctors for home work when there is no work for them to do at the base hospitals. Under modern conditions it is always known when an attack is imminent, and the staff would have twenty-four hours to return to their base."

Shooting Due To Girls Death

Assailant's Fiancee Said to Have Died From Overdose of Drug.

BOSTON, July 20.—The autopsy on the body of Dr. Celia Adams who, according to the police, poisoned herself a few hours before her fiance, Dr. Eldridge D. Atwood, shot and probably fatally wounded Dr. Wilfred E. Harris, was anticipated, as likely to have an imoprtant bearing on the motive for the crime as explained by Atwood.

The only light thrown on the suicide and assault which aroused peculiar interest because of the prominence of the persons involved, was volunteered by Atwood, who told the police that the young woman had intimated to him the night before her death that she could not marry him because she had been compromised by Dr. Harris.

Atwood, a youth of 23 years, was arraigned in court and in default of bonds of $15,000 was commmitted to jail for a further hearing on July 28. The proceedings were brief. The prisoner was not represented by counsel and did not plead. He appeared calm, and later said that he had nothing to add to the statement which he made when placed under arrest.

Dr. Harris Very Low.

The adjournment of the case was expected in view of the condition of Dr. Harris. It was stated at the hospital that he was very low and it was feared that he could not survive many hours.

The version of the cause of the shooting given by Atwood was scouted by Dr. Harris during a lucid period. He referred to his assailant as "a young fool." The wounded man's statement was stoutly supported by many friends. Both Miss Adams, who was 27 years of age, and W. Wood had been pupils at the Massachusetts College of Osteopathy, of which Dr. Harris was president, and according to mutual acquaintances he had counselled the young man against marrying a girl so much his senior. Francis F. Adams, the father of the girl, stated that he also opposed the match.

Late Tuesday night, Medical Examiner George B. Magrath communicated with the District Attorney's office which approved an autopsy and it was later made known that the result would be made known to the district attorney. Indications were that the girl had died from an overdose of a drug administered, as she was found dying in her office, the doors of which had been well secured from within. It was understood, however, that the condition of Miss Adams would be determined with a view to sustaining or disproving the motive of the shooting as alleged by Atwood.

Former Canadians.

Dr. Harris, a former Canadian, is described by mutual acquaintances as standing high in his profession and socially. He led the fight in the Legislature for the legal recognition of the practice of Osteopathy. Originally he was a general practitioner and after he had taken up osteopathy many of his earlier patients still insisted upon going to him for advice and to these he prescribed medicines of the old school whenever he deemed them necessary. His wife, who acted as his secretary, was formally Miss Jean C. H. VanAllen, of Morrisburg, Ont. Their home is in Cambridge.

Dr. Atwood was later arraigned and held for a hearing on July 28, to which date the case was continued. He did not plead.

Dr. Harris, who is 45 years of age and married, is a former president of the Canadian Club of Boston, son of a former member of the Canadian Parliament, and one of the pioneer osteopaths of Massachusetts.

Dr. Atwood and Miss Adams formerly studied under him at the College of Osteopathy in this city. It was said by Dr. Atwood that Miss Adams recently informed him that their marriage was impossible because Dr. Harris had wronged her, a charge which the latter denied. It was stated that the prisoner and Miss Adams had been engaged for some time.

ONE PEAR IN COURT, LOSES HER FIGHT

WHITE PLAINS, N.J., July 10. — Justice Morschauser in the Supreme Court handed down a decision in the case of Mrs. Beatrice C. Shicerick, in an action against her stepfather, Seymour W. Bonsall, head of the Innovation Trunk Company, for an accounting of her estate. The court found for the defendant, asserting that Mr. Bonsall had dealt fairly with his stepdaughter.

Adam K. Strickler and Abraham Bendeict were Mr. Bonsall's lawyers. Before her marriage Mrs. Shiverick's name was Miss Beatrice Cornell. She reached her majority on January 18, 1911, and inherited about $500,000 from her father, grandfather and grandmother.

Part of this money was used not long ago for the purchase of a water front property at Bayonne, N.J., adjoining land now owned and occupied by the Texas Oil Company. It was at the suggestion of her stepfather that Mrs. Shiverick bought the land for $133,000.

Mr. Bonsall testified that when his daughter was married to Charles Shiverick, he gave her a fine home at Rye, N.Y., on condition that his aged mother could make her home there while she lived. Also before his stepdaughter was married, Mr. Bonsall gave her title to land he held in Mamaroneck, N.Y., which before the buying of the Bayonne site had been intended for a trunk factory. This title is alleged to have been given to her by Mr. Bonsall on condition said to have been agreed upon that the property should be reconveyed to Mr. Bonsall upon demand. The land is said to be worth $80,000.

When difficulties arose between Mr. Bonsall and Mrs. Shiverick, culminating in her action against him, she is said to have declined to execute a deed, asserting that she had received the property as a wedding present. This Mr. Bonsall denied. Mrs. Shiverick said that the house at Rye was the gift of Mr. Bonsall's mother. There seems to have been further misunderstanding concerning the household effects of the Rye place, and now the lawyers say Mrs. Margaret M. Bonsall, Mr. Bonsall's mother, has an action pending against Mrs. Shiverick for the conversion of her household effects at Rye valued at $30,000, also asserted by Mrs. Shiverick to have been a gift.

Justice Morschauser in his decision says that Mrs. Shiverick is entitled to an accounting for the moneys expended by the defendant, and that such an account may be submitted to him and if the litigants agree the evidence taken in this case can be used on such an accounting, but that if either of the parties desire he will send the accounting to a referee. Deducting what Mr. Bonsall admitted he owed his stepdaughter, she is ordered to pay him nearly $65,000. Mrs. Shiverick was ordered to convey the Mamaroneck property to Mr. Bonsall.

Insanity From War Not So Frequent As Was Expected

Paris, July 19.—The war has not driven mad so many persons as was anticipated in the early stages. Statistics thus far show that the first reports of men going crazy under the infernal fire of modern artillery were exaggerated.

Dr. G. Dumas, who had treated all the cases of mental trouble in one of the French armies, says that his data, covering the first ten months of 1915, agree with the reports of the German doctors concerning madness among the combatants. He finds the cases of insanity caused directly or indirectly by the war in France are quite as few in proportion as those in Germany, and offers the figures as a refutation of the theory of German specialists that the Teutonic race is showing greater nervous resistance than the Latin.

Dr. Dumas' report covers 1188 cases of derangement, of which only three and a half per cent. were cases of general paralysis, while in most asylums in time of peace the proportion is fifteen per cent. This he takes as conclusive evidence that the fatigues and commotions of war have no influence upon the development of this form of insanity.

General paralytics, however, when they become delirious, rave about the war, the same as cases in which the symptoms are quite different, and Dr. Dumas concludes that the life of the combatant gives a war color to delirium that would have existed under normal circumstances, but in a different form.

THE HYSTERIA OF HORROR.

Horror, inspired by battle scenes, sometimes works directly on the nervous system, developing symptoms such as hysteria, speechlessness, deafness, loss of the sense of feeling, fits of mental confusion or paralysis, not always accompanied by hallucinations or delirium.

Optimism of the most exaggerated type is the dominating note in the hallucinations of the paralytics, and Dr. Dumas considers it a wonder that officers do not in fits of exaltation give absurd heroic orders that might lead to disaster.

In one case a lieutenant, who declared to the doctor that he had cleaned out a German trench with two machine guns that he had carried on his back from a point several miles in the rear, had remained in command of his section until 48 hours before he was examined. A few days later a captain was brought to Dr. Dumas, fresh from the command of his company, suffering from an equally radical fit of "exaggerated optimism."

Dr. Dumas reports seventeen cases of what he calls "reasoning madness," in which the fatigues and the commotions of war have had no influence, but in which hallucinations previously existing were applied to the war. An artilleryman who before the war imagined he was charged with the defence of the radical and socialist members of parliament against what he considered the calumnies of the royalists and nationalists of the "right" was taken to a hospital suffering from a tumor. He divided the nurses of the hospital into two parties, the left and the right, and would have nothing to do with the latter, while he began to fall in love with one after another of the nurses of the left.

MESSIAHS OF VICTORY.

The mentally debilitated are largely represented in the statistics. Of 185 cases 110 were sent to the rear as being permanently unequal to further armed service, and fifty-five who presented symptoms of delirium were returned. Several of these, Dr. Dumas says, owe their mental condition to fatigues and commotions of war, and all of them derive the themes of their delirium from their experiences at the front. There are among them Messiahs come to announce the final victory, messengers designated by Joan of Arc to show the way to success, spiritualists who have acquired occult knowledge of the plans of the enemy.

Alcoholics were numerous in the first month of the war among the deranged soldiers, but have since been remarkably few. In August, 1914, 131 cases were taken at Val de Grace, of which 31 were suffering from alcoholism; in another hospital there were 38 out of 65. Of these 69 cases, 18 had delirium tremens and 11 of them died. They were all confirmed drinkers who had exaggerated their propensities during the exciting days of the mobilization.

The number diminished rapidly after the first month, not a single case of alcoholism being reported during September from one of the most strongly fortified places, and only 162 developing in an entire army during the first 10 months of last year. All of the 162 were reservists and in so far as their history could be learned were old drinkers. Nearly all of them resumed the service after taking the milk cure.

The tendency of the alcoholics was to dream of battle and to see Germans everywhere. One of them took a detachments of his comrades for the enemy and charged them with fixed bayonet.

MANY MENTALL DERANGED.

The proportion of cases of mental depression among the 1188 was large. There were 224 in ten months, mostly officers. The majority of them fully really their condition but were unable to overcome it.

"I am no longer able to give an order without immediately cancelling it" said an officer. "I cannot help weighing to an exaggerated extent every eventuality and many imaginary consequences. I always forsee the worst possible issue to every movement—am right thing and have become nothing but indecision and contradiction."

A man who rose from the ranks to the grade of captain was haunted by the thought that he was unequal to his responsibilities and pleaded to be retrograded.

Among the cases of this kind was a man who reproached himself for having revealed important military secrets and who was haunted by the prospect of being court martialed for treason.

There were 348 cases, between March, 1915, and January, 1916, of mental troubles considered directly due to horror of battle scenes and commotion produced by bombardments.

A considerable number of the mentally debilitated have the mania for invention. Dr. Dumas is of the opinion that the number of these cases outside the army would be found greater in proportion if the Minister of Munitions could make public the correspondence that he receives from the civilians.

Among the debilitated were several men and officers who did not know where and for whom they were fighting. One declared that he was unaware that France was at war.

LEMON SHERBET.

Make a thick syrup of one pint of sugar and almost a pint of water, then add the juice of six lemons and enough water to thin to a consistency of rich lemonade. While it is partially freezing put on one pint of sugar moistened with water and boil until it is a soft candy; while the syrup is still hot add the whites of four eggs beaten stiff. Flavor with vanilla and a pinch of cream of tartar, and beat hard until the mixture is thick and smooth. Add to the half frozen lemonade and finish the freezing process.

PERONNE HAS SEEN MUCH OF WAR

History may repeat itself for the sixth or seventh time, if the town is taken by the French. It was a pretty, peaceful, sleepy town, in the valley of the Oise, with no more apparent pretension than that of attending to its own little business, and if is all the more a wonder that it has cut such a figure in history that it has succumbed to nearly every attack.

There can scarcely be any other reason than that its situation makes it a sort of stumbling block in the way of forces bound for Amiens from the north or for Bapaume or Cambria from the south.

KING DIED OF HUNGER.

King Charles, the Simple, first gave Peronne right to immortality my dying of hunger while a prisoner there in 920. Charles, the old, began its series of captures by taking it in 1465, and added to its renown by imprisoning Louis XI., there two days. The latter revenged himself on both Charles, the Bold, and town, by capturing it in 1477. The Duke of Nassau is the only one who ever failed in an assault upon it; he was beaten by a woman, Catherine of Poix, who rightly has her statute in the public square. The Duke of Wellington captured it in his turn in 1815, and the Germans starved the little garrison out in the closing days of the war of 1870, but were obliged to allow it to march out with the honours of war. During nine days' bombardment eighty-two of its 700 houses were demolished, and 600 were rendered uninhabitable. In this case the German commander consented not to levy a war fine on the town, and dispensed the inhabitants from all requisitions, which was all the same to them, since there was nothing left in the place worth having.

The circumstances of the entry of the Germans are characteristic of the present campaign. After an unequal struggle between a small detachment of Alpine chasseurs and infantry on the French side and a strong contingent of cavalry, the Germans entered the town August 27, just as the subprefect left at the other side in an automobile carrying off the receipts of the post office and the tax receipts ment, amounting to a million and a half francs gold and several million in bonds payable to bearer. The mayor and his substitute were both absent.

WANTED THE MONEY.

Finding no one at the Hotel de Ville, Col. Gotberg, the German governor, sent for Monsieur Line, a city councillor, and informed him that it would be necessary for him to get together a commission of a dozen important citizens who should answer with their lives for the benevolent behaviour of the citizens toward the German troops, and that the commission must present itself to the governor within an hour or Monsieur Line would be shot. From this committee the Governor demanded a war contribution of 300,000 francs which must be forthcoming the following morning. "We certainly shall not pay it," replied Monsieur Line, "because all the money of the city and the receipts of the fiscal department have been transported to Rouen, and all of the rich citizens are at the seashore; all we can do is to supply your troops with what they need while here."

"I must have money," persisted the governor. "We have no money," persisted Monsieur Line.

"You must pay me 3,000 francs in gold this evening," said the governor, "and you shall furnish 400,000 francs' worth of supplies; furthermore if you've lied to me I'll know it and I'll have your hide and that of the cure."

TWO HOURS' PILLAGE.

The following morning, declaring that the requisition were not being filed with the necessary promptitude the governor inflicted a further punishment on the town in the form of a permission to the troops of two hours' pillage of the houses whose inhabitants were out. They were told to commence with the subprefecture to punish the subprefect for having done away with all the ready money. Everything movable was taken, even to the bedding, carted to the station and taken away by train the same evening. After the furniture had been removed the soldiers descended to the cellars and then started an orgie that ended in the burning of a dozen of the more important buildings in the centre of the town.

The Citizens' Committee protested strongly against these depredations and convinced he governor that it was ot the most likely means of securing the willing co-operation of those who were able to contribute to the supply of the troops. From that time to the flight of the Germans before the advancing French the town was quiet. On September 16 the 3,000 men who occupied the town departed, but the colonel, as he got on his horse, declared: "We shall soon be back." And they were. A few months later they returned and have occupied the place ever since.

Harden Again Warns Germans

Advises Against Belief in Early and Satisfactory End of War.

LONDON, July 20.—The London Times says the last number of Die Zukunft contains another of Maximilian Harden's warning articles in which, under the appearance of preaching steadfastness, he advises the public to check its hopes of an early and satisfactory peace. He says: "Have the enemies finished? So have we. And so it is possible that after the trial of strength which has now begun they will add up the account and seek a straight road to a reasonable peace. But do not cling to the belief that they will behave thus."

Harden then ridicules the German predictions that the French cannot possibly fight beyond autumn, and says:

"If our enemies believe they have not yet reached the highest point of what they can do and that in the spring they will be ahead of us with heavy guns and ammunition, they will once more send their men into the storm of winter, the snow and the water in the trenches. The brave man wants neither to be comforted nor to be fooled. A mass attack may begin with fireworks and end in nothing. On the other hand, the first advance may be smashed while the tenth may cut open the chief artery of the opposing army."

Harden ends with the remark that the Germans fear too much from the continuation of the war and expect too much from the peace.

Are You Twenty-Three?—The number of Sir George Beatson's telephone is 23, and thereby hangs a tale. At the recent presentation of ambulances to the British Red Cross Society he referred to the position of the man whose years debarred him from taking his place at the front. People who 'phoned to his house, he said, sometimes asked 'Are you twenty-three?' and his reply was, 'I wish to Heaven I was!'

COLLEGE BANS SHORT SKIRTS AND THIN WAISTS

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Fashions have struck a snag at Swarthmore College. This became known when mothers of girl students received letters from Dr. Emma C. Bancroft, chairman of the Household Committee of the Board of Managers of that institution, telling them just what's what for next year.

Dr. Bancroft points out the up-to-date Rutch or V necks have nothing objectionable about them, but the skirt extremes will not be brooked at all. Thin waists, however, "which show the figure underneath," are banned. The tone of the letter is suggestive rather than mandatory.

MAPLE TREES ARE ATTACKED

Curious Insect is Working Havoc on the Maple Trees in This Vicinity

City Engineer R. H. Parsons has been apprised of a curious form of insect that is attacking the maple trees in this section. The insect resembles a small-sized grub and its effect on the leaves is to be seen in the form a small perforations. The leaves are also covered with a gum-like substance as though they had been varnished. They are falling from the trees in large numbers and lawns have to be raked frequently. The leaves when they fall are quite fresh in appearance. Mr. Parsons has communicated with the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph and has submitted a number of the leaves so effected together with the insects.

Harvesting The Hay Crop

The work of harvesting the hay crop is nearing completion. Farmers throughout the county are taking advantage of the fine weather and are hustling the crop under cover as fast as labour conditions will permit. This year's hay crop is excellent and will exceed last year's by a substantial amount.

RIGHTS FOR FRENCH WOMEN AFTER WAR

Cooking, Dishwashing, and Darning to be Done by Specialists, She Says.

PARIS, July 30.— All prominent writers in France who have discussed the subject agree that womans' position after the war will be greatly changed and that she will benefit thereby, but all do not agree with Eugene Brieux, the playwright, who said some time ago that he foresaw a bitter war between the sexes.

Feminism has never made much progress in France, but Mme. Madeleine Pelletier, one of the leading feminists, sees a great future for the cause. Mme. Pelletier, who says she "despaired of feminism before the war," now thinks that "the necessities of life are going to impose what years of propaganda failed to effect — the emancipation of women."

"The war," she says, "will put France, as well as the other belligerents, face to face with a crushing financial problem and the State will be unable to support the millions of mothers, widows, and orphans deprived of their natural protectors. Instead of meagre pension," she anticipates, "the country will provide for them by giving them occupations in which they will earn their own comfortable living."

As to domestic life, Mme. Pelletier looks for a complete transformation of the household to put it in accord with new conditions.

"Dirty dishes will be laid out on the doormat to be taken away by specialists, who will deposit them properly cleaned in the same place," she believes. "Stockings will be darned by other specialists, leaving the women to earn the price of two pairs in the time they would take to stop up the holes in one.

"Cooking, as well as dishwashing and darning," she adds, "will be done by specialists, while the lady of the house concentrates her attention upon the shop or the factory."

Women to Continue to Work.

Marcel Prevost, a member of the French Academy, sees coming "a great falling off in sentiment, due to the penury of men," and he expects the women who have learned to use the lathe making projectiles will turn out parts of automobiles and all kinds of machinery after the war. He is less pessimistic than M. Brieux as to the intensity of their competition with man.

Maurice Donnay agrees with both Brieux and Prevost that women will do more manual labour in factories and take a more active part in men's occupations generally, but he thinks there will be so much to do that a proper division of labour will prevent harmful conflict.

The question of what will become of the children is widely discussed. "It will be quite necessary for France to think of the children, though," writes a woman temporarily working at the lathe. "Future generations," she points out, "must make up the wastage of war in human life, and nothing could be more inopportune now than encouragement of the separation of woman from the home and the smothering of family sentiment."

Hundreds of women contributing to the discussion agree with the sentiment of the woman of the lathe. In reply to it M. Brieux reminds them that every married man who falls on the battlefields leaves a widow; that every young man killed leaves a widow by anticipation—a widow without weeds; that all these added to the widows, orphans and mothers that had lost their protectors before the war make up a formidable army of women for whom husbands cannot be readily found and who must be permitted to make a living.

"We allowed ourselves to be surprised by war," says M. Brieux; "let us not be surprised by peace; let us think right now of what shall be the fate of these victims."

CANCELLATION CLAUSE FOR THE PROTECTION OF MUNITION WORKERS

In connection with the announcement that new shell orders from Britain to the amount of $35,000,000, had been awarded to Canada, it is of importance to understand clearly the meaning of the cancellation clause. So many people have the impression that it may operate in such a way as to effect adversely the concern which is working on munitions that it has come to be regarded as liable some day to cause a slump. As a matter of fact the cancellation clause was introduced at the request of the manufacturers.

It is for their protection, not for the protection of the Allied Governments and should therefore be looked upon not as a bearish but a bull factor.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but it insure results, see that you get real delatone.

Couldn't Keep This Dog Away

At this morning's police court an East City man was charged with having a dog in his possession without it being registered and having a tag. The accused denied owning the dog and claimed to have on repeated occasions driven it from his premises. The defendant laid the burden of ownership upon the shoulders of a neighbour, who on being sent for promptly denied owning the dog and asserted that he had made a present of the troublesome animal to the first owner. The "first owner" was assessed two dollars, amounting to $2.60.

"Are you advancing in her affections?" "Oh, yes! Last night she said I was nothing to her whatever; the night before she said I was less than nothing."

CANADIAN DOGS AT WAR WORK IN THE VOSGES

Last year, when the question of transport through the mountain snow had become a matter of urgent importance, the French authorities had the idea of using dog-drawn sleighs for carrying supplies. Several hundred trained dogs from Alaska, North-Western Canada, and Labrador were brought over by a French lieutenant who had spent fourteen years in Alaska, says the London Times.

From the beginning of the year to April 21, with a short interval, the snow in the neighbourhood of the Schlucht Pass was deep enough for the dogs to be able to render yeoman service. They were able to draw heavy loads over almost inaccessible country, and to supplement to a valuable extent the wheeled transport, which would otherwise have been the sole means of revictualizing the army of the Vosges. But their utility has not ceased with the disappearance of the snow. They are now being harnessed to small two-foot-gauge light railways, which run everywhere behind the front, and they are capable of drawing the heaviest load up the steepest gradient. Eleven dogs, with a couple of men, can carry a ton up some of the most precipitous slopes in the mountains, and I was assured that two teams of seven dogs each could do the work of five horses in this difficult country, with a very great economy of men.

The kennels, which I visited yesterday, lie just below the crest of a certain mountain in the Vosges. It would be hard to conceive more amiable creatures than the 250 dogs who welcomed our visit. Of them all, there was only one who was passed by with the warning, "He bites!"

Three breeds are in service—the Alaskan, the Labrador, and the Canadian—and the best of these is the Alaskan, as his courage, never fails, and he will work until he drops, though he is perhaps the weakest of them. They are all shaggy dogs with prick ears and bushy tails, their colour ranging from black to white, between-grays and browns. Their chest development, so necessary for hauling, is remarkable. They are mainly fed on rice, horse-flesh (of which there is abundance) and waste military biscuits, and this fare appears to suit them admirably, as they are always in splendid condition and disease is practically unknown.

A team of seven dogs was harnessed to a make-shift truck, formed of ammunition cases, to take us along one of the two-foot-gauge railways. The harness consists of a chest strap and a wooden bar behind, which takes the place of a horse's kicking strap. It is extremely simple, and can be put on or taken off in a minute. No whip was used, and order was maintained simply by commands shouted in English. As soon as they were hitched to the truck the whole team gave tongue and began to pull with obvious delight. They soon got up speed, and in a few minutes we were jolting along over the rails with seven bushy tails waving vigorously in front of us.

The experiment of transporting these dogs to France has shown that they can be of real service in mountainous country and represent a real economy.

Colonel Cosby A Gas Victim

Military Attache in Paris Almost Loses Voice.

PARIS, July 20.—Colonel Spencer Cosby, United States Military Attache at Paris, has been suffering recently from what his friends thought was a bad cold, until he was able to explain that he lost his voice testing poison gas.

The use which the German Army has made of poison gas in the present war has brought a new and terrible element of destruction into military science. Just what this terrible new agency is, what part it plays in the offensive and defensive tactics, and to what extent, if any, it must be reckoned with as a permanent element in future warfare — these are problems which the military experts throughout the world are trying to determine. Here in France, where the poison gas has been used with most deadly effect in Champagne and the Argonne, its ravage has been particularly apparent, and the Military Attaches of many countries have been active in securing data for their Governments on this new agency.

There were ample data, from the battlefields and the hospitals, where ghastly patients were a living witness of the effects of the new element. But Colonel Cosby determined on a direct personal investigation of the element itself.

The facilities for such a test of the gases were not easily obtained. With these preliminaries arranged, Colonel Cosby found himself in the presence of long lines of bottles, ranged on shelves, much as in a chemist's shop. The large bottles contained the various forms of liquid gas, direct from the front, and in varying degrees of strength. There were three distinct groups of these gases: first, those bursting into flame and commonly known as liquid flame; second, the tear-producing gases, which do not kill or permanently maim, but which so blind a column of onrushing troops that they become helpless; and, third, the actual poison gas which suffocates and kills with ten times the horror of a bullet or shell.

"This is the least deadly," explained the chief chemist, as he presented one of the bottles containing the inflammatory gas. He drew the glass stopper very cautiously, and Colonel Cosby took a slight whiff. It was not overpowering or violent in its effect—only a pungent odor of ether. Now the second class of gases were reached—the tear-producing gases — and these, to, were tested in the same way. These, also, gave the same sharp odor of ether and a perceptible effect on the eyes.

"Place yourself about a foot away from the bottle," said the chemist, "I will raise the glass stopper the slightest possible fraction of an inch, so that only an insignificant portion of gas can escape—but it will be enough. Now, ready!"

He drew the stopper the slightest particle, and only for an instant, with Colonel Cosby a fot away. But in that instant the Colonel felt he had been hurled back twenty feet. Tongues of fire were eating at his throat, and ten thousand needles were darting around his neck. It seemed as though live vitriol had been emptied in his mouth and was coursing through his veins. His whole vocal system was paralyzed.

It was some time before Colonel Cosby was in a position to discuss his tests. The chief chemist said the effect would continue some hours and probably some days. It would be most observable, he said, in eating or drinking.

Colonel Cosby took an auto home, his throat still on fire, but not otherwise physically affected. He could speak to his family only in inarticulate whispers. When he saw a doctor the next day the throat was found to be in a very bad condition, as from an acute attack of laryngitis. The Colonel continued on his duties, but for a week he could speak only in whispers. It was ten days before the clutch of the poison gas on the throat had been relaxed enough to let him speak again in full voice.

WOMAN MAY SAVE MAN FROM CHAIR

NEW YORK, July 20.—By clever work on the part of Mrs. Grace Humiston new and interesting evidence has been found in the case of Charles Frederick Stielow, a farmer, of West Shelby, Orleans county, who is to be put to death at Sing Sing prison next week. Mrs. Humiston came from Buffalo and Albany recently, where she has been working on the case for two weeks as a special deputy, having been called in by Deputy Warden Spencer Miller, Jr., of Sing Sing Prison.

Mrs. Humiston, who worked with Stuart Kohn, of No. 27 Cedar street, said that she felt sure the evidence would clear the man of the crime of a double murder. He has twice been reprieved. Yesterday his counsel started habeas corpus proceedings in Buffalo.

In order to obtain the necessary evidence Mrs. Humiston got hold of one of the men who was instrumental in having Stielow convicted, and by putting to him a hypothetical question and asking his advice on other matters she got what she considered important evidence that the alleged confession which had been used to convict Stielow was a forgery. Stielow had refused to sign the document which admitted his guilt in the shooting of Charles Phelps and his housekeeper, Mrs. Wolcott. Stielow was employed on Phelps' farm. He is an ignorant man, with a brain of a child not more than seven and a half years of age according to expert testimony. Included in the new evidence is a letter written by the little daughter of Stielow, which says that her father was at home at the time the murder was committed.

The night before Stielow was to have been put to death several weeks ago he sent for Deputy Warden Spencer Miller, Jr., and told him the alleged confession which four men had sworn to as his was untrue. This aroused the interest of the Deputy Warden, who called in Mrs. Humiston.

After passing nearly two weeks at the scene of the crime and in the neighbourhood Mrs. Humiston appealed to Governor Whitman last Friday, asking him for another reprieve. Governor Whitman said if a Justice of the Supreme Court would ask for a postponement he would grant it. Justice Charles B. Cole of Buffalo, asked for the reprieve, and Governor Whitman postponed the execution for ten days.

In making the mental test Dr. Frank Parsons used the Binet-Simon system to prove that Stielow's brain is entirely too undeveloped to have composed the confession used in his conviction. Stielow has a vocabulary of not more than 150 words, while the confession contains 309, according to the experts.

"On Thursday there will be a motion for a new trial in Buffalo," Mrs. Humiston said, "and all this new evidence will be brought into the Supreme Court. But this man may be executed in spite of all that we have found that seems to prove his innocence. After his death on or about July 25, we may find that another man committed the crime for which he died. If we had thirty days more we could discover the real murderer."

FIND A THRIVING VILLAGE ON OUTSKIRTS OF BORDEN.

Camp Borden, July 19.—The discovery of a thriving village named Webb City, about one and a half miles to the north east of the Camp, was received with some excitement. The "City" has a population of about 400, was started June 20th, has 12 stores and one saloon, which dispenses temperance beer and accordingly is out of bounds to the soldiers. A number of officers' wives are now living in new bungalows.

GREAT WHITE SHARK IS TRUE MAN-EATER

"Hammerhead," or Blue Variety, However, Ferocious When Hungry—Small Ones Numerous

FEW INSTANCES OF ATTACKS IN NORTH ATLANTIC PRIOR TO RECENT CASES.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The shark which killed Charles E. Van Sant at Beach Haven, N.J., on July 1st, was seen by a dozen persons. They described it as about nine feet long. That which killed Bruder at Spring Lake on July 6 was not seen. The one which killed two persons and wounded a third in Matawan Creek was seen and is described as being nine feet long. So the possibility exists that, as many choose to believe, one fish was the slayer. Of what variety he was is a matter of guessing. Fishermen may be right in thinking that the killing was not done by a true man-eater, but by a hammerhead or a blue shark driven to it by hunger.

For the matter of that, the hammerhead is not all innocence on the scrolls. "It is so ferocious," says the American Cyclopedia, "as to attack persons bathing. The hammer-head often attains a length of twelve feet. It has a grayish back, with head nearly black, and a whitish belly. This species of shark often, but not always, travels in schools.

TRUE MAN-EATER WHITE

The blue shark is really blue only in the smaller species. The big blue or dusky shark, which is plentiful enough along this coast, has a dark brown back and is dirty white below. The biggest fellows are twelve feet long.

Your true man-eater is the great white shark, thirty feet long at his worst and a ton in weight. His natural home is the trophies, but he has been seen in the Mediterranean near the British Isles and also off the American coast. But providentially the great white shark is rare. Not more than a dozen are caught in a century. The white shark has a terrible cousin, much like himself. This is the big tiger or Atwood's shark, fifteen feet long and a hundred pounds of weight for every foot. It has been caught off the Atlantic coast, but in the present case it has not been suspected. It is too big.

The mackerel shark may not be guilty, but the tribe cannot be absolved offhand. It sometimes grows to ten feet in length. It is as fighting a fish as any shark when other marine creatures are concerned, but its biographers contend that it attacks man "only in self-defence."

SMALL SHARKS PLENTIFUL.

Small sharks, supposed to be harmless, have been plentiful near these shores. Hardly a bather but has seen their fins within a stone's throw of the life ropes at the Jersey beaches. A shark eight feet long was caught at Coney Island on September 1 of last year. One seven feet long was taken there the next day, and on the third a monster, reported as fourteen feet in length, was added to the kill. These captures were treated as interesting incidents. The public did not like the idea of having sharks near them, but remained confident that the shark of the northern waters would no attack. The bather did not take seriously the suggestion that the man eater of the warm seas might move up. Yet three years ago this month Director Townsend of the Aquarium sounded a shark warning.

"The Gulf Stream brings to the south shore of Long Island and even to the Massachusetts coasts many things distinctly tropical," he said. "We have the sharks here in New York harbour; man-eaters or potential man-eaters, I should say. It is nonsense to say that sharks do not attack men, and southern sharks do not come here. Of course they do stay through a winter."

EVIDENCE OF FEROCITY.

So far as the ferocity of the shark in the region of Florida is concerned evidence is ample. On September 16, 1911, H. C. Rood, of Hartford Conn., was attacked while bathing at Pablo Beach, near Jacksonville, and bitten on the left arm and thigh. Three days later Thomas Ashe, pilot of the schooner Wallace A. McDonald, fell overboard at Pensacola, and was killed by a shark, which was afterwards caught. In November of the same year Jules Antoine fell overboard from the British steamer Aldergate and was almost entirely swallowed by a shark, which was shot to death the next day. This shark was twelve feet long. On March 30, 1914, Boatswain Lunemberg of the steamer Borney Castle fell from the bridge of the vessel into Havana harbor, and before a boat could be lowered was eaten by the sharks.

Reports in the files of the Navy Department bear witness to the willingness of Pacific sharks to eat men.

A gunner's mate lost a leg while bathing in the harbour of Hoilo, P. I., on June 24, 1901. A coxswain's mate of the Piscataqua, lying in the inner harbour of Olongapo, P.I., on November 2, 1904, was seized by the foot, which was badly torn. A sailor of the gunboat Elcano returning from shore in a rowboat stuck his finger through a hole in the bottom from which the plug had been lost. A shark amputated the finger.

STRIKING ILLUSTRATION OF GERMAN METHODS.—This beautiful old church in Flanders was deliberately destroyed by the Huns for no military purpose. It is a good illustration of German temperament.

Lent's Circus Was The First To Use Railway Transportation In Peterboro's Old Circus Days

Many herds of elephants have ambled up and down George street since the old Lent circus showed in Peterborough the year it inaugurated the system of rail transportation in this section of Canada. Thousands of gay, coloured balloons the children reach for and that are as essential to every good circus as pink lemonade have brightened many brief moments for unbroken succession of little ones since the big Lent show of the old days spread their big top on the Market Square before the present Market Hall was erected. Mr. Charlie Brownlee, who has all the batting averages of the circus leagues since P. T. Barnum was a bush leaguer, recalls the fact that it was the Lent show that first came to Peterborough under railway transportation. Prior to that epochal innovation in circus life it was the broad highway for the shows which usually reached Peterborough by the Norwood Road, halting in the outskirts of Ashburnham until the straggling waggons had all arrived and drew up in procession order. Those were the days when Norwood was accredited one of the best circus stands in the country. Farmers used to gather from away back, and the Norwood crowds used to bulge the big tents. Circuses have undergone many changes since those times, and most of the hands and performers are long since dead. But even circus history repeats itself with but minor variations.

Heat Drives Many Citizens To Verandah and Lawn Beds

As Mahomet sought the mountain some of the wiser citizens are seeking the cool, refreshing open air these nights. Since it refuses to be lured or coaxed into their rooms they are going out with their mattresses and pillows, on to their lawns, defying shard bound convention and all the other bonds that hold so many persons in smooth, well-worn grooves. On the construction of the vast majority of local houses little or no time was devoted to plans. The builders of even ten years ago sniffed at what they regarded the impressionist dwellings of the new flock of feverish architects, and turning up their all wise noses they went back to the original idea Eve evolved: four walls so-so, a door here and nowhere else, and windows exactly located. Now-a-days there are sleeping porches for each member of the family, with windows and other ventilation apparatus designed on the idea that cooling zephyrs have to be beguiled into rooms during hot weather, and not that they storm second storeys with the abandon of yeggs when nobody's home.

But apart from the fact that until recently houses were built not wisely, but too well, there is the present practice of night sleeping on verandahs, lawns and balconies. Central Park was not deserted at 2 o'clock this morning, and Victoria Park had a few who decided they had found the coolest spot in town. It is to be hoped that the few independent souls who defy mosquitos and what people say will be amply repaid by refreshing sleep.

Those who have two or three sets of windows in large airy bedrooms, with probably the additional luxury of an electric fan, with its hypocritic burn, should stop to consider the discomfort of the poor in pent-up little rooms in terraces and small houses that hold the heat as jealously as a thermos.

Lovelorn Maids In Brantford Get Sapient Advice

We always used to regard the Brantford Courier as a pretty sane and sound sort of a paper. Of course, to arrive at this opinion we had to allow a couple of yards on both sides of the road around election time. But that's a common ailment. Any Tory editor is apt to put his hind legs up over the dashboard in the heat of an election.

But the Courier has lassoed a lady who is scorting through its columns under the name of Annie Laurie. Now we have heard all sorts of vocalists and heard vocalists thrill, warble and gasp how for this lassie they'd lay them "d-o-o-o-o-n and dee." But we doubt it. The Annie Laurie in the Courier asks no person to dee for her. Her job is to patch broken hearts and hand out soft soap to those whos affections have been tampered with. Before going down to Lorne bridge and jumping into the Grand River the girls in Brantford write to "Annie Laurie." Some of their heart throbs listen like this:

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl of twenty. I am considered ugly by my friends, but my mirror tells me I am the image of Mary Pickford. I am a very popular "school marm." People gaze at me when I pass by on the street. My jealous friends insist that it is because I am so ugly, but I know it is because I am so attractive.

How is it that I don't get a beau as I am old and sensible enough?

PEACH BLOSSOM.

Before hanging herself over the rafter in the hay mow and after drinking a gallon of Paris Green, another one sobbed like this:

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl of exquisite beauty, and have two very attentive lovers. One is handsome, young and poor; the other is forty-five years of age and very wealthy. I love the former dearly, but I love the gold of the latter nearly, if not as well. What would you advise me to do, as I cannot decide.

COUNTRY LASS.

Annie hands out weather-beaten advice to this child that lacks originality. She tells her to say nay nay to the gold and cleave to the poor lover. Better love and cold ride in a lottage than plum pudding and misery in a brown-stone. Rats. Marry the rich chap first. Get him to read the Annie Laurie column. Then he will lay him d-o-o-o-o-n and dee, and the rich young widow can put out the come along Hector sign to her true love. We'd like to run that Annie Laurie column for a week in the Courier. We'd make the bloomin' old paper famous.—Guelph Mercury.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Ready Respones To The Appeal

Twelve Cases of Reading Material for the Soldiers Secured

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of Capt. E. M. Best and the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, which he represents, we desire, through your columns, to extend our warmest thanks to all those who so generously and so promptly responded to his request in your issue of yesterday for books and magazines, for use for our troops on shipboard and overseas. You will be pleased to know that we have received, packed, and forwarded to-day, twelve cases of excellent reading material, and we have been assured by Capt. Best that nothing could be more acceptable to the men who will be so fortunate as to share in these very generous gifts.

With renewed thanks for the very hearty response to this appeal.

Yours truly,
CAMPBELL & BEST.

HUMIDITY GREATER; TEMPERATURE LESS

Not so Much Heat, But Conditions More Oppressive

A greater degree of humidity than at any other period of the summer yesterday and to-day had citizens sweltering in an atmosphere that was really oppressive. The highest temperature for the day was recorded at noon, when the thermometer showed 89. The heavy atmosphere intensified the heat to such an etxent that many people who had stood the heat of the previous day were yesterday on the verge of collapse.

No prostrations have been reported at either hospitals. The barometer at the observatory has been low for the last two days, indicating rain, but as yet Jupiter Pluvius has failed to make his call on Peterborough. People subject to bronchial affections and heart disease find this weather particularly trying.

Grass and flowers show the need of rain.

Order Million Worth of Artificial Limbs

New York, July 19.—Manufacturers here have received orders aggregating $1,000,000 for artificial limbs to be used by soldiers of Australia and New Zealand, crippled at the Dardanelles, and on the French front, it was announced yesterday. The money for this purpose was raised by popular subscription in the British colonies, according to J. W. McGregor, chairman of the South Australian Soldiers Fund, who is now in this city.

Every Women's Ambition For Rosy Cheeks Now Easily Satisfied

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, and bright eyes, give them to a woman and she is happy.

The woman who attracts, whose fresh, dainty complexion commands admiration, is always careful of her health, particularly of her blood condition. Bad complexion always means bad blood.

Girls, don't let your blood grow thin or watery. To do so brings on haggard looks and declining strength.

Many a woman who has allowed herself to run down, to develop that tired, worried look has built up again in this simple way. Why don't you try it?

At the close of every meal, just take two small chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets — any person can do this in a minute. The action of Ferrozone is apparent at once. It sets you up, makes you feel good, starts up your appetite, aids digestion, brings that old-time feeling of youth into the system again.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one leading to health.

Not a man, woman or child needing blood, vigour, endurance —not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't relelve immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. For better looks and better health try Ferrozone yourself, sold everywhere, 50c. per box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

U. S. Guardsmen Training By The Rio Grande 130 Degrees in The Sun

Headquarters New York Division, United States Army, McAllen, Texas, July 19.—While the men of the New York division read to-day of the sufferings of New York city under a temperature of only 88 degrees, they themselves were fairly comfortable all day in a temperature that stood at 94 degrees at eight o'clock in the morning, 99 degrees at noon and 98 at six o'clock to-night. These figures taken in the shade. In the sun averaged ten degrees warmer, but there has been no humidity and in spite of the fact that the sun is so strong that it will burn through two thicknesses of tent canvass sufficiently to tan a person almost in an afternoon, there was a delightful breeze that fanned the camp from the morning to night. There were no heat prostrations.

The men now have had just two weeks of experience in the torrid heat and have learned surprisingly well how to guard against the temporary ills that result from living improperly in this climate. Their food has changed since they left home, but the change has been of excellent benefit practically to every man, in spite of the carping criticisms made of the food. These criticisms have been absolutely groundless, for men who came here thin and pale and weak now are blooming out into healthy, sturdy soldiers.

The congested condition on the railroads naturally caused some confusion at first in the quartermaster and commissary departments, but every unit has been fed three times a day with wholesome food, and the practically empty condition of the regimental hospitals is the strongest and most convincing proof that the men are getting probably the most suitable food they ever ate in their lives. It is safe to say that if twelve thousand men of any other part of the world to-day were pitted against the boys under Major General O'Ryan in a physical examination test, the New York boys, used to eating almost anything they wish, would make far and away the superior showing. There has been some grumblers, some slackers, but the unanimous disposition of the men is hearty and superb.

SAYS NEW RUSSIA WILL EMERGE FROM THE WORLD WAR

(By William Philip Simms.)

PETROGRAD, June 19.—(By mail).—"War is not at all bad." Pastor Charles Wagner, author of "The Simple Life," declared to me in the course of a Paris interview, December, 1914.

And when I asked him to go on and explain, he said:

"Out of this turmoil and slaughter a few blessings are bound to emerge, like lilies from the sand of a pond. For one thing I see a return from a highly material to a more spiritual form of everyday life. For another I believe the minds of the masses will be lifted by the war to a vision of bigger things.

"No man can go through such an experience and remain the petty creature he was at the beginning. He cannot go back to his awl and his last and pick up bristle and thread just where he left off.

"War hardens but war educates; one must be different afterwards; one must be wiser.

Included All Peoples.

The pastor-philosopher was not speaking of the soldiers of France alone. He included all people affected by the war — the English, the French, the Germans, the Austrians and the Russians.

His inference was that France will be a different country after the war. So will Germany and England and Russia and all the others.

Russia is bound to be a new Russia. That is one of those things the war means to his mighty empire. If Western Europe will be changed through this Armageddon, how much more so will Europe of the east where the people are comparatively young?

Russia, in fact, has already changed already started on the new road.

The American coming to Russia expects to find things much more centralized than in France or England. He expects to see the government working independently, above and apart from the people, because in the past the government has played the part of the parent looking after the needs of the child, or the people. To his surprise he observes nothing of the kind.

He finds the Russian people working for and with the government.

He discovers two great armies in the land, one in uniform, under arms, fighting. The other in plain clothes, or overalls, at bench and lathe, working. The government's agent, the general staff, commands both and co-ordinates their efforts.

Working For Victory.

Through their all-Russian Zemstvo Union, their all-Russian Municipality Union, their Central Committee, their war industry committees, their co-operative societies and kindred organizations, Russian plain people and Russian gentry are working hand in hand, collaborating with the government and army for the good of the country at large and for victory.

Never before have the people shown such an eagerness to do public service, and never before have they displayed such an appetite for it.

No one here makes any secret of these things. I have talked to many people, high and low, and the facts which I have attempted to set down in this series of articles are recognized as showing the new trend in Russia.

"War hardens, but war educates," said Wagner. And it "lifts the minds of the masses to higher visions." One can see it working out here in Russia, even with the naked eye. The people have demanded to be put to work for the public good. Jobs have been given them, they have set to work and already they love it.

LOSES DIVORCE SUIT FOR VISITING HIS WIFE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 19. — When a man files suit for divorce he should not be making friendly calls on his wife while the case is pending, if he really is sincere in the charges on which he bases his petition.

With that ruling Judge Lucas, in the Circuit Court, sustained a motion to dismiss the divorce petition of John R. Webster. The wife's motion stated Webster had visited in her home as long as two weeks at a time since he first asked the divorce. The Websters were married in 1909. The husband charged general indignities.

TALES FROM FRANCE

EXTRACTS FROM A DOCTOR'S BOOK

(Extracts from a Doctor's Book.)

The following has been taken from a book, entitled "Red Cross and Iron Cross," by "A Doctor in France." The book is full of grim scenes, in a shelled village on the line of the German advance. He tells of the French women who cheerfully gave up their time to tending the German wounded. He narrates how one mother whose only son had been killed by the invaders, watched tenderly at the deathbed of a young German.

The first extract is a conversation between a German officer, who goes by the name of Adalbert, and the French doctor:

"So you were at Rheims?" said Adalbert to the doctor; "I must say I envy you being there. It must have been a wonderful sight to see the huge cathedral in flames, one of those sights one can never forget."

"Never," said the doctor.....

"The unfortunate situation of the cathedral in the very firing line of our heavy guns made it unavoidable that the old building should receive a scratch or two from the claws of the German eagle—a very striking metaphor if you allow me to say so. Besides, Gothic architecture has had its day, and as the 'Frankfurter Zeitung so cleverly points out, the disappearance of these old monuments will only hasten the birth of new and astounding creations of German genius."

"In the record of the German major who died of tetantus one sees another ugly side of the officer caste. He complained of everything. Although the hosptial had no drugs, because a German shell had demolished the chemists' shop, he pointed to his Iron Cross and demanded naptha. Finally, he said he must have room to himself, as he was a superior officer. He could not lie in the same room with his own men. And then the indictment of the dead major by a German Socialist soldier, himself dying:

"Did you hear what he called us when he told you he would not lie next to his own men? He called us swine—that is how a Prussian officer speaks to his men! We obey them, cowards as we are, because we fear them, but we hate them as much as we fear them. It was he that led us through the burning streets of Louvain, and through the smoking ruins of what was once called Aerschat. It was he who made us loot and plunder Termonde and drunk with wine and blood and lust, break into the houses and outrage their women. I rolled off to sleep that night with a bottle of champagne in my hand on the steps in the high altar in one of their churches."

There is a grim story of a man who was brought into the hospital in a khaki uniform. He said he was a Canadian and had escaped from the Germans after being made a prisoner, but feeling himself near death he confesses that he is a German spy. The doctor who had been suspicious questioned him:

"How long were you with the English?"

"Since after Mons."

"In what capacity?"

"I served first in the Transport service and then as a chauffeur with a Red Cross motor ambulance."

"You were then a Belgian refugee, I suppose?"

"Yes, rather."

"Did you kill your man, or did you rob the dead—hyena fashion?"

"All our khaki uniforms are made at Dusseldorf," said the man with a certain pride.

"The man groaned."

"No; I wouldn't try that groan again if I were you. When a clever man like you gets himself up as a Tommy he ought to know that an Englishman does not groan when the doctor dresses his wound; he never utters a sound; he clenches his teeth, if it comes to the worst—but that is all.

"Nor would any self-respecting Tommy ever dream of growing that dirty red beard of yours.....You made an awful mess of it when you did not stretch out your dirty fingers for that Woodbine I offered you, and that you didn't feel like taking a cup of tea was an equally bad shot. I have yet to learn that there exists a Tommy who resists a Woodbine or a cup of tea."

"Next door stood a rocking horse on three legs, stripped of its saddle, its mane and tail torn off, its back and flanks hacked by deep, angry cuts from some sharp instrument.

"In the corner of the room stood a large doll's house with a red tiled roof smashed in. On a low table under the window stood a musical box all smashed to pieces.....The polished floor was strewn with lacerated sheets of childrens picture books and dolls and toys of every description—all smashed to atoms. In a dainty brass bed, with blue curtains, well tucked up under her embroidered counterpane, lay a smart Paris doll with her own baby doll clasped in her arms, murdered in her sleep by a well-directed blow which had battered her face."

"One of the most terrible stories in the book is that of the wounded German who assisted in the massacre of 800 civilians at Dinant. His prey was an old woman whom he saw running down the street, and whom he stabbed as she was entering a house. As he bent to see if she was dead, "she opened her eyes and looked at him with the same eyes as his grandfather had looked at him the day he started for the war." Then comes the terrible obsession of these eyes. But the tale should be read in full text.

These are but a few of the incidents in "Red Cross and Iron Cross," but they give a very good idea of how the Germans wage war.

Hospital Patient Tells How James Hart Came to Death in the East River.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Following the recovery of the body of James Hart, a driver, of No. 319 avenue A, from the East River, John O'Loughlin, a patient at Bellevue Hospital, told the police that he had seen three men throw Hart into the water. Until Mr. O'Loughlin came forward the drowning was believed accidental.

Mr. O'Loughlin said he was seated on a veranda of the sixth floor of the hospital when he saw three men walk out on the pier at East Thirtieth street and approach another seated on a stringpiece. Suddenly, he said, the trio seized the sitting man, threw him into the river, picked up something and walked away.

Joseph Carr, a workman on an adjoining pier, said he had heard a cry, but had seen no one. Mrs. Carrie Hart, the driver's wife, told the police that three men, none of whom she knew, had notified her of her husband's death.

The departure of the 1.28 C.P.R. train for Ottawa this morning witnessed the leaving of another squad of Peterborough men who are off to do their bit for the Empire. Many times since the war began have little groups such as this one departed. The public only turns out to see the big squads leave and the small contingents, like the one which left this morning, consisting of eight men to join the 238th Forestry Battalion, have gone away unnoticed. However, each man was surrounded by a family group and the farewell at the station was an affectionate one if not as noisy as on some other occasions. The Forestry Battalion expect to secure a good representation of Peterborough men for the battalion and the eight men who have gone are looked upon as the advance guard. Sergt. Stanley will be at the recruiting office to-morrow.

OTTAWA, July 19.—Total enlistments in Canada up to July 15 number 350,655. Ontario leading with 145,195. From the Toronto division alone there are 79,715. Quebec has given 36,890 men, of whom 30,186 were from the Montreal district. From the Maritime Provinces the number is 31,633, and from Manitoba to the coast 136,939.

STRATFORD, July 19.—Lieut.-Col. Cecil Williams, Ottawa, Chief Recruiting Officer for the Dominion, visited the city to-night in connection with the campaign to stimulate recruiting in Military District No. 1. He intimated that about the end of July a conference would be held in London, attended by representatives from all sections of western Ontario, to standardize recruiting methods. Col. Williams stated that Premier Borden was seriously considering the institution of a national badge to protect men honestly exempt from the allegation of being slackers. The speaker paid a high tribute to Camp Borden, declaring that within three weeks it will be recognized as the most wonderful training ground in Canada, rivalling the famous Aldershot in England. "Everything is being done for the men's comfort," said Col. Williams. "When the newness has worn off I am perfectly certain the men will relish the surroundings."

FALLING OFF IN DRINKING

However Canada Consumed Three Quarters of a Gallon of Liquor and Almost Five Gallons of Beer Per Head.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 20.—Despite the enlargement of the dry belts in Canada and the war the people of the Dominion during the last fiscal year consumed three quarters of a gallon of liquor and almost five gallons of beer per head of population. This was, however, a considerable falling off. In the previous year the consumption of beer was slightly in excess of six gallons per head of population.

The tobacco consumption during the year was also fractionally less per head.

WEDDING BELLS

ENGLISH—McKEVITT.

On the morning of July 11, a very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's, Midnapore, when Miss Elizabeth Anna, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McKevitt, was united in marriage with Mr. Michael Joseph English of Airdrie. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of St. Joseph's Church, Calgary, who is an uncle of the groom.

The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Nellie McKevitt, was gowned in white satin draped with Georgette crepe and trimmed with seed pearls, her bouquet being of roses and fern. The bridesmaid was gowned in cream silk crepe trimmed with shadow lace and carried crimson carnations and fern. Mr. Emil Hoschka of Calgary attended the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests went to the home of the bride's parents of the Red Deer Lake district, where a wedding breakfast was served. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. English left on the evening train for Banff, where their honeymoon will be spent, after which they will reside in Airdrie.—Calgary Herald.

OBITUARY

MRS. MELISSA COOKE.

The death occurred last night at 7.30 at Nicholls Hospital of Mrs. Melissa Cooke at the age of 81 years. The deceased lady was born in Cornwall, Ont., but had lived in this city practically all her life. She had been ailing for some time and the end was not expected. She leaves behind her one son, Mr. R. J. Cooke, Bethune street, and three daughters, Mrs. D. W. Brown, of Calgary, Misses Jennie and Cassie at home. The funeral will take place Saturday at 2.30 from the residence of her daughter, corner King and Park, interment to take place at Little Lake cemetery.

JOCKEYS GOING TO WAR

English Riders Have to Exchange Silks for Khaki.

LONDON, July 19.—The call to the colours of all able-bodied men between the ages of 18 and 41 under the new conscription act, threatens seriously to interfere with horse racing, the majority of the present day jockeys being liable for service. Frank and Stanley Wootton have been on active service for some months, but the compulsory service calls out such famous jockeys as Frank Rickaby, J. Childs, C. Childs, H. Jellis, and Lancaster.

Many jockeys have suffered from broken bones in carrying out their profession in the past and only such deformities will enable them to keep in the saddle during the continuation of the war. The well known Anglo-French jockey, George Stern, offered himself for service, but has been rejected as being too short.

HOW TO TRAIN A GERANIUM

By Eben E. Rexford in the Chicago Tribune

Complaints are constantly coming in about unsatisfactory geraniums. The general trend of sentiment seems to be that it is almost impossible to make the plants grow symmetrically. "I have seen specimens that were compact and bushy," a correspondent writes, "but mine always grow up 'leggy' and scrawly, and are so unsightly that I've seriously thought of discarding them. Are the kinds I have seen a special variety that doesn't seem to get on the market for amateur gardeners?"

The bushy, compact plants this correspondent writes of are not special varieties. They are simply plants of common varieties that have been properly cared for. The fact is, we have no plant that is more tractable than the geranium, and it is one of the easiest things in the world to make a bushy, compact specimen of any variety, provided one goes at it in the right way.

Naturally, the first question that will come up in the amateur's mind on reading what I have said above is, What is the right way? I'll tell you.

We'll suppose that we have a young plant, three or four inches high. It is without branches. If we let it alone it will grow up, up, up in a straight stalk until it becomes so tall that it crooks under its own weight and has to be tied to a stake to keep it from doubling down on itself.

Perhaps a few branches may start, but they will be so few and far between that they don't amount to anything, and their irregularity will simply emphasize the general unsightliness of the specimen. This is the result of letting the plant train itself.

If we were to take the plant in hand when small and pinch off its top, branches would form near its base. If we allow these branches to grow to a length of three or four inches and then pinch them back they would also develop branches, and in a short time we would have a plant not more than a foot high with a score of branches, each one of which would be a flowering plant.

In this way we force our plant to become bushy and compact and make it shapely, and from it we can reasonably expect to obtain more flowers in a season than we would be likely to get from a score of plants of the same age as ordinarily trained.

There's nothing difficult about it. You simply go at it in the right way, and persist in pinching and pruning until you oblige the plant to take on the shape of those you have seen. You can do it — if the advice given above is followed.

Possibly some of the branches will insist on making an effort to get the start of others. Pinch them back relentlessly, and keep pinching them back until the others have had a chance to catch up with them. When this happens, let them all look out for themselves.

It is a mistake to think that a geranium requires a good deal of water. It does not. Keep the soil in the pot moist all through at all times and be satisfied with that.

The window at which geraniums are grown should be a sunny one. In a shady place they will make a spindling growth, which is not at all conduce to the production of flowers.

It is a mistake to feed these plants with a strong plant food. If this is done there will be a great growth of branches and few flowers. Give just enough to keep the plants growing healthily. A rapid growth is almost always a weak one, from which there is likely to be a reaction sooner ro later.

Plants intended for winter flowering should not be allowed to bloom during summer. Hold their flowers in reserve for winter, when they will be most appreciated.

Old plants that are not satisfactory in shape can be made so by cutting them back until there is little left of them except a stub. Branches will start along that portion of the stalk that is left. Encourage the development of these until you have a bushy plant. But it is better to start out with the plant while young than to attempt to make a fine specimen out of an old one.

The rose geranium will be found a most delightful plant when grown as a miniature tree. In order to bring about this result it should not be allowed to branch until it has grown to the height where you want the head to form. Then nip off its top and encourage the production of branches at that point. Cut back these branches until there are enough of them to make a thick head.

SHOOTS AT SHARK NEAR OYSTER BAY

OYSTER BAY, L.I., July 20—Large sharks were seen in the harbour here by Allen Flower, his brother, Butler, and his father, Frank Flower, local fishermen. The men shot at one of the sharks, which swam to the entrance of the Bayville Creek, where at low tide the water is scarcely waist deep, but the shark dived and escaped, leaving behind a trail of crimson foam.

The three men had been dredging for oysters and had anchored with a boatload of the shellfish just outside the Bayville bridge, two miles from the Oyster Bay village. Bayville Creek is a favourite place for swimmers, but none was in the water at the time. Allen Flower noticed a movement in the water in the deepest part of the channel, one hundred yards from the oyster boat. Then he saw the long grey form of a big shark coming toward the surface. The big dorsal fin was entirely out of the water as the monster came to the top and slowly moved toward the water under the bridge. While his brother hurried ashore for a gun Allan Flower kept an eye on the shark, which swam under the bridge and then turned and circled lazily back towards the open waters of the bay.

When Butler Flower returned with an old shotgun the men rowed out toward the shark. When within 25 feet Allen Flower fired both barrels, aiming at the base of the back fin. The shark leaped into the air and then dived straight down and disappeared.

Bequest Releases Woman from Jail Home

TORONTO, July 20.—Sitting lonely in the Orangeville Jail for eleven years, dreaming of companionship, comfort and amusement, Mrs. Martha McKitrick suddenly found her dreams realized last week when a lawyer from the Toronto General Corporation called on her and informed her that she had been left $10,000 by an almost forgotten sister. The old lady was transported with joy when she finally realized that her years of confinement were over and that she would be free to spend the few remaining years of her life in comfort and affluence.

Eleven Years in Jail.

Mrs. McKitrick, who is over seventy years of age, was confined in the Orangeville Jail eleven years ago for vagrancy. Since then she had seldom heard from her sister, Miss Jane Coulter, who died in Orangeville several months ago and left the income on $10,000 to Mrs. McKitrick. At her death the money will go to charity.

The aged woman arrived in this city and was taken to the Aged Women's Homes, where she will spend the rest of her days. Her first ride in an auto came when she was driven from the Union Station to the Home.

BLAMES NONCOMBATANTS.

Famous Berlin Editor Says They Bar the Way to Peace.

Up to about June 20 the German press, according to clippings from the papers recently received in this country, accepted the news of the Russian victories in Bukowina and Galicia with scorn, contempt, and incredulity. Then a new note was struck—one of warning and rebuke to those who were still talking of defeating Russia. This note is said to predominate a remarkable article by Theodor Wolff editor of the Berliner Tageblatt, the issue of June 22. Herr Wol writes:

"A famous very witty statesman said lately, when conversation turned on Russian revolutions and similar events in the past: 'These things in Russia never had any real conclusion. They are like Russian romances, which also commence in this way, but never have any ending. Nothing in Russia has an end; everything begins all over again.' A French artist has drawn a gigantic Cossack with the words underneath, 'Here we are again!' We well knew that the Russians were still there without this picture. It was only those happy optimists sitting at their beer tables or writing tables who have now for almost two years continually declared that Russia had been completely crushed who are surprised or disappointed. Already before the war these optimists were more certain in their judgment because they knew neither England, France, nor Russia, and if they journeyed abroad they only saw everything very superficially; anything of importance completely escaped them.

"The enemy is not yet finished with. The Russian romances have no end; they always begin again. Therefore Bethmann Hollweg was certainly right when in one of his speeches he spoke of the prospects of peace in a skeptical manner. At the same time he used an expression which in the enemies' countries has been purposely misinterpreted. His remarks that peace could only be built up on the present war map have been explained as though he wished to retain everything which is now in the hands of the German troops. For instance, the French Socialist Dubreuil, commenting in the Humanite, writes: 'That is to say, German force thinks to hold everything it has taken. France is amputated, and shall remain so, Belgium and Serbia have been torn out of the book of life, and must not be reinstated. That is the peace which the German Chancellor imposes in order, as he says, to shorten the fearful sufferings of the nations.' And M. Dubreuil calls upon French Socialists to fight to the knife.

"We have made on former occasions the remark that a clear unambiguous explanation of the war objects is very desirable. Expressions which have been formulated ambiguously for this reason or that have up till now done nothing to advance the cause of peace. All one can do is to turn ones self against the industrious noncombatants who, taking care not to fatigue themselves, are always trying to bar the way to peace."

Thought it was a bee hive.—A young couple away on their honeymoon were staying at a hotel. The husband went out to buy a few articles and, returning, could not find the room in which he had left his wife. At last, after a fruitless search he stood outside a door and called, "Honey, honey." There was a moment's silence, then a masculine voice replied, "Clear off, you blethering idiot, this is the smokeroom, not a blessed beehive."

Liberal Advisory Committee

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 20.— The National Liberal Advisory committee continuing deliberations this morning received the reports of various sub-committees. The sub-committee on rural credits suggested that a solution might be found along the line of establishment of provincial banks with power to issue bonds to be guaranteed by both Dominion and Provincial governments. The sub-committee on land settlement said it would not be advisable to settle soldiers without farming experience on land after the war, but recommended the appointment of federal boards to take up the whole question of occupations for returned soldiers.

MOONLIGHT TO SECURE MONEY FOR TOBACCO

A Canvas of the City is also to be Undertaken by Oversea Club

A meeting of the Overseas Tobacco Fund Committee was held in the Public Library last evening. Arrangements are to be made shortly for the holding of a moonlight excursion down the river.

A canvas will be made at a future date so that regular returns may be made of tobacco to the front. Mrs. W. H. Dunsford reported this morning that the Bonner-Worth Co. had contributed another $100.00 to the fund, which needs money very badly.

FRENCH CAPTURE THE GERMAN FIRST LINE TRENCHES

Germans Driven Back On Twelve Mile Front 2,900 Prisoners Captured

French Take the German First Line For a Distance of Three Miles While the British Advance One Thousand Yards---French Have Captured Fifty Square Miles of German Territory, Including Twelve Thousand Prisoners and a Number of Guns During the Past Two Weeks.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE

LONDON, July 21.—Allies push the foe back on a twelve-mile front. Two thousand nine hundred prisoners captured south of the Somme. The French take the German first line for a distance of three miles. The British advance one thousand yards.

COLLAR BONE WAS BROKEN

MILLBROOK, July 21.—Mr. John Allen met with an accident on Friday last while unloading hay with the hay fork. He stood too near to the part being lifted by the fork and was thrown off the waggon, sustaining a broken collar bone and a severe bruising, which latter has caused him much pain. He is recovering as well as can be expected.

A Wonderful Food—

Not only delicious—but there's "life" in

Grape-Nuts

Try this experiment yourself. Take some Grape-Nuts direct from the package. Hold the granules in the palm of your hand under sunlight or an electric bulb. You will notice tiny shining particles of light on the granules—the starch of the grains transformed.

Then do the same with some other prepared food—any other prepared food. You don't see these glistening particles.

"There's a Reason"

The wonderful taste—the wonderful nourishment in this great food is due to the fact that in addition to the sweetness of the whole wheat is combined the delicate flavor and food value of malted barley.

This gives Grape-Nuts two great factors that no mere wheat food can possess. The delicious zest of malted barley imparts a savor that is universally liked; and beyond that, the barley contains a digestive (not in wheat) which, with long baking, transforms the starch of these full grains into a form of sugar which shows on the golden-brown granules.

If you haven't tried Grape-Nuts food you have a treat in store. It not only appeals to the appetite but is a powerful rebuilder for body and brain.

All Nickles Now Worth Six Cents; War Responsible

Demand for Metal in Munitions Manufacture Cause Increase in Value.

The European war, upon which almost all abnormal conditions are blamed these days, has boosted the actual value of the United States five-cent piece to six cents.

Since the war the value of nickel has gradually risen. This increase has been due to the great demand for the metal for the manufacture of ammunition and weapons.

Back in the days when the world was at peace there was actually about one and one-quarter cents' worth of nickel in every American five-cent piece. The metal value of the piece increased as nickel became scarcer, until the worth of the metal has increased about 500 per cent. and now makes the value of the metal in the coin 20 per cent. greater than its currency value.

TWO WAR ENQUIRIES

Dardanelles and Mesopotamia Campaigns to Be Investigated.

LONDON, July 21.—The Government has consented to the demand for investigations into the Dardanelles and Mesopotamian campaigns, which were asked for by Sir Edward Carson.

Before Sir Edward Carson's motion was moved Premier Asquith said he recognized there was widespread genuine anxiety regarding these campaigns, and deprecating any debate which might give an impression that the country was in any way divided the Government thought it right to institute two separate inquiries into the campaigns. The Government had no desire to conceal the past shortcomings of the arrangements in Mesopotamia, or to shield those responsible. The inquiries would be held by small bodies composed of members of both Houses and a representative of Australia, and would be held in secret.

Reeve Fennell of Havelock Has Resigned

Intimates That He Is Only a Figurehead at Present—Says Councillors Are Transacting Business Without Consulting Him

THE REASONS

HAVELOCK, July 21.—Reeve Fennell has tendered his resignation to the Council, and the following letter recived by Clerk Bryans, explains his reasons for doing so:

Havelock, July 18.

J. W. Bryans, Village Clerk.

Dear Sir,—I hereby tender my resignation as Reeve for the Village of Havelock.

I understand this is a step one should hesitate to take without good and sufficient reasons which I submit, as follows:

In my opinion, and I think you will concur with me, a Reeve should be of sufficient intelligence and have sufficient executive ability to take his place in the administration of affairs of the village, especially when pertaining to matters in which the expenditure of the taxes is concerned. And if he is to be in a position to work intelligently in making up and striking the village rate it is at least necessary for him to know what expenditures are being entered into, and to what extent. And I also hold, more especially this year when every economy should be used, and no exepnditure made that can be avoided until the war is won, that the Reeve should be a man with whom the Council could consult as to the advisability of an expenditure, and if made he should be qualified to judge if the village had received a fair return for the money.

At the present time I do not know concerning these matters and for the past months have not been in consultation with the Councillors as to expenditures made or inspected. In the interests of the Village another Reeve should be elected.

Not caring to be a figurehead with the prospective of being the scapegoat at the end of the year, I respectfully ask you to lay this notice before the Council.

Thanking you for your able assistance during the past months of the year, I remain,

Your servant,

EDW. FENNELL.

GERMAN NAVAL MEN CAPTURED

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, July 21.—The British have captured one hundred and thirty-six naval officers with over two thousand men, and the Germans have captured forty-six officers and over three hundred men, it was announced in the Commons.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poisons which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Berlin Admits That The British Hold The Positions

Maintain Grip on Longueval and the Delville Farm, Says German Official Statement---Shelling by the British and French is Very Severe---Hard Fighting on the Eastern Front.

INCREASING ACTIVITY

BERLIN, July 21.—The text of the German official statement follows:

"Between the sea and the Ancre there have been repeated vigorous firing and patrol enterprises.

"Considerable British forces attacked our positions north and northwest of Fromelles. They were repulsed. Wherever they succeeded in penetrating our trenches they were ejected by counter-attacks. We captured more than 300 prisoners, among them some officers.

"On both sides of the Somme renewed fighting of a severe character is progressing. North of the river, after a strong attack, the British again penetrated Longueval and the Delville farm. The enemy had withdrawn before our counter-attack. He is still holding a portion of the village and the farm.

"Early yesterday morning, on the whole front from the Foureaux wood to the Somme, Anglo-French attacks began. The first strong assault was broken. South of the river in the afternoon, the French twice attacked unsuccessfully in the district of Belloy, and yesterday morning in the sector of Estrees and Soyecourt. Three attacks were canguinarily repulsed. Also in a salient near Soyevourt the enemy was repulsed in bayonet fighting.

"The enemy artillery is developing the greatest strength on both banks of the Somme.

"On portions of the Champagne front there has been spasmodic, vigorous artillery activity. In the Argonne mining operations took place.

"In the Meuse sector (Verdun front) there were no important events.

"Successful German patrol enterprises were carried out on Combres height.

"Near Arras, Peronne, Biaches, and Vermand, enemy aeroplanes were shot down, two of them by Lieuts. Wintgens and Hoehndorff. The Emperor has conferred the Order Pour Le Merite upon Lieut. Hoehndorff who, as it is now stated, head of a French biplane southeast of Peronne on July 15.

FIGHTING IN VOLHYNIA.

BERLIN, July 21.—Hard fighting has been resumed in Volhynia southwest of Lutsk. German troops under Gen. Von Linsingen are on the aggressive here at some points, and have succeeded in scoring advances. The Russians are bombarding the Teutonic lines along the Lower Lipa with increasing activity.

A NAVAL BATTLE.

LONDON, July 21.—Heavy cannonading was heard off the west coast of Jutland, and in the Baltic. It is believed the Russians have had an engagement with the German fleet.

RESTRICTIONS REMOVED.

LONDON, July 21.—Swiss despatches says the Kaiser has removed all restrictions upon Zeppelins and submarines.

"KILL US!" BEGGED WOUNDED; AND CALLING FOR GRENADES, FRENCH OFFICER DID IT

WINCHESTER, Mass., July 21. — John Sheehan, Harvard, '11, back from Verdun front with a medal of honour for courageous work as an ambulance driver in the American legion, to-day told the United Press this story of the battlefields as it was related to him by a French captain of Zouaves who lay mortally wounded at a base hospital.

Following one of the terrific charges by the Boches by a shell swept slope held by the French, the field was strewn with dead and dying. Incessant artillery fire for three days before the final charge had pitted the hillside with huge shell-craters and had driven the French first line infantry back to the crest of the knoll. Then came the Germans, pouring out of their network of trenches, stumbling up the steep slopes and going down before the rifle fire of the French zouaves. Three times the Boches attempted to gain the crest and each time they were mowed down by a hail of lead, falling back to their lines in scattered groups.

Dead Piled High.

When night came on and the German charge had been stayed, No Mans' Land, between the French lines on the top of the hill and the Teutons' position on the plane below was piled high with dead and wounded; and the huge holes torn by the German shells were filled nearly level full with bodies.

Captain X had been in command of one of the first line trenches and his company had fallen back just before the charge, leaving many wounded behind. Among the latter was a lieutenant, a brother-in-law of the captain's, with whom he had taken the oath of allegiance when their company was called to the colours.

Calling to a gigantic Zouave known as the bravest man in the company, the captain told him he intended creeping down the blood slope under cover of darkness, in the hope that he might rescue his comrade and asked the man to accompany him.

As they made their way down, inch by inch, for incendiary shells screaming overhead lit the sky from time to time, making them clear targets for the German guns, the captain and his man passed hundreds of moaning dying comrades and Germans; and their canteens were nearly empty when they reached the trench they had once held.

There, nearly dead from thirst and wounds, they found the lieutenant, half way up the side of a great hole torn by a 16 inch shell. In the darkness the captain's flashlight lit up the crater with a ghastly effect and he hastened to pass his comrade up to the Zouave, dimming his ears to the groans of the wounded all about him. As he himself started to ascend the slope a hand clutched his ankle and a voice in German begged:

"Kill us, kill us."

Turning his flashlight toward the crater's bottom, Captain X saw there more than a dozen frightfully wounded Germans, gasping for water and several dead from their sufferings.

Did Not Wish to Kill Them.

Trying to draw away, he answered the German captain, who called to him, saying that he did not wish to kill them, that he could not do it in cold blood.

Then the Teuton captain, his right arm hanging in shreds, clung to him in desperation. He must kill them, in God's mercy he must. The hole in which they law was not exposed to the fire of combatants, but the Germans would never again attempt the desperate charge in which they had lost so heavily the afternoon before, and the French could not move from their impregnable position. It meant that he and all his men would lie there until they died from thirst or their wounds.

Captain X mopped the clammy sweat from his brow and thought of the awful torture these men, enemies though they were, must endure, and then, deciding instantly, ordered his man to carry the Lieutenant on his back to the French lines and return with as many hand grenades as he could carry.

For nearly an hour he lay beside the top of the crater, with only the occasional scream of a shell overhead to drown out the groan of the Germans.

Then the Zouave returned, and with a muttered prayer they threw the grenades down into the heap of Germans until the last cries were stilled.

Investigations Are Being Conducted

HAVELOCK, July 21.—Investigations are being conducted at Westwood and Hastings regarding the deaths in those villages of infants, under suspicious circumstances.

Assessment Appeal Was Dismissed

HAVELOCK, July 21.—At the adjourned sittings of the Judge's Court on the village assessment His Honour Judge Huycke, announced that after written arguments had been submitted by counsel for Alext. Primrose and the C.P.R., that there was no appeal entered in the case of the C.P.R. assessment.

Mr. Thos. Stillman appealed against the valuation of $100 on some lots at the West End crossing. And the Judge reduced the valuation to $75.00.

Mr. Alex. Primrose, on behalf of his mother-in-law, appealed against the valuation of $350 on four lots, and succeeded in getting them reduced to $250.

GAS AND SHELL STORM CANNOT DAUNT IRISH

Frederick Palmer Describes How Dublin Fusiliers Stood Fast and Then Charged

Frederick Palmer writes from British headquarters, France, as follows: "We would like to have Casement along here and give him a taste of the German gas," said the Irish soldiers who repulsed the first gas attack on the British front since December, 1915. This, the sixteenth, known as the Irish division, with Irish officers and an Irish general, has been recruited from all parts of the Nationalist Ireland since the war began. While holding a trench for the first time they got their baptism of fire in a deluge.

One of the main points of attack is a chalk pit salient in the Loos region, held by the Dublin Fusiliers, all of whom were recruited from Dublin and Inniskilling. A heavy artillery bombardment and a big cloud of gas started here at five thirty in the morning, the wind being right. The combination of gunfire and gas is the hardest test for the troops in their first action.

The Germans sent an infantry attack on either side of the salient. The attackers in the south were unable to get through the barb wires. Here the Irish, who had stuck to their trenches, killed and wounded by rifle fire, nearly every German before they could retire. On the north side, where the gunfire had destroyed the wire and wrecked the trenches, the Germans penetrated the British line. The Irish fell back to a support trench, where a machine gun commanding the position was turned on the invaders. A sergeant went about reassuring the men and led a counter-attack against the surviving Germans with the bayonet, over the shell pounded earth, close quick work in which the Irish excel, according to the accounts of the men here. So far as is known no German escaped death or capture.

Such a successful repulse and well-planned attack by the Irish at this juncture thrilled the whole of the army. It was at the time of Casement's landing in Ireland. Altogether three clouds of gas were loosed against the Irish and on the brigade adjoining, which showed equal gallantry, while change of wind forced the Germans to evacuate some of their front trenches.

SEE SIZE OF ARMIES

New York saw 132,000 men in the "Preparedness" parade march twenty abreast past the reviewing stand in twelve hours on one marching day. The United States army at its full strength of 120,000 men could pass in about eleven hours—less than a day. The dead of Germany alone in the war are put by British official figures at 700,000. That number would take more than five marching days to pass. The British Empire's army of 5,000,000 men would take more than thirty-six days—six weeks of daily marching.—New York World.

WOMAN A PHYSICAL WRECK

Tells in Following Letter How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a physical wreck. I had been going to a doctor for several years but he did me no good. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to give it a fair trial, and it gave me relief from bearing down pains which had been so bad that I would have to lie down. I also used the Sanative Wash and it has done me a great deal of good, and I am not troubled with a weakness any more."—Mrs. P. L. BRILL, 1299 Booth Street., Milwaukee, Wis.

VERDUN'S EPIC HAS SPENDID INCIDENTS

Stubborn and Reckless Daring of French Defenders Shown in British Narrative—Colonel Retired Last

H. Warner Allen, special correspondent of all the British newspapers with the French army, gives the following account of deeds of heroism at Verdun: "When one talks with the men who come down to Verdun straight from the firing line one realises how tremendous must have been the German losses. Never have French troops fought more magnificently than the men who retired so grimly from the Bois d'Haumont, the Bois des Caures, and the Herbebois, to the line of the Cote du Poivre and Douaumont. They fought to gain time, and gladly gave their lives for this object. Two divisions held up two German army corps for several hours. Every yard of ground yielded was paid for by the enemy a hundred times over.

Shot Sixty Boches

"There was a sergeant who, as his colonel certifies from his own certain knowledge, accounted for sixty Boches with rifle bullets. He was the crack shot of his battalion, and when the enemy were advancing he went up outside the trenches, and stood there fully exposed to the storm of shells and bullets, while his comrades handed up to him loaded rifle after loaded rifle from below the parapet. By a miracle he was not touched, and after he had accounted for his sixty Germans he fell back with his battalion to the second line. He was recommended for the Croix de Guerre, and few men have earned it better.

"The endurance of the French troops during this battle was beyond all praise. 'We are going to stay here,' said one of these poilus to a staff officer, 'until we are killed, and in that way we are sure the reserves will be able to come up in time.' I spoke to a wounded man just back from the firing trench. He had lost his right hand, and I condoled with him on his bad luck. 'That is nothing,' he replied cheerfully. 'I offered my life to France, and she has only taken my hand, so there I gain.'

Water For Guns, Not Men

"In the utter fatigue the men fought on doggedly without food or drink. An artillery captain told me the story of his battery. It was in the full height of the assault, and their guns had been firing round after round at the highest speed. After seven or eight rounds the 75's became so hot that it is impossible to fire any longer until the pieces have been cooled. Their guns had reached this stage of heat, and there was no water left except in the men's water-bottles. The men were almost dying of thirst, and yet of their own free will they refused to drink a single drop, reserving all the water in their flasks for the cooling of the pieces which were defending the infantry a mile or two away.

"In connection with the battle of Verdun the name of Colonel Driant, Deputy of Nancy and a patriotic writer, will always be remembered. With his two battalions of picked troops he recovered by a counter attack the original French positions in the Bois des Caures, but owing to the withdrawal of the French left the Germans began to surround him. He divided his men into five columns for the retreat that had become inevitable, and he himself marched in the rear of the last column. Almost all his troops had retired safely from the woods when the Germans closed round from the left and from the right nipping the last French column, as it were, with a pair of gigantic pincers. A hundred men or so were cut off, and with them Colonel Driant, who true to the ancient naval tradition that a captain should be the last man to leave his ship had chosen for himself the place of danger."

Tommy a Sportsman

A coresponden at British army headquarters in France writes: Just as a British sharpshooter was about to bring down a German who was crossing an open space between 900 and 1,000 yards away, the German stooped down and patted a dog. The sharpshooter did not fire. "I knew he was a good fellow," said the Englishman, who comes from an old county regiment.

AUSTRALIA'S PREMIER

Energetic and Witty Statesman Visits His Old School

A London, Eng., journalist writes: I am not quite sure whether it is the Australian Premier, the Hon. W. M. Hughes, who is responsible for this "bon mot." It sounds, however, like an example of his clever wit. A certain Colonial Minister who had been attending a meeting of the Cabinet at Downing Street was asked by a friend what he thought of the British Cabinet. "It is not for me to criticize my creator!" was the witty and noncommittal reply. Mr. Hughes told me that the greatest pleasure of his visit to London was his visit to his old school, the Burdett-Coutts Schools at Westminster. "I went to St. Stephen's in 1874," he said, "when I was ten years old. They were happy, romantic days. I wasn't what you'd call a 'good' boy in the accepted phrase. I was fonder of fun and sport—particularly cricket—than of swotting over my books."

In those days the site of the Australian headquarters was occupied by a Wesleyan school, with whom young Hughes and his school fellows had a feud, and the fights usually occurred round the Wesleyan school. The locality argues that even then Mr. Hughes believed in a spirited policy and a continuous offensive. When Mr. Hughes found himself within the precincts of his old school he was radiant with perhaps just a twinkle of tears in the gleam of his commanding eye, for if there ever was an occasion for emotion this was one. The great, little man spoke for nearly half an hour to the scholars. They hung on his words and cheered him again and again. His talk was simple and jolly and unburdened by the slightest approach to "preaching," which he told them he frankly abhorred.

"Two of us boys in this school," he told the boys and girls, "a lad named Payne and myself, fascinated by the wonder and glamor of the Thames, used to steal away into dockland to watch the great ships. One day we saw a big ship setting out for Australia. 'What a splendid adventure that would be!' we said. 'Let us go to Australia.' My playmate is there to this day, living close to the Houses of Parliament."

Tommy as Bulrush

The conditions in the trenches were dreary in the extreme after the drenching and long-continued rainfall, but the irrepressible spirits of the "Pals" were not yet entirely quenched, when the order came to leave the trenches. "Hurry up out of this, my gallant soldiers," was the cheery call of the sergeant to his waistdeep and rain-sodden men. "Soldiers!" came the derisive answer from one of them. "I'm not a soldier; I'm a blooming bulrush!"

GENERAL DAVID WATSON

of Quebec, who organized and became first commander of the Fourth Canadian Division, made up of the 10th, 11th and 12th Brigades.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A STORY OF HUNGARY

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

The map of Europe has been changing ever since there has been any historical record. There have been times when changes have been expected that have not occurred. One thing is noticeable—no nation in Europe has thrown off a foreign yoke.

Sixty years ago Hungary was in a position of antagonism to Austria. Louis Kossuth came to the United States, which was in those days the mecca of all peoples who desired to be made free, to raise funds to prosecute a revolution against the other wing of the dual empire. He was treated liberally by the freedom loving American people and returned to Hungary. What became of the money raised at that time I do not know. What everybody does know is that Hungary is still a part of the empire of Austria-Hungary.

I am of Hungarian parentage, but I was born in America. My father was in sympathy with the movement to achieve independence for his fatherland and was a member of a revolutionary society organized for that purpose. This story which I am about to relate he told me when I was a boy.

"The society to which I belonged," he said, "was organized for the purpose of bringing about a rising of the Hungarian people against the Austrian government. Of course we were a secret body. I determined to learn the plans of the government concerning Hungary, and to do this I offered my services to the prime minister as a spy on the revolutionists, revealing to him that I was a member of a circle whose object was to achieve the independence of Hungary, and I had joined the society with a view to obtaining their plans. I succeeded in winning the minister's confidence and anticipated getting much valuable information.

"The danger in all this was that unless I made known to the circle my intentions I was likely to be considered a traitor to them. If I told them what I was doing I was liable to run against some one among them who was endeavoring to accomplish for the government what I was desirous of doing for the circle. If so I would be immediately arrested and shot by the government.

"I concluded to place in the hands of one member of the circle—Shimsky was his name—evidence to prove that I was working in the interest of Hungary, but charged him not to produce it till I should call upon him to do so. Indeed, it consisted of papers in a sealed package the nature of which he did not know. He and I had long been friends, and I felt sure that he was true to Hungary.

"Through the prime minister I learned just what provision had been made by the government to suppress any rising on the part of Hungary and, more than this, what prominent Hungarians were playing false to the Hungarian cause. Then suddenly I met with a misfortune. Shimsky was arrested as a plotter against the Austrian government. And a second misfortune followed immediately. A few days after Shimsky's arrest our society held a meeting, and I was not only accused of being a traitor, but of having given the information that had caused his arrest.

"It happened that another member of the circle was playing the same game I was playing. One Raminye, while pretending to be working in the interest of the government, had learned that I was in the confidence of the prime minister. Raminye at once reported the matter to the society. They constituted themselves a court to examine into the charge.

"The evidence of my true position had been given only to Shimsky, and he had been arrested and his papers confiscated. If he had placed mine with the others I was surely lost. I could not convince the circle that I was true to them, and the government would have conclusive proof that I had been a spy on their movements. If I escaped the circle I would fall by the government.

"All I could say to the circle was that I had deposited proofs of my loyalty to Hungary with Shimsky. If the government was not in possession of them and they could be found, I was saved. If not, the government would put me out of the way.

"The circle at once considered what they had better do, but I was not permitted to hear their deliberations. They decided that there was a strong probability that the government had the papers I had deposited with Shimsky, that I would be arrested and my arrest would be very dangerous to the society. I was called into the room where the deliberations had taken place and handed a sum of money which I was told I was to use in immediate flight.

"I left the meeting within ten minutes of receiving this command and, in disguise, made my way into Italy. There I felt comparatively safe, but Austria then held northern Italy, and until I had left that country I was not sure of immunity from arrest. I was bound for America and learned when I reached this country that no one accused of a political offense could be extradited."

My father married an American and never returned to Hungary. I never heard him say whether the papers he had deposited with Shimsky fell into the hands of the government or not. Since he had fled the country the government was not likely to reveal what knowledge of this it possessed."

CANADA AND ENGLAND

How Canadian Expeditionary Forces Are Governed From Ottawa

The magnificent organization of the Canadian forces at the bases in England was long essentially in the hands of three Canadian officers. Gen. J. Charles McDougall commanded at Shorncliffe; Gen. David Watson appointed to the head of the Fourth Division, was in charge of the camp at Bramshott, and Gen. John Carson was in London as the personal representative of the Minister of Militia and the Militia Department. He became the official medium of communication between Ottawa and the forces in England. The official positions and duties attached to them, however, are distinct from each other. The relationship between headquarters at Ottawa and troops overseas may best be defined in this way. The details are worked out over there, but general principles and policies are determined in Ottawa and communicated to Great Britain or the front. Cables are exchanged hourly.

How Conan Doyle Helped

Sir A. Conan Doyle, whose story written before the war described Great Britain starved out by the submarines of a minor state, said: "I think the worst of the submarine peril is over. In my story I confess I overlooked the adaptability and resource of the British navy. We have kept a great danger within bounds. I may add that a certain scheme which I thought out of hunting the German submarines down was adopted by the British Admiralty, and, though no doubt improved upon by experts, it has, I have reason to know, met with a considerable measure of success."

UNLESS BRITAIN AND UNITED STATES UNITE

No Hope in the World Without Alliance Urges Famous Editor—His Praise For Canada

Walter Lippmann, of the New Republic, strongly urged a United States alliance with Great Britain as the best bulwark for the peace of the world in a speech in Philadelphia at a session of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. The break-up of British sea power, he said, would plunge the world into endless conflict. This power, he urged, was beneficiently wielded and it is to the interest of the United States to support it, neither taking up a policy of isolation nor trying to build a fleet equally formidable.

He said in part: "Though there will be competition between American and British merchants and capitalists, the imperial interests of Great Britain are not concerned with conquest in Latin America. The Empire is almost as much concerned as we are in the successful reform of Central and South America. On all vital issues there the United States and Great Britain are in a position to co-operate, a fact which ought to prejudice our policy in a decidedly pro-British way.

The German Choice

"We have reached a point where we are emerging from our isolation. Foreign trade is drawing us into the outer world; we are lending capital abroad, planning a merchant marine and naval program. Wherever we go, we cannot help meeting that organization of one-quarter of the human race which is known as the British Empire. We cannot ignore it—no world power can. And we have got to choose, and choose soon, between antagonism and friendship. Germany made the choice about twenty years ago. She chose to challenge the mistress of the seas and brought down upon the world an unthinkable calamity. We have to make the same choice. Surely if there is any wisdom and humanity in us we shall seek a self-respecting friendship with the British Commonwealth.

"I do not need to remind you of Canada, touching us at the noblest and longest frontier in the world, or of Australia and New Zealand, so like ourselves in democratic hope, subject to the same fears about the Orient. It seems to me that if two states so parallel in interest as America and England cannot find the way of co-operation then there is little hope in the world. I realize the prejudices which fight against it—prejudices fastened upon us in school where children are taught to regard Indians and Red Coats as their natural enemies; prejudices cultivated not a little by trade competition, and kept alive as a political issue by fanatical Irish and German politicians. But our future, and I think the future of the Empire, depends upon the conquest of that prejudice, and it is altogether intolerable that racial memories should be permitted to thwart and distort our efforts to come to an understanding with the British.

"Conspire Against Liberty"

"Are we to follow the advice of our militarists, and build a navy to compete with theirs? If we do, we are preparing a disaster and conspiring against liberty. A schism of the English-speaking world would leave all its parts exposed to attack. It would leave us in a state of armed and terrified isolation. It would drive the British either to misalliances with the conquering empires of the East, or lay them open to destruction. For if liberalism divides its forces in the next generation it will be cutting its own throat. England cannot alone continue to pay the financial and human cost of defending the Empire. We cannot pay the cost of isolation in a world where we have no ally. Whether we desire merely the safety of our own territory, or the safety of this hemisphere, there is, it seems to me, no choice but to come to a definite agreement with Great Britain."

WOMAN IN ZEPPELIN

What a French Officer Saw in Burning Wreckage

Among the interesting statements gathered at Revigny by the correspondent of the "Petit Parisien" regarding the end of the Zeppelin brought down in flames by the French is that of an inhabitant of the region whose evidence suggests that there was a woman on board the airship.

"I was scarcely more than twenty yards away among the people crowded round the burning mass of the monster sky-raider," he said, "when I saw a French officer, whom I knew, scrutinising through his field-glass a particular heap of burning wreckage, the flames of which lit up the night.

"He handed me the glasses, exclaiming, 'Look, there is no mistake about it, a woman was with them.' True enough, I could plainly see through the glasses two slender feet shod with high-topped, high-heeled fashionable boots. They were undoubtedly the feet of a woman."

Huns Treated Prisoners After Own Fashion Centuries Ago

The particulars of the brutality with which Germans treat prisoners of war may be compared with the following passage from Froissart (ed. Luce, Vol. v., p. 289): "For English and Gascons are of such condition that they put a knight or a squire courteously to ransom; but the custom of the Germans, and their courtesy is of no such sort hitherto. I know not how they will do henceforth—for hitherto they have had neither pity nor mercy on Christian gentlemen who fall into their hands as prisoners, but lay on them ransoms to the full of their estate and even beyond, and put them in chains, in irons, and in close prison like thieves and murderers; and all to extort the greater ransom."

Five centuries have made little change in the conduct of the English and French—or of the Germans—with regard to the treatment of prisoners of war.

Ans.: "Say—it's lunch time, don't keep me."

Ques.: "Wait a minute, this means hundreds of dollars to you. Answer me this one—where is the time recorded is your plant?"

Ans.: "At the factory door, of course."

Ques.: "Then they do take exercise at your expense? Your employees, I mean. They can take a quite a promenade couldn't they, from factory door to department door?"

Ans.: "Promenade, nothing. Why, what, what's the point?"

Ques.: "Why not put a Time Recorder at Each Department door? Then your employees can take all the time they need in the halls or the lavatories or cloak rooms. But they can't get into the bench until they are all ready for work and just then they "punch the clock." How about it?"

Ans.: "Sounds good. Put me next."

FIELD-MARSHAL COUNT VON HAESELER

eighty years old, who has served in this, his fourth great war, now adviser to the German Crown Prince.

BATTALION OF INDIANS

Ojibways and Iroquois Buried Hatchet in 114th Haldimands

Lieut. Cooke of the Indian Department, Ottawa, recruiting among the Indian Reserves, found that the old feud between the Ojibways and the Iroquois had gone. They are ready and willing to fight alongside one another in defence of Canada and the Empire. The hatchet has been buried deep. An effort was made to form a complete Indian battalion and this would have been successful but for the fact that recruiting officers have been busy amongst the tribes and have picked them up for several regiments. However, the most of the Indian volunteers gathered together at Cayuga, Ont., trained with the 114th Battalion. The movement to have an Indian battalion started with the Haldimand Rifles, an old and highly thought of Indian regiment. That battalion established a detail on Manitoulin Island where they recruited amongst the Ojibways of the island and along the north shore.

INVENTED LEE-ENFIELD

Canadian Made Greatest Discovery Which Germans Stole

It is not generally known that the Lee-Enfield rifle was invented by a Canadian, the late James P. Lee, of Galt. In an article in the Reporter of that city, the former editor, Mr. J. P. Jaffray, tells the story of Lee. As a boy he doted on firearms, and as a young man went over the border and started a gun factory in Milwaukee. During the Civil War he made the Lee carbine for the Northern cavalry, and after the war joined the staff of the Remingtons at Ilion, N.Y., where he designed a number of sporting rifles. He evolved the "magazine" system of loading and perfected it during a vacation in Galt and made other improvements still in use. He went over to London and had his weapon adopted by the War Office. Mr. Jaffray says: "In the Remington and Hartford shops, where Mr. Lee constructed his gun, there worked at the time one Mauser and one Krag. Both these men stole the Lee inventions, and other foreign Governments were quick to secure them. But the Lee-Enfield is still the best of the lot, according to all accounts. And it was an old Canadian boy—an old Galt boy—who placed it in the hands of the British soldier." The Lee-Enfield has been remodeled more than once since James P. Lee perfected it. The short rifle of to-day is probably a great deal lighter than the original design, but the working principles of it are substantially the same.

ZAM-BUK

Electric-Moto. for Dentists.

Recently, a miniature electric-motor has been devised for the dentist's use which is so small and weighs so little that it may be used as a hand-tool. A light electric-cord connects the motor with a lamp-socket. The motor is one of the smallest ever made for commercial use. Its weight is but 5¼ oz. and it is 1¾ in. long by 1¼ in. in diameter. It operates at a speed of 15,000 revolutions per minute. It can be used either on direct or on alternating current. A control-switch is mounted on the motor where it can be operated conveniently by the hand. The speed of the motor may be controlled by the foot.

Pocket Flash-Light.

For communicating after night, the signal corps of the British army is equipped with an electric flash-light apparatus which is easily portable and very efficient for medium ranges. In size, and to a somewhat less degree in appearance, it is similar to an ordinary camera. It is made substantially with the corners reinforced with metal pieces, and is fitted on the top with a telegraph key. A large lens is provided at the front of the box, inside of which the batteries are carried. The light is flashed by means of the telegraph key, enabling code messages to be transmitted rapidly in much the same manner as by wire.

There are many tempting ways of serving dates besides plain and as a sweet. Use them as a filling for sandwiches. Take two cups of dates, put them through a meat chopper, then add a cup of peanut butter and blend them together. Then spread the paste between slices of white bread.

Another woman also uses dates in baked custard, in tapioca and as filling for cookies, pies and cakes. Mixed with apples, celery and nuts they make a delicious salad. To use dates as a pudding cooked with rice, add to a quart of milk a cup of stoned dates and a quarter of a cup of rice. Sweeten and bake in a slow oven.

Cook keeps in her cold closet an assortment of pastes and butters that are used so much in preparing relishes for the tea, after dinner suppers and bridge-parties. She has them ready in small, labeled glass jars and tidbits and sauces can be made at a moment's notice. Here are a few of her best recipes:

Sardine Butter.—Rub skinned and boned sardines to a paste and then gradually blend. A little lemon juice may be added to butter to give it very desirable sandwich flavors. Orange butter for afternoon tea sandwiches can be mixed with chopped nuts and figs or any other sweet filling. Grated orange rind may flavor the butter.

Olives may be ground in a vegetable chopper, mashed to a paste and creamed into butter. Capers are chopped and creamed with butter, and either of these can be used on broiled chops or beefsteaks, as sandwich butters or as green peas or string beans to improve the flavor.

Make Your Own Fernery.

You can have success with grapefruit seeds by taking a few precautions. When planting these seeds do not keep any that have been cut. Then, before planting, the seeds should be soaked for one day or at least half a day. Fill the receptacle up to within three-quarters of an inch of the top with dirt mixed with a little sand, on which place the seeds so thickly that no soil can be seen. Then cover with dirt and keep in a warm, sunny place, wetting with warm water, but not too wet. The seeds sprout in about five weeks. They are both beautiful and hardy and need practically no attention.

Prune Gelatin.

One heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatin, two cupfuls of water, half a pound of good prunes, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and the strained juice of one orange are required for this dish. Take the stones out of the prunes after soaking them. Cut the prunes in halves, put them into a saucepan with the water and sugar and cook very slowly until soft; then add the gelatin, first dissolving it in hot water, and the orange juice. Pour into a wet ring mold. When set serve with whipped and sweetened cream in the center. Decorate with lady fingers

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

For the woman who is nurse, housekeeper, seamstress, cook and consoler, apron-ate, of course, indispensable. Years ago we did not put any style into such a garment, but we know now that one's appearance counts for weight in an apron as in a dress, so we make it as attractive as we can, consistently. We enjoy working so much better when we know that we are really presentable if unexpectedly caught.

The one piece apron in the illustration, No. 7,822, slips on over the head; it is well worth the trifle it will cost in time to make it now for wear during the real warm weather, when it may be worn without a dress.

Banding finishes the "V" neck and the short sleeves, also the pocket in either side of the front. An elastic at the waistline arranges the fulness.

Gingham, chambray, linen, galatea, percale and the like are suitable fabrics for developing.

The pattern of apron No. 7,822 is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches, bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material and 2¾ yards of braid to trim.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough. Price 10 cents, or 2 for 20 cents.

A PRACTICAL DUCHESS.

£35,000 Spent on the Soldiers in Hospital.

While the Duke of Westminster has been performing deeds of heroism at the front—it will be remembered that he saved the life of his friend, Captain Francis Grenfell, of the 9th Lancers, while time after time he has carried despatches under the heaviest fire—his wife, the Duchess of Westminster, has been working indefatigably since the beginning of the war at La Touquet, where she has established the most luxuriously-equipped private hospital for soldiers in France. And not only has her Grace devoted the whole of her time to this hospital, but she has herself spent some £35,000 upon it.

A daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Cornwallis-West, and younger sister of Princess Pless, the Duchess has long been one of the most popular women in society, noted for her beauty and accomplishments. At the same time, she was never in any sense a society butterfly, for she has always displayed a strong sense of duty and of her responsibilities. A widely-read woman, she is keen on politics, and has brought about many reforms on her husband's estates for the benefit of the poorer tenants.

The Duchess was married in 1901. She had known the Duke from his early boyhood, and they had always been devoted to one another. Indeed, as boy and girl they went through the graceful old-world ceremony of nursery betrothal. Essentially an outdoor woman, the Duchess prefers country to town life, and there is probably no more accomplished sportswoman in society today. Like her sister, Princess Pless, she has a splendid singing voice and a talent for amateur theatricals, which she has often displayed at performances organized for charitable purposes.

It might be mentioned that the Duke of Westminster is a soldier by profession. He was a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, and served as A.D.C. to Lord Roberts in South Africa. As a child he received the name of Bend Or, after the late Duke's celebrated horse that won the Derby; and to his friends he is still known by that name. The Duke was a great favorite with the late King Edward, for his Grace, with no father of his own, was the first, outside his own immediate family, in whom His Majesty took an interest that was truly paternal.

Few Diamond Finds.

Much prospecting work was carried out by the different diamond companies in South West Africa, prior to the outbreak of the war, but no important diamondiferous deposits were discovered. With regard to the main claim holdings, a recent report states that except in so far as the Pomona area is concerned the richest and most accessible areas of gravel have been worked out. The deposits at Pomona, while of phenomenal richness, are shallow and of limited extent, and they have already in great part been exhausted. Vast resources in the form of low-grade material still remain, and as improved methods for recovering the very small stones are introduced a considerable quantity of stones is expected from this field.

One Man's Adventures.

A remarkable story of how a gunner was first punished and then decorated was published recently in a London newspaper. The gunner was one of the naval reservists who were called up on the outbreak of the war, and one day while on duty he saw the periscope of a submarine appear. Without an instant's hesitation he turned to his gun and opened fire, and for this act of disobedience he was placed under arrest. Subsequently the real facts came to light, and he was awarded the D.S.M. Unfortunately he lost his life when the Alcantara went down after her fight with the Grief.

The White Tower.

The White Tower, or Keep, of the Tower of London, said to be the oldest, largest, and most interesting part of the whole fortress, will, shortly be opened to the public to its uttermost depths. It was during the reign of William the Conqueror that the White Tower was built, though legend hasterroneously connected its erection with Julius Caesar. Although it looks loftier, the tower is only about ninety feet high. It is very strongly built, its walls being from eleven feet to fifteen feet in thickness. It got its name through being so frequently whitewashed.

To Boycott German Goods.

A society was formed recently in various important towns in South Africa under the title of the British Patriotic Traders and Consumers' Alliance. The object of this alliance is to enlist members pledged not to buy German-made goods, to dissuade others from doing so, and to exert their influence to induce traders to support this movement, thereby encouraging trade within the Empire.

A Maori Kaiser.

Fifty armed police recently attacked the Maori Prophet Rua, who proclaimed himself to be a Kaiser, and his armed followers, in the bush. They succeeded in capturing the Prophet, and in the fight killed two Maoris, including Rua's son. Four policemen were wounded, two of them seriously. The trouble originated in the conviction of Rua for illicit sale of liquor.

Coal Owner Loses Two Sons.

Lord Joicey, who has lost a second son in the war, is probably the greatest coal-owner in the United Kingdom. His father worked in the pits, and that fact lends an added appropriateness to the family coat of arms, in which two miners' picks and two Shetland ponies stand out prominently.

Roumania's Strength.

The Roumanian army now numbers 600,000 men, while her navy is strong enough to give Austria some sleepless nights, that is if she took sides with her best friend—Russia.

"MR. WANTS-TO-KNOW."

Sir Arthur Markham's Questions Keep Government Jumping.

Sarcastic people will tell you that when a man becomes a member of Parliament it is synonymous with losing his independence and being gagged. Henceforth he is a party hireling and must only speak and act as he is told. The description may apply to some members of the Commons, but it certainly does not fit Sir Arthur Markham, known in the House as "Mr. Wants-to-Know," who must delight his constituents in the Mansfield Division of Nottinghamshire, whom he has represented since 1900, with his energy.

The only party Sir Arthur seems to belong to is the "party of awkward questioners"—of whom Sir Henry Dalziel is another member—the members of which refuse to be satisfied with the stereotyped departmental answers to questions which they consider of vital public importance.

It is since the war that Sir Arthur Markham's "want-to-know" bump has developed to such a remarkable extent. A keen debater and a man of rare business acumen, Sir Arthur was little known to the man in the street before the war. But recognising the need of bringing this war to an end as soon as possible, he devoted himself to seeking the weak spots in the various departments responsible for carrying on the war and criticising them, irrespective of the frowns of officials and party whips.

Sir Arthur has long been a prominent Liberal. He is a wealthy mine-owner, the Mansfield Division being a district full of coal-miners and colliers. And it says much for the way he gets on with his men that the colliers should choose a coal-owner to represent them in Parliament. Miners don't usually do so.

That Sir Arthur can take a humorous view of things now and then, though they go against himself, is evident from the manner in which he convulsed the House on evening, when the high price of coal was being debated. He said frankly that, whether the price was restricted at the pit head or afterwards, he had made his "share of the profit already and was not seriously alarmed." Needless to say, the House roared in appreciation of this. But the frankness was quite characteristic of the member who will always be known as the most outspoken man in the House of Commons.

The Richest African.

Sir Abe Bailey, who is bearing the bulk of the cost of raising a hundred picked sharpshooters in South Africa to deal with the German snipers in the western front, is not a stranger to such work, for during the South African War he not only served as intelligence officer, but helped to raise the South African Light Horse, and attained the rank of major in Gorringe's flying column.

Sir Abe is South Africa's wealthiest citizen, and also one of the most popular men in the country. A thorough sportsman, a keen politician, and a still keener soldier.

Sir Abe laid the foundations of his fortune when he became prominent as one of "Rhodes' young men," and later on succeeded to the Empire-builders' Committee in the Cape Legislative Assembly. He figured in the Jameson Raid, and when Lord Hawke and his English cricketing team arrived in the gold-reef city they found Sir Abe, who was to have been their host, in prison. Ultimately he was released on payment of a fine of £2,000.

His generosity is proverbial. He was the originator of the Imperial cricket test match scheme, while no man has done more for racing in South Africa, his success in England also being considerable. It is one of Sir Abe's jokes that he never misses a cricket match or a race meeting.

More Appropriate.

A great deal of interest has been aroused by the announcement that Sir Herbert Tree is shortly to publish another book. Rumor has it that it is to be about Shakespeare's plays—concerning which few living men are better authorities than the famous actor-manager.

Sir Herbert's wit is well known among his friends, and he can make a funny remark on almost anything. Some time ago he paid a visit with Lady Tree to the Tate picture gallery. While strolling through the rooms, which happened to be very empty, he suddenly noticed a young man snatching a kiss from a very pretty girl.

"Humph!" exclaimed Sir Herbert instantly, "they ought to call this place the tete-a-tete gallery!"

Richest in Europe.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is said to be the richest sovereign in Europe in her own right, her income being enormous from the crown lands and from her vast colonies.

Exit Red Tape.

By the substitution of white for red tape in London Government offices a saving of $7,000 a year has been secured.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause the greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

A FRUGAL SAILOR.

Great Japanese Admiral Lives a Simple Life.

The great naval hero of the Russo-Japanese War, Admiral Togo, lives at his home of thirty-six years in Kami Rokubancho, Tokio. He is 70 years old. Saito Man writes of him in The Tokio Advertiser: He is but five feet two inches in height, but muscular, weighing about 145 pounds. He lives a quiet life with the Countess. They have three maids and two boy servants.

His eldest son, 32 years of age, is just back from London; and the second son, 28, a graduate of the Naval Cadet School, is now studying in the Gunnery College. The latter comes home three or four times a year, and for the rest the distinguished couple lead a lonely sort of life. They do not seem to pay any attention to their personal comfort. Luxury is absolutely unknown in the Togo home. When the Admiral is at leisure, he amuses himself by a saunter in his garden, surrounded by its old style black wooden fence, or playing with his favorite dog.

Since his illness about three years ago he never drinks, except a little foreign wine before he goes to bed. In a small stable near the house are two chestnut colored steeds which were the coronation gift of the Emperor. In the shed adjoining the stable there is a carriage which is always in the neatest state imaginable. Simplicity and cleanliness of habit can be seen in the outside appearance of his home life, we hear from the tradespeople of the neighborhood nothing but most impressive stories of "insignificant bills," always the same fish order and a "very small" meat order.

The barber calls the hero's hair short twice a month, except that he has an extra cut when the Emperor calls for him. He pays 25 cents every time. "I never see him except in cotton clothes, and in the parlor there is nothing that can be called an article of luxury." The rice dealer and the draper tell similar tales. The green grocer was especially reverent. The bills for vegetables seldom go beyond 75 cents a month, but "it would be a great rudeness for a man like me to make any comment about a godlike man like Togo." When the Admiral entertains, however, the feast is served generously from a nearby restaurant.

The Heroical Vein.

"The heroical vein of mankind runs much in the soldiery, and courageous part of the world; and in that form we oftenest find men above men. History is full of the gallantry of that tribe; and when we read their notable acts, we easily find what a difference there is between a life in Plutarch and Laertius. Where true fortitude dwells, loyalty, bounty, friendship, and fidelity may be found. A man may confide in persons constituted for noble ends, who dare do and suffer, and who have a hand to burn for their country and their friend. Small and creeping things are the product of petty souls. He is like to be mistaken, who makes choice of a covetous man for a friend, or relieth upon the reed of narrow and poltron friendship. Pitiful things are only to be found in the cottages of such breasts; but bright thoughts, clear deeds, constancy, fidelity, bounty, and generous honesty, are the gems of noble minds; wherein, to derogate from none, the true heroic English gentleman hath no peer."—Sir Thomas Brown, "Christian Morals."

WHAT ABOUT THE UNSOLD OVERSTOCKS?

July and August are the best months to clear out overstocks.

Merchandise that is not likely to ever bring first prices, and which must be sold, sooner or later at Bargain Prices, can be made a magnet for bargain-loving customers.

A turn-over during July and August at a small profit is far better than a stagnant business.

Let stocks circulate and relieve the congestion.

TAKE EXTRA ADVERTISING SPACE

Keep up your turn-over, even at a smaller profit. Do extraordinary things. Every week's delay merely makes matters worse.

KEEP THE WHEELS OF BUSINESS SPINNING

But you say: "So many buyers have gone away,—are up the lakes, or away somewhere else on their vacations."

While it is true that many families go away for a portion or all of the summer, it is also true that visitors to the city usually keep up the local population to its ordinary level.

Eaton's or Simpson's in Toronto, keep up business all through the summer, by selling overstocks every single day. Toronto sends its train loads of families to Muskoka and elsewhere; yet these big stores keep the wheels of business spinning by planning ahead—and with the good help of plenty of advertising.

July and August need not be dull. Change the lean months for fat ones.

FRENCH SUCCESSES REPORTED EVERYWHERE

THE BRITISH DRIVE FOE FROM FOUREAUX WOODS

FRENCH THROW THE GERMANS BACK IN CONFUSION IN THE SOMME FIGHT

Our Allies Consolidate and Strengthen Positions Which They Won on a Ten Mile Front---General Haig Reports That the British Are Continuing Their Victorious Push Against Enemy---Germans Are Driven Out of Their Positions in the Foureaux Woods.

SPLENDID NEWS FROM WESTERN FRONT

PARIS, July 21.—(French Official)—Heavy German counter attacks on the positions which the French won yesterday in a renewal of the Somme assault were repulsed to-day. The victorious French troops threw the Teutons back in disorder inflictng heavy losses, and have consolidated and strengthened their positions materially.

The official statement to-day reported French successes everywhere along the line. It indicated the heaviest fighting in the sector where yesterday's offensive gained ground on a ten-mile front. The German attack came last night when the French were making themselves secure in their newly western gains. In the Chaulnes region a strong German patrol attempting to reach the French lines was surprised and routed at the bayonet point.

Between Soissons and Rheims French patrols which penetrated into German held territory were successful in grenade attacks on a German trench emptying it of the enemy.

Heavy artillery actions were reported in the Chattancourt and Fleury regions. In the Vosges the Germans are violently bombarding the French positions. North of Wissenbach the French lines vigorously repulsed a strong German attack.

British Continue Victorious Push

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 21.—General Haig's forces continued their victorious push against the German lines to-day, driving out of the Foureauv Wood, north of Basentin and Longueval, a German detachment which had gained an entry there after a counter attack.

The British Commander-in-Chief's report to-day indicated that after yesterday's advance by the British force, the Germans made their customary night counter attack. They gained a foothold on the northern part of the Foureaux Wood, but were repulsed in attempts similarly to gain some stretches in the southern portion of the forest.

Attacked by the British today the German defenders in the northern section were forced to abandon their positions.

The Foureaux Wood lies just south of the main highway between Albert and Bapaume, the latter town being the immediate objective of the British attacking forces. British forces are endeavouring to straighten out the crook in the battle line between Beaucourt and Longueval, including the towns of Ehiepval, Martinpuch and Pozieres. The British positions at Longueval were strengthened to-day and intense fighting is proceeding in the woods northeast of the town.

Russians' Big Gain in Caucasus Fighting

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 21.—(Bulletin)—It is officially announced the Russians have pressed twenty-five miles west of Baiburt and taken Gumus-Khane.

Three British Ships Are Sunk By Subs.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, July 21.—The British steamer Karma, 3,710 tons, was the victim of a submarine in the Mediterranean to-day. Almost at the same time the steamer Grandemor, 1,560 tons, was torpedoed and sunk by an undersea boat. The crews of both were rescued.

The British steamer Yzer has also been sunk.

Even Peterborough Horses Going Overseas To The French Army

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

The inspection of horses for the French Army was carried on in the Munro House yards to-day by Capt. Jean De Shevingney of the French Army, and Dr. Dillairs, also of France. They have been engaged at this work in both the United States and Canada, and thousands of horses have passed through their hands. The quality of the thirty-five or forty horses passed here to-day was exceptionally good, they stated, and Mr. Ahern of New York, representing the purchasing contractors, stated that this small number of rejects was almost a record. He was very pleased with the horses secured and expect larger numbers to be offered here in Peterborough on future Fridays. Mr. Green and Mr. Cruikshanks, the local buyers, have been very active in communicating with horse owners. From the results of the inspection it is evident that both these gentlemen have a discerning eye for good horseflesh.

There is something reminiscent in the enlisting of the war horses with the acceptance of recruits for the army. A physical examination followed by the branding of each horse first with "C. X." on the right hip the sign or brand of the particular contract under which these horses are bought, and then by the number of the horse in the contract, branded on fore right hoof. Thus the horse bears a complete record of his purchase and by a corresponding book record all the facts regarding each horse is readily procured. There did not appear to be a "Nova Scotian" anywhere in sight, not even the rejects.

FUSE CONTRACT FINDING IS BY NO MEANS CLEAR

Meredith-Duff Commission's Findings Contain No Summary of the Conclusion Reached---However, the Minister of Militia is Absolved By the Finding

REBUKE FOR ALLISON

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 21.—The report of Sir William Meredith and Justice Duff on fuse contracts was made public this morning by Sir Robert Borden. The report covers thirty printed pages and there is no summary of the conclusions at the end, and it is a very difficult matter to determine what the commissioners have really decided in the matter. The impression created by a hurried reading of the document is that the commissioners are but mildly critical on the actions of the Shell committee in letting contracts. There is no condemnation of the Minister of Militia, who is absolved from any intention to do wrong and the action of the Shell committee in letting contracts for time fuses is generally upheld.

The commissioners are more inclined to be critical when dealing with the graze fuses contract, and express the opinion that these could have been made in Canada. They are more inclined to place the blame on Col. Carnegie, however, than of the committee, which they say was bound to accept his advice. They excuse Col. Carnegie, however, on the score that he was a very busy man. Col. John Wesley Allison comes in for more criticism than any one else connected with the fuse contracts.

Commissioners find that while professing to act solely out of friendship for Hughes, Allison made contracts with Yeakum and others, which eventually brought him a big remuneration.

Lengthy List of Offences To-day

Variety Cases Heard by Police Magistrate Dumble This Morning

This morning's session was a lengthy one in Magistrate Dumble's Forum of Justice, and quite a variety of cases were on hand for judicial attention.

A lanky Ennismore youth who had wet his whistle with too much local "dew," pleaded guilty to being drunk and was fined two dollars. It was his debut in the local criminal dock.

A motorist appeared on a charge of not having the rear light of his car burning and pleaded not guilty to the charge. The summoned motorist was very confident that his light had been burning at the time when he was "spotted" by the local police. His Worship was very much more inclined to believe what was written in the officers' book than to accept what the motorist could remember of the affair. The case will come up again to-morrow.

"If I hit her, it was only accidental," was the lame plea put up by a local man when he pleaded not guilty to a charge of beating his wife. The testimony of the wife was too strong and clear, however, and seconded by License Inspector Stewart's knowledge of the prisoner, it had the effect of placing the accused on the blacklist, and incidentally drawing upon him a fine of ten dollars.

A blacklister of eight months' standing was charged with being drunk while still on the prohibited list. The evidence of the License Inspector and the proprietor of a local hotel went to show that he was drunk and disorderly on Wednesday last, but the accused was so confident of being sober on the day in question that the case was remanded for a few days.

She—"Do you really believe the pen is mightier than the sword?" He—"Well, you never saw anybody sign a cheque with a sword, did you?"

FIFTY SQUARE MILES TAKEN IN FORTNIGHT

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 20. — An official eye-witness report of the Somme battle received to-night from Paris states that the French troops within a fortnight have captured 50 square miles of German organizations, including fortified villages, quarries transformed into fortresses, and woods turned into redoubts. In addition, 85 guns, 100 machine guns, 26 trench mortars and great quantities of other material as yet uncounted have been taken. The prisoners number 235 officers and 12,000 men.

FORESTERS' ARTILLERY AND AMBULANCE CORPS SEEKING LOCAL MEN

Peterborough Young Men Are Given the Choice of Three Units Just Now While a Fourth in the Shape of a New Peterboro' Battalion May Enter Field Shortly---Foresters Reach Ottawa---To-day's Military News.

Peterborough men of military age and fitness have at the present time three opportunities of enlisting here, as recruiting is going on for the 74th Battery, Queen's Field Ambulance, and the 238th Forestry Battalion. The men who used to say when the 93rd were recruiting here, "Oh, I don't want to join the infantry," should be able to find a good chance in one of the three units who are at present seeking recruits. All three have representatives at the recruiting office, corner of George and Hunter streets. There is a prospect that a fourth unit will shortly enter the recruiting field, as word is expected at any time of the authorization of the new Peterborough battalion.

Sergeant Stanley has returned from Ottawa after seeing that the Peterboro recruits for the 238th Forestry Battalion, were comfortably settled. The squad arrived at Ottawa yesterday morning and were quickly fitted out with uniforms and assigned to a comfortable boarding house which was able to accommodate all the Peterboro contingent. The Foresters are to camp at Connaught Park, one of the finest locations in Canada for a camp. Sergeant Stanley says that the boys were pleased with their reception and with the prospects generally. They hope that a large number of other Peterboro men will join. the 238th so that there will be a big bunch of boys from Peterboro together. Sergeant Stanley will be at the recruiting office for the next few days ready to sign on men for the Foresters. As an indication of the kind of men that are needed the following establishment of a company in the Foresters Battalion is published: One blacksmith, twenty log makers, fifteen teamsters, thirty rollers and chainers, ten road cutters, two cross cut saw filers, twenty five millwrights, two sawers, two log-setters, two edgemen, two saw hammers, three engineers, one automobile driver and forty seven general hands.

The many friends of Dr. Garnet Greer, who left Peterboro with the first Canadian Contingent as medical officer of the 2nd Battalion, will be interested in knowing that his present address is: Captain G. C. Greer, M. O., 10th Battalion, 1st Canadian Division. B.E.F., France.

Mrs. L. Ratchford, whose son, Pte. Ratchford, of the Mounted Rifles, was killed several months ago, has received the following message of sympathy from Prime Minister Asquith:

"The King commands me to assure you of the true sympathy of His Majesty and the Queen in your sorrow."

Ottawa, July 20.—Ten thousand soldiers, principally from Camp Borden, are to proceed overseas soon, it was announced at the Militia Department this morning. The necessary arrangements have been completed to secure ships. The units going include seven battalions from Camp Borden and three from Niagara. No chaplains, junior majors, assistant adjutants or signalling officers will be included in the ten thousand to go overseas.

Parry Sound, July 20.—Capt. Butterworth, paymaster of the 162nd Battalion, C.E.F., of which Lieut.-Col. J. Arthurs is commanding officer, died suddenly to-day at Camp Edgar, Sundridge, his death being attributed to sunstroke. A son of Capt. Butterworth is a gunner in the 70th Battery in Toronto.

Battalion Disbanded.

Montreal, July 19.—The 206th battalion, French-Canadian, has been disbanded and the men who enrolled in it have been sent as drafts to other French-Canadian units raised in the 4th military district. The fact that of the several French-Canadian battalions that were authorized in this district not one (with the exception of the 22nd battalion) has been able to get up to strength and keep there, made the chances of the latest battalion continuing as a unit very slim.

Barriefield War Camp, July 20. — There has been no change in weather conditions, and the heat to-day is just as intense as it was yesterday. So far there have been no cases of heat prostration reported to the field hospital and the men are all able to do their duty. Sickness has almost entirely disappeared from the camp, and discipline was never better. The camp is an ideal one, and every man is doing his work willingly and smilingly.

Recruiting Returns.

The recruiting returns for the first two weeks in July show the following results for this district:

109th Battalion, total strength, 998; 154th Battalion, total strength, 1,084; 155th Battalion, total strength, 1,168; 156th Battalion, total strength, 1,025.

Total number of recruits for the two weeks for the District, 510. Total number of troops now in the District, 6,977.

to camp a scuffle ensued and Pte. Gilmour, 109th battalion, was taken from the Hotel Dieu where he has been confined for the last week with a broken arm, to Barriefield camp under escort. Some time ago he deserted and went to Lindsay and was found there by Pte. Clemett, orderly to Col. Fee, and when he refused to return to camp a scuffle ensuel and Pte. Gilmour's right arm was broken. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu where he has been kept under guard. He will be taken overseas and there punished.

LIEUT. HUYCKE BACK FROM FRONT

Wounded Peterborough Officer Reached Home Yesterday Afternoon

Lieut. F. Douglas Huycke, the second son of His Honour Judge Huycke, and the first member of the large Peterborough quota who left with the 33rd Battery, C. E. F., to come back from overseas, arrived home on the 3.43 train yesterday afternoon, having come sraight from Halifax. It will be remembered that Lieut. Huycke joined the battery here nearly a year ago, his brother, Lieut. Meredith Huycke, being in the same unit. The two brothers went overseas with the 33rd, and were quickly transferred into batteries at the front. Lieut. Douglas Huycke was severely wounded several months ago, and after undergoing treatment in London, has been sent home on furlough to recuperate. He is at his home, Engleburne Avenue, to-day, but, like a large number of the brave lads back from the front, is not anxious to talk for publication about his experiences in Europe.

Some people are too busy to attend to their own business.

Another Big Gap Is Cut in Enemy Line

General Foch's Corps Smash Through South of the Somme Reaching the River at One Point in Yesterday's Fighting.

BRITISH ALSO WIN

LONDON, July 20.—The French corps of General Foch to-day a gap in the German front south of the Somme on a front of seven miles. To night other lines have reached the river at one point, while in a late afternoon attack, delivered along a front of two and a half miles, from Estrees to Vemandovillers, the important height which takes the name of the latter place was carried, together with the German first-line trenches along the entire front of attack.

In a simultaneous attack north of the Somme the French pushed forward from their Herbecourt-Mamelon line to the very banks of the stream. Still further to the northward, on the front held by the British, Gen. Haig struck a sturdy blow north of the Bazentin-Longueval front, the English troops driving through the German lines for more than half a mile.

GAINS WERE SUBSTANTIAL.

The gains to-day are equalled only by those of the first days of the Picardy battle. The dash and elan of the French especially and the terrific power of the artillery is indicated by by the fact that in the course of only a few hours 2,900 Germans were taken prisoner. The losses inflicted, according to documents discovered by the advancing troops, must be tremendous. Several battalions have been practically wiped out, while for the 20 days of the offensive the German casualties in killed and wounded alone are estimated at more than 150,000 men. Of prisoners the French and British hold more than 30,000.

BRITISH ADVANCE STEADY.

On the British sectors especially violent fighting is being waged to-night in the blood-soaked Delville wood, and among the ruins of Longueval. The British are steadily regaining the ground lost at these points, General Haig wires, while the German War Office lends official confirmtion to his statements. The British War Office statement says:

"North of the Bazentin-Longueval line we advanced about 1,000 yards in the face of stubborn opposition. Heavy fighting still continues in the northern outskirts of Longueval village and in Delville wood."

REPORT HELD BACK.

The French this morning launched their first attacks simultaneously on both sides of the Somme. North of the river they drove forward on the Herbecourt - Mamelon front, while south of the stream they launched an extensive attack on a line stretching from Barleux to Soyecourt. The initial movements met with stern resistance by the Germans. So important did the German grand headquarters consider these operations that the official communication, usually issued early in the morning, was held up for hours, until word of the results of the attack could be obtained. The Germans at first succeeded in holding their own, their statement indicates, but later the tide turned to the French and they made decided gains. Then, late in the afternoon came the drive on a front from Estrees to Vermandovillers. Here the entire front system of defence was carried.

The French War Office statement chronicles the victory thusly:

"On both sides of the Somme our infantry this morning attacked German positions and gained notable advantages. To the north of the Somme we captured enemy trenches from Manelon-Hardecourt as far as the river, and carried our line clear to the east of Hardecourt along the railroad to the narrow road.

SMITH TOWNSHIP MAN WAS STRUCK BY A PULLEY

Harold White Sustained a Fractured Skull—Was Removed to the Hospital Where An Operation Will Be Performed

CHAIN BROKE

A serious accident took place this morning about ten o'clock on the farm of Mr. Herbert Scott, when Harold White, aged seventeen years, and son of Mr. W. H. White, also of Smith Township, was struck on the head by a pulley which broke away from a rafter. White was working for Herbert Scott in a barn north of Chittick's Cheese Factory when the accident happened. Dr. J. A. Morgan, of Peterborough, was hastily summoned, and after administering first aid, had the unfortunate man removed to Nicholls Hospital, where an operation will be performed this afternoon. He was in a semi-conscious condition, due to a fracture of the skull.

The accident was due to the breaking of a chain which fastened the pulley to a rafter.

Presentation To Mr. Samuel Perry

Employee of Robt Fair Co., Ltd., Was Remembered by Fellow-workers

Mr. Samuel Perry, who for a number of years has been a valued employee of the Robert Fair Co., Ltd., and who is severing his connection with the firm, was the recipient of a handsome leather-covered oak chair, accompanied by the following address:

"Dear Sir.—We, the staff of the Robert Fair Co., Ltd., desire to express our regrets at your having to sever your connection with this store, as we fell that not only is the firm losing a good employee, but we are losing a good friend. For many years this firm has retained the services of most of the staff and mostly all of us having worked side by side with you for a number of years, can speak with confidence of the many kindnesses you have been able to show us and of your unfailing courtesy at all times.

We are pleased you have been able to obtain a much better position and wish you every success in your new employment. We felt we would not like to let the occasion pass without showing our appreciation in some tangible form and therefore trust you will accept this small present as a token of our esteem and regard.

It is a pleasure for us to know that we shall not lose you from our community altogether as we understand you have secured a position in this city.

Again wishing you good health and every success, we remain,

Yours sincerely,

The Staff of the Robt. Fair Co., Ltd.

ABANDONING CAMP BORDEN.

When we advocated, a few days ago, that Camp Borden should be abandoned, in the interests of recruiting, some even of the papers whose correspondents had described the camp as another Sahara raised objections to that course. They said the conditions complained of "might" be temporary, and that it would be most unwise to abandon the camp "after all the money that has been spent on it." Meanwhile the camp is being abandoned by both the Government and the men. Yesterday, for instance, no fewer than ten units at Camp Borden received unexpected orders to move elsewhere for further training. This follows the announcement that over 1,000 are illegally absent from the camp. If the camp is suitable, how are these wholesale departures to be explained? If it is not suitable, why not abandon it, and do away with the biggest obstacle to recruiting that has yet appeared?—Montreal Herald.

OUR SOULS AND THE WAR.

An experience of recruiting officers in Ottawa, not common, but still considerably occurring, is to find a young man willing, even anxious, to volunteer for service for Canada and the Empire, but prevented from doing so by the opposition of his parents. It is a pity that this should be so. Life is a poor thing, unless it is elevated by ideals. How can a father, a mother, respect themselves if through selfishness—selfishness for themselves—they stand in the way of the readiness of a son, unless he be an only or a necessary one, to join the ranks of those who adventure themselves that the great and honorable things of life shall be maintained—freedom, justice, honor and right? This war is a war for these great causes. It is a war for humanity. It is a war for civilization. It is a war for Christianity—for the real meaning of Christianity, not for the blasphemous thing suggested by the German Emperor, as reported yesterday, when he talked of this war as winning the German nation back to 'looking up to God"—this war, begun by himself and his war lords in defiance of the spirit of Christ, and carried on with hideous violation of it. Every decency of existence, every principle of mercy and generosity, has been attacked and violated by those against whom so many of our Canadian boys have gone forth to fight. No better cause ever offered in the world for the manliness of our boys to champion. Serbia, Belgium, the Lusitania victims, the blood of the wretched Armenians, the cries of the babes of Poland, the pain of hundreds of thousands of orphans of France and Russia, and of our English speaking peoples, the destruction and unreplaceable historic shrines of art and intellect and religion, call for punishment of the crimes of the Huns, call loud to heaven for a prevention of their recurrence. The youth who can and would take his place among the world's manhood to do his bit in such a cause has an opportunity to do something which, if he be unnecessarily blocked from doing by selfishness of parents, he can not find compensation for in a lifetime of striving for sordid material things. Even should he go only to fall, still shall he come under the benison of Scripture, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith""—and what more can life give one to say? The parent who destroys the chance of a son to strike for the right injures both the boy's soul and his own, and "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world" if he lose his own soul, or fail to respect it?

If merely the most selfish aspect of the matter were looked at, the chance of death in the war for any soldier is a small one. Of the three hundred and fifty thousand Canadians who have volunteered so far, not ten thousand have answered the last roll call despite the desperate fighting our men have gone through. And Canada is providing generously for the disabled. Fathers and mothers, share the duty and the honor of our English-speaking breed who bravely gave their sons to the great cause, the Christian cause, for which Canada is in this war.—Ottawa Journal.

Not Pleased With McCurdy

Ottawa, July 21.—The Citizen says editorially:

"It cannot be said that the appointment of Mr. F. B. McCurdy, M.P., to the newly created office of Parliamentary Secretary of the Militia Department, adds to either the strength or prestige of the government. The administration was never in greater need of these qualities than at present when the peculiar shift in connection with the Ross rifle is occupying public attention. For months Sir Sam Hughes and his colleagues have been working to prevent the impression from getting abroad that the Department was connected through any of its officials with any of the various companies concerned in the manufacture of munitions or other orders. In this the Minister and his Colleagues have succeeded fairly well. No suspicion that the Minister himself had profited in any way by his connection with the granting of contracts has ever been entertained by the fair-minded people of the Dominion. The Minister has been guilty of poor judgment on numerous occasions, but any more serious charge than that could not have been brought against him with fairness.

NOT DENIED.

"But Mr. McCurdy has not denied that the published report of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, a report printed in numerous Canadian newspapers, including the government organ in Ottawa, which described him as 'a large stockholder' of the company was erroneous, and the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company has benefitted very largely by shell orders in this country. If it is true that Mr. McCurdy, said to be a large shareholder in the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, in his capacity of Parliamentary Secretary of the Militia Department, acts as administrator of the Department during the absence of the Minister, it brings the Department of Militia very closely to the munition contractors. The new official took occasion on the floor of the House of Commons last session to brand as deliberate falsehood a statement in the Citizen that he was a large shareholder in the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company. The Citizen at once confronted the member for Queens-Shelburne, with the paid and publish-announcement of the company which so described him, and asked him if he would repudiate this authority on the floor of the House, as he had contradicted the assertion in the Citizen a few days before. There was no response from Mr. McCurdy.

REFUGE IN SILENCE.

"Then the Citizen invited the honorable gentleman to deny the report of the company and promised to print his denial and accept it. The offer was repated several times. It was finally printed a few days before the session came to an end in order to give the member for Queens-Shelburne a last opportunity to explain an awkward position in which he found himself. Mr. McCurdy took refuge in silence; there was no response from the indignant representative who had accused this journal of deliberate falsehood under the protection of Parliament.

REPEATS OFFER.

"What has the member for Queens-Shelburne, Parliamentary Secretary of the Department of Militia of the Dominion of Canada to say to-day to the statement of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company that he was a large shareholder in that company? The Citizen, as before, is ready to accept and print Mr. McCurdy's denial and to accept it without asking or expecting an apology from that gentleman for his insults to this paper on the floor of the Commons last session."

Nurses Brave Amid Horrors Of Hospitals

Flower of British Womanhood Aids and Comforts War Victims

(By Philip Patchin)

LONDON, July 21.—War has its terrible mixture of honour and glory, the first for those who die and who are maimed, the second for those lucky enough to live. The horror transcends the glory. But the essence of the evil thing does not come out on the battlefields—there men die and are wounded in the heat of battle, are quickly removed by comrades hardened.

It is in the hospitals that the grim war parades in its most terrible form, and here it is, too, that some of the finest heroism of the war comes—from the women nurses whose courage and gallantry, in its own way, is more than equal to that of the men who, a few miles farther on, use powder, steel, and gas against the enemy.

HOLD WOUNDED IN BED.

The heroism comes out in the hospitals, too, in the delirium of wounded and fevered patients who fight their battles over again, with nurses holding them down to their beds, their subconscious selves devoted to one thing alone—defeating the enemy.

Not long after the war there began to appear on London streets women in uniforms of volunteer aid associations, some in blue, others in neat khaki with brass buttons, shoulder insignia, and felt hats turned up on one side. One was inclined to scoff at first, lookig upon this business as a bit of "swank." That is not right. Recently I have talked with a man who came down at the front with a fever and who for weeks lay in hospitals, on the other side of the channel and on this.

REVISES HIS OPINION.

He used to be a little intolerant of these volunteer nurses, but he never will be again, nor will I after what he told me of the things that happen in hospitals and how these nurses, with absolute self-sacrifice and marvelous courage do their work.

It isn't all simple nursing; some of them scrub floors, do scullery duty and what-not, nothing being too menial, nothing too hard. They slave to keep me alive, they gently make their death as easy as possible.

There was a lowly army tailor, merely an enlisted man with a romantic past, a fever victim, who came to a base hospital in France. He was dying. In his delirium he made clothes and stitched blankets, going endlessly through his daily routine.

LIVES SCENES IN DELIRIUM

He came to a bit of work which he had to finish, the making of a coat or something of the sort. Stitch by stitch his brain carired him through the operation and his voice uttered every thought. Presently he finished and with the last stitch he died, his nurse, by his side, comforting him as she could.

A gallant young officer, wounded beyond repair, came to a ward. He lingered and finally worked into a delirium terrible and holy. He went again to the trenches and then into a bayonet charge. His nurse was with him constantly, pressing him down as with his shouted orders and imprecations he rose in his bed, leading his men on. He knew, too, that the nurse was there, and as he gripped her hand he cried:

"Come on, nurse! We'll give them the bayonet now. Come on, nurse, over the parapet. Come on, nurse, we'll charge 'em!"

DIES CHARGING ENEMY.

And he took her through the charge where he was wounded to die, and at the end of the charge, in the hospital there, he did die, his nurse at his side.

The finest of England's young womanhood is engaged in this task of nursing. How these young girls who until twenty months ago had all their lives been carefully protected from even the mild horros of peace life can stand the strain is a question—the way they do it is a marvel.

They live in a world of death, blood, and pain, and with fortitude they do their duty well. The shrieks of the delirious sounding through the ward, the gasps of those who have been 'gassed,' the inanity of the shell shock patients whose minds are blank, the eyes that cannot see—a medley of suffering. In this the nurses live. In the story of the hospitals lies the truest story of the terribleness of war.

HOW AEROPLANES SIGNAL.

Soot Clouds and Mirror Flashes Brought Into Use.

To a commander the value of a military aeroplane is its power to locate hostile artillery and direct gunfire, rather than its bomb-dropping possibilities. Thus it is very necessary that a pilot several thousand feet in the air should be able to communicate with the headquarters staff on earth so that he may convey the necessary information for the guidance of gunners hurling shells at targets miles ahead which they cannot see. The French are using a very ingenious method of signalling from on aeroplane by means of soot clouds. An apparatus filled with lampblack rests near the hand of the aviator, and when he presses a lever some of this soot passes down a pipe and is discharged in a black cloud. The pipe is so delicately arranged that the clouds may be small or large. The operator can spell out the Morse telegraphic code in little clouds, and they can be read from earth when the aviator is four thousand feet high.

Another clever means of signalling from aircraft is that carried out by means of lamps and mirrors. A lamp which has a flash of 10,000 candle-power sends piercing rays of light through a tube fitted with powerful magnifying glasses. When a message is sent the operator directs his flasher in the required direction, presses a button, and a brilliant light flashes out, long or short, according to the pressure. The officers on earth receive the message and may send a reply in the same way, being provided with similar mirrors and lamps. The rays of light sent out are almost as bright as sunlight, so that they can be seen with the naked eye for a distance of four miles in the daytime and at night for a distance of eight miles.

When military aviators wish to drop a written communication to earth without descending they utilize an ingenious bomb. This contains the document, and the projectile is weighted so that it falls sharp-end first. As the end strikes the ground a trigger is released which sets fire to a torch on top and thus the location of the bomb is indicated day or night.

The stationary balloons which are being used in large numbers at the Front are in constant communication with earth though they float at a height of over a thousand feet. Telephone wires are attached to the guide rope which secures the aircraft to earth, and the observer aloft and the officers on earth exchange messages by telephone as simply as though they were carrying on a business conversation in the city.

Radium and Agriculture.

A series of remarkably interesting experiments have been recently carried out in the West of England by certain scientists to demonstrate the extraordinary effect on vegetable growth produced by the addition to the soil of radium-bearing and radio-active materials.

It appears that radishes and other root crops are obtained nearly five times as large as those grown in an untreated soil at the same time. If this process could be generally adopted by our agriculturists the increase in the prosperity of the nation would be very large.

The initial cost of such a system has hitherto stood in the way of its general adoption. But the recent discovery by MM. Detaille and Lafayaise, the two distinguished French chemists of Paris, and Professor Scammell, M.S.C.I., of Hadleigh, Essex, that coal contains radium, which, in the form of "lignaite," can be used for the radiumization of the soil, places the process within the reach of every agriculturist in the country. Fruits, flowers, and vegetables can be grown in a much shorter time, in much larger quantities, and of fine quality by the use of "lignaite," the cost of the treatment of an ordinary sized garden being very trifling.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

"Paul at Corinth."—Acts 18: 1-22. Golden text: "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace."—Acts 18: 9.

1. Verse 1—What remarkable event had immediately preceded Paul's start for Corinth?

2. There is no record of a vision or any special divine instruction for Paul going to Corinth: but is a good man as much guided by God when he is not conscious of it, as when he is, and why?

3. Verses 2, 3—What was the attraction between Aquila and Paul?

4. How do you account for it that there is an affinity between men of the same trade?

5. Verses 2, 3—Why have labour men a perfect right to band themselves together, for mutual protection, against the undue demands of capital?

6. Why has capital a moral right to protect itself against labour?

7. Why have business men a right to protect themselves against undue competition?

8. Paul worked at his trade as a tent maker for a living, is there any suggestion in this that modern preachers should do a similar thing? Why?

9. Verses 2, 3—A large portion of the membership of the present day Christian Church have the latent ability to preach; ought this ability to be developed, thus giving to every local church several preachers, and in this way the pastor of the church could spend a large part of his time in personal work? Why?

10. Verse 4—Why is it the duty and privilege of every adult Christian to be engaged at least every Sunday in some specific spiritual work?

11. Why did Paul, in the beginning, in Corinth, confine his work to the Sabbath day and to the Jews?

12. Verses 5, 6—What effect did the visit of Silas and Timothy have upon Paul?

13. Verses 5, 6—If a good man is ever so much in earnest, may the visit of another earnest man intensify his spirit? Why?

14. When a man does his very best in preaching, and fails to make converts, is he entitled to as much credit as if he had great success? Why?

15. Why did not Paul blame himself for his failure, and because the Jews resisted and blasphemed? and why ought a man of God always take a similar attitude in like circumstances?

16. Verse 7—Has it ever been in the past, and is it sometimes to-day, necessary for a good man to leave the church and start a meeting of his own? Why?

17. Verse 8—Is belief in Jesus an intellectual effort, or is it spiritual and supernatural? Why?

18. Verses 9-11—What method did God take in this instance to talk to Paul?

19. Why is it that so few Christians have any experience of any special message from God?

20. Verses 9-11—Do Chistians speak as much as they ought for Christ to day, and is there any fear of being hurt by speaking for Him?

21. Verses 12-17—Can any man expect, even in these days, to be unflinchingly faithful to God, and not make some people angry? Why?

22. How do you estimate the character of this man Gallio, and what is there in him worthy of imitation?

23. Verses 18-22—Sum up the results of Paul's efforts as revealed in this lesson. (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club).

WAR OFFICE TO DIRECT

Army Council Will Control Supplies for Forces In Mesopotamia.

LONDON, July 21.—David Lloyd George, Secretary for War, announced in the House of Commons that it had been decided that henceforth the commander-in-chief in India would be under direct control of the Army Council in London in respect of supplies for his forces. Representatives of the War Office, the Secretary said, would be sent out to assist in the supply arrangements, and in future requisitions from Mesopotamia for stores would be made to the War Office.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH ARE ONE IN CANADA

Official Eye-witness Hopeful Over Outcome of Present War in Cementing Union of Ancient Foes

Sir Max Aitkin, writing as official eye-witness with the Canadian Forces, argues from history that Britain and France, English and French Canada are forever united. He closes with eloquent reference to Crecy and Joan of Arc., Sir Max says, in part: Empire is not inconsistent with liberty; none the less the reconciliation of French Canada to the Empire was one of peculiar difficulty because of the secular antagonism between Great Britain and France. In Europe we have fought feudal France and monarchial France and the republican France and imperial France. Times out of number our ancestors, whose blood still flows red in our veins and whose thoughts dominate our thoughts struggled fiercely against each other at Crecy, Blenheim, Minden, Busaco and Waterloo; and, far beyond the European empires the conflict extended, from the plains of the Ganges to the mouth of the Mississippi.

But we always fought each other as plain men and brave men should. Even Napoleon, who is sometimes credited with the invention of many modern Prussian doctrines, was a strict observer of the rules of war. With the Anglo-French Alliance vanished the last great obstacle to a thorough union of the two races of the Dominion.

Ancient Wars Unite Us

We come back to the poet for the reason why the two great Western races of Europe are reconciled. Kipling seizes at once on the battles of long ago as the very reason for our mutual liking. "When did you refrain from us or we refrain from you? Ask the wave that has not watched war between us two. Others held us for a while, but with weaker charms, these we quitted at the call for each other's arms."

The very differences of the races both in the new world and the old afford ground for an eternal attraction, and it would be difficult to say whether the French admire more that which was done at Ypres by the Guards Brigade and again by the Canadians than the British Empire respects the heroic defence of Verdun. We have known each other's faults so long that we are ready to accept each other's virtues. The French mind is logical and passionate; the English restrains its natural ardor under a show of indeterminism. We have admired French literature as much as France has admired our political system.

On Historic Ground

"Eager towards the known delight equally we strove; each the other's mystery, terror, need and love," but the poet is not prepared to acquit the two nations of those crimes which they have shared together when we burned Joan of Arc. "Pardoning all necessity no pardoning will efface, that undying shame we shared in Rouen's market place." The links of history are, indeed, more intimate between the two races than between any other; but how many people realized it when the British army advanced, to overthrow the Germans on the Marne, from the wood with the significant name of Crecy, or when the recruit goes down from his base camp at Rouen and looks at the statue of Joan of Arc in the square.

This steel helmet, worn by German sharpshooters on sniping duty, is formed of metal bent so that it will deflect bullets. It is cut away on the right side to allow sighting the rifle.

BIG NAVY BILL OPPOSITION IN SENATE SLIGHT

Washington, July 21.—Debate in the Senate on the naval appropriations bill has begun. The measure provides for a $598,000,000 three-years' navy building programme. $315,000,000 is provided for 1917 work. The navy committee amendments were accepted including provision for an increased personnel, which would bring the number of enlisted men up to 74,000 with authority vested in the president in time of emergency, to increase the total up to 87,000.

The opposition to the bill was quite feeble. The vote in favor of the bill is expected to be so decisive the Senate conferees will not yield to the House if it insists upon the abandonment of the consolidation of the five-year programme into three years, and the elimination of the three capital ships added to this year's programme in the House bill.

The debate probably will continue a week or ten days and whatever opposition there may be will be centred upon the building feature.

Senator Swanson of Virginia, who is in charge of the bill, and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the Naval Affairs Committee opened the debate with strong speeches supporting the amended bill.

NAVY A NATION'S RELIANCE.

Senator Swanson declared:

The history of the world teaches one sure lesson—that naval supremacy ultimately means national preeminence and triumph. With a foreign commerce far exceeding that of any other nation, we above all other nations, need an adequate navy to give this proper protection.

He continued:

"The unjust restrictions that Great Britain has imposed upon our commerce during the progress of this war further emphasizes to us the necessity of having a navy large enough to demand and enforce our rights. The American people demand of us that we shall give them a navy sufficiently large that the vast products of their various industries and enterprises shall have access to the seas for sale in all markets of the world as a matter of right and not as a favor conceded by others."

MUST AVOID DESPOILMENT.

Mr. Swanson predicted that when the European war is over the United States "will be rich beyond the wildest dreams af avarice," and then continued:

"If we have naval and military strength we will be able to hold our wealth, power and prestige. If we are weak in this respect the day of our despoilment inevitably will come.

"Are we foolish enough to believe that this nation can be safe if we permit ourselves to become a fourth or fifth rate power? Are we simple-minded enough to risk our national safety to the chances of European mutual jealousies and enmities?

"Have we not an aggressive Eastern neighbor who looks with covetous eyes upon our Philippine possessions? Are we weak-minded enough to imagine that we can control the Panama Canal for our own profit and advantage unless we have a navy able to protect it?

SUPREME NATIONAL FOLLY.

"For this nation, rich in all material wealth and far richer in future possibilities, to risk all to the hazards of war, and to become the prey of weaker nations merely for the lack of a sufficient naval strength, is to my mind the supremacy of national folly."

Senator Lodge criticised the administration's diplomatic policy. He said:

"In this bill there are no party lines drawn. It is to my mind a bill of the greatest value and the greatest importance. It will be of more value to our peace than all the diplomatic notes that ever can be written. If there be nations that have hostile feelings towards us or sinister designs, they will take notice of the programme herein provided for."

Senator Lodge came out for a big fleet for the Pacific coast. He said:

"We cannot rely upon the canal to transfer vessels from one ocean to another. I do not mean by that that we are in danger of landslides. I mean that the canal in its very nature is vulnerable."

WHEN BELGUIM IS FREED

Commission To Prepare Measure To Follow Evacuation.

HAVRE, July 21.—In order to be prepared to meet the situation which would arise in the event of evacuation of Belgian territory occupied by the Germans and to reassemble the Belgian Parliament, a commission has been appointed under the presidency of H. Carton DeWiart, Belgian Minister of Justice, to "consider and prepare measures which may then be urgently required." The chiefs of the various departments are members of this commission. For the purpose of drawing up measures for civil and military reforms another commission has been appointed.

RAISING SHIPS OFF BOTTOM OF LAKES TO CARRY CARGOES

Idle Yards and Drydocks Now Becoming Hives of Industry.

SARNIA, July 21.—Never before in the history of the Great Lakes has there been such a demand for steamers and sailing boats as there has been this summer, owing to the prevailing high rates offered by shippers, and the fact that tonnage is very scarce because of the large number of Canadian and American steamers that have left the lake trade to go into coastwise trade of the States, and also to carry freight from the Atlantic seaboard ports to the ports of the allied countries.

General Resurrection.

Shipbuilding yards and drydocks that were standing idle a few months ago, are now a hive of industry, and old hulks that have rested on the bottom of the rivers and lakes are being raised and taken to these places so that they can be properly repaired and again rebuilt so that they will carry cargoes with a degree of safety.

When these boats were placed out of commission, all the way from five to twenty years ago, it was thought that they would never again carry lumber, grain, or other freight, but the demands of the war on the shipping facilities of the world have made it necessary to get anything that will float and carry weight.

The shipyards on the St. Clair River are all working now on rebuilding freighters and sailing boats, and they will be placed in commission as soon as possible.

The essence of humor is sensibility, warm, tender fellow-feeling with forms of existence.—Carlyle.

Along Come The Taxes Taking The Joy Out of Ratepayer's Life

The George Street Merchant and the Property Holder on Remote Street Each Claims He is Disproportionately Taxed

Hast heard the howl that echoes and re-echoes through the streets in which the new tax bills have been delivered? Everywhere you go citizens discuss their assesments and levies more intimately than ever, and it is safe to say every item that enters into the grand total is closely scrutinized almost with the hope that an exaggerating error is hidden somewhere in the column. The figures are inexorably correct and behind them is something of a reflection on the present system of civic government. When ratepayers are content with the maintenance of an ancient form of administration they haven't much cause to complain of the tribute their fetish demands. At the same time it is natural that they turn to consider the possible merits of a form of civic government approximating the efficiency and apparent inexpensiveness of the Utilities Commission.

It would be humorous but for the rather painful note in the complaint of citizens on the outskirts, who claim that the tax burden imposes on them, while business men insist that they are bearing more than their share. For example, a business man said yesterday that he was paying $10 garbage tax, and had most of his refuse carried away for $4, which he paid a carter. This refuse was mostly coal ashes. The garbage collectors, therefore, removed only a small quantity of packing material. Hence this man claimed that he was paying far in excess of his share for garbage collection. He felt he was bearing a disproportionate share of the cost of collection because residents on the outskirts were escaping with a merely nominal charge.

On the other hand a ratepayer living close to one of the city's boundaries, said he was taxed $65 on a house assessed at $2,100. "Sometimes I feel sure," he said, "that they are soaking the poor people and the high 'mucky-mucks' are getting off easy. That's what it looks like to me."

Then, coming back to the business man who asserts that he pays about 30 or 31 mills, which he estimates as follows:

General rate	26.3
Garbage Collection	.7
War tax	1.00
	28

Added to this is the rate for sewer, sidewalk and pavement, which, on George street, grows to a considerable amount. In fact he believed it represented 9 mills on his tax bill. Now, the resident of the remote streets likely pays sewer and sidewalk rates, but he has no pavement rate to meet. In fact these three rates vary according to particular streets.

If the man on outlying streets was aware of the tax levy on merchants, and also knew of the additional high rentals, any suspicion of discrimination would quickly change to a belief that it was in his favor rather than against him if there actually were any. And it is unnecessary to add that there is no discrimination as such.

However, the only satisfaction the ratepayers find in the inevitable taxes is a license to grouch, and it would form a grand chorus if they could be assembled in their present mood.

Another Big Gap Is Cut etc.

"South of the Somme we extended our front of attack in the course of the afternoon and captured the entire first German position from Estrees as far as the height of Vermandovillers.

"In the course of the fighting today we captured on the two sides of the river about 2,900 prisoners, of whom thirty were officers. Three cannon, about thirty machine guns, and important material likewise remained in our hands."

Yesterday, the British aeroplanes carried out both day and night successful bombarding operations. Many tons of explosives were dropped with marked success on railway centres, aerodromes and other important points. A hostile aeroplane was destroyed and several were forced to the ground in a damaged condition. Since Sunday four of the British machines have failed to return to the lines.

BAVARIANS CUT TO PIECES.

Sir Douglas Haig, in his official report, says:

"A captured diary belonging to a German commanding officer, shows that in the fighting from July 1 to July 6 a Bavarian reserve regiment, which was opposed to us at Montauban, suffered 3,000 casualties out of a total strength of 3,500 men.

"Another document shows that one battalion of the 190th Regiment lost 980 men out of 1,100, while the other two battalions of that regiment each lost more than half their effective strength."

Crops Have Been Hailed

According to a Letter Received Today From Mr. Albert Argent

In a letter received to-day from Mr. Albert Argent, Beatty, Sask., he states that the crops have been hailed and drowned out with rain in his district, and that quite a few buildings have been blown down by the late storms. He further states that hay is going to be hard to get where he is as the sloughs are overflowing. Possibly some of the surplus of the hay we have in this district will be needed after all in that particular district.

They were sitting side by side on the sofa when the young author said: "Yes, I have a new volume in the press." "How I envy that volume," said the roguish girl, blushing. When he saw the point they were both very happy.

HAIG'S ARMY EQUAL TO BEST, SAYS PARIS

PARIS, July 21.—The recent British successes arouse the greatest enthusiasm here; less for the intrinsic value of the ground gained than as indicating the satisfactory condition of the British army. A high military authority said:

"The progress of the British fully equals our most optimistic hopes. I needn't explain to Americans that the new British army has been an unknown factor hitherto. We realized the thoroughness of their training, the adequacy of their equipment and munitions, but it seemed difficult to believe that masses of civilians without a scrap of military training could in so short a time become able to meet the best Continental troops on equal terms. You Americans ought to be especially gratified by the result, which shows that an unmilitary nation can at the spur of necessity build an army as good as any. For the British have proved this to be the case.

"Without depreciating the task of the French, I say that the British had certainly the hardest share of the Somme offensive. What they have accomplished has astounded military experts. Above all, it has given the French enormous encouragement. Hitherto they knew the English had the quantity, now we are sure they have the quality as well, and our hope and confidence have become certainly greater. That is the lesson of the past week's fighting."

Conversation with members of the British forces sent from the Somme trenches to take part in the Fourteenth of July review, heightens the favourable impression, apart from the high morale the most notable feature is their universal trust and admiration for their own officers, of whom all speak in the warmest terms

One Sergeant, a veteran of the South African war, said:

"The secret of our success has been the way we have been led by our regimental officers, who are always ready to set an example themselves when we are in a tight place. There are no more reckless fighters. They learned the lesson that lives wasted are lives lost to England. In all my twenty-one years of army life I have never known troops whose officers are so popular or men so eager to obey."

One French expert emphasizes the value of the physical condition of the British troops.

"Modern earth fortification warfare," he says, "is the most tiring kind of fighting ever known. In the last instance the winner is he who can best support physical fatigue. Surely, the British have an immense advantage over their opponents, who are now compelled to utilize troops staled by months of holding trenches and often too old or too young to support the terrific strain of these battles."

PROSPECTUS OF BURNS, THE POET, BRINGS $1,375

London, July 20.—The only known copy of the prospectus issued by Robert Burns with a view to obtaining subscriptions for a proposed volume of poems—the now world-famous Kilmarnock edition, published in 1786—was sold at Sotheby's for 275 pounds ($1,375.)

Many autograph letters and other relics of the Scotch poet were disposed of. The trustees of the Burns cottage purchased for £98 ($490) an autograph letter to John McMurdoch Chamberlain to the Duke of Queensberry.

Among the other Burns relics were an autograph poem, "Sketch," for £98 ($490); an autograph letter to George S. Sutherland, playwright, for £200 ($1,000); the first draft of an "election ballad" for £220 ($1100), and an autograph letter to "Dr. Moore, London," introducing a Mr. Nelson, for £150 ($750.)

A first edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield," by Goldsmith, brought £80 ($400) at the sale. A first edition of "Waverley, or 'Tis Sixty Years Since," by Sir Walter Scott, in three volumes, sold for £130 ($750), and a collection of other first editions of his novels brought £120 ($600.)

MINE-LAYING SUB. CAUGHT

German Undersea Boat of U-35 Class Taken by British.

LONDON, July 21.—The first official announcement that Great Britain had captured a German mine-laying submarine of the U-35 class was made in the House of Commons by Thomas James MacNamara, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, who said that one of these vesse's would be brought to London to be viewed by the public.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE GEORGE CALDBECK

The funeral of the late George Caldbeck, formerly a member of the firm of S. T. McKinnon & Co., Toronto, who died suddenly at Preston, Ont., took place this afternoon from the residence of his nephew, Mr. James H Connal, 270 Brock Street, to the Little Lake Cemetery, and was largely attended. The pall-bearers were Messrs W. G. Ferguson, H. Rush, T. C. Elliot, Wm. Croft, T. W. Robinson and Mr. Reid of Toronto.

PRO-ALLY ROUMANIANS LOUDLY DEMAND WAR

"This morning there was a great public gathering under the auspices of Unionist Federation. Filipesco and Take Jonesco both spoke. The former declared the victory of the allies was sure and that Rumania would enter into the war. He went on to accuse Premier Bratiano of having faced both ways, and said he had deceived even Germany into believing that Rumania would march with the central powers. In the presence of him (Filipesco) and Jonesco, Bratiano had promised to enter the war with Italy. He had made the situation difficult even with the King by the promises he gave to the central powers.

"Jonesco declared every soldier given to the allies would be as a stone built up of a greater Rumania—the tree of the royal dynasty could not flourish in a little Rumania; it must strike its roots deep and wide if the future occupants of the throne were to be safeguarded. Let the King take the lead in a sacred national union and by his valor finally unite the throne and the country. In a little Rumania there was room neither for the King nor for the people.

The speeches were wildly applauded, and in the afternoon there was an enthusiastic demonstration in the streets, the people crying: 'We want war.' Several posters calling for mobilisation were fixed on the walls of the royal palce. The demonstration dispersed on the arrival of the police and military.

CARADOC YOUTH WHO RAN AMUCK BROUGHT INTO COUNTY JAIL

ATTEMPT IN ONE CASE FRUSTRATED, BUT SECOND VICTIM SERIOUSLY CUT.

LONDON, July 21.—Arthur Drover, the 18-year-old boy of Caradoc Township, who was arrested Tuesday at Melbourne, following an assault on Mrs. James Cushman, was brought to the county jail by Constable Fisher of Mount Brydges.

He appeared before Squire Chittick, and was remanded for one week on the charge "that he did with a weapon unlawfully assault and wound Mrs. James Cushman."

FEARS FATAL OUTCOME.

Dr. Dewar of Melbourne, who is attending Mrs. Cushman, fears that her injuries may yet prove fatal.

Constable Fisher had to resort to a subterfuge to induce Drover to come to London, as he had brought him in without a warrant, and had lead him to believe he was taking him to his brother's, where he had wished to go.

A year ago, it is claimed, Drover got in trouble with his employer, and has the reputation of possessing an uncontrollable temper, according to the county police, who claim that he is not mentally defective.

The assault with which he is charged was committed Tuesday afternoon, using an axe as the weapon with which he inflicted the wounds on Mrs. Cushman.

Drover is a boy about eighteen years of age, who came from an English institution and has been working for R. A. Williams, concession 1, Caradoc, for five years.

Tuesday morning without any provocation, his employer states, he seized an axe and attacked Mrs. Williams. She managed to ward off the blows, or dodge them, and Drover dropped his axe and fled towards Down Township, where his brother lives.

On his way the youth stopped at the home of an elderly lady named Mrs. Cushman, in Ekfrid, and asked for a glass of water. While this was being brought he spied another axe lying on a wood-pile and pounced upon it. With this he struck at Mrs. Cushman, gashing her head badly, and knocking her unconscious. Then he again fled.

On recovering consciousness Mrs. Cushman notified some railwaymen, who 'phoned for a doctor and for Constable Fisher of Mount Brydges. The latter telephoned Mr. Wellman in Melbourne to watch for Drover, and later had a message that he had been captured by Wellman.

COW CHARGES MOTOR CAR AND BREAKS HER NECK

CAR ALSO SUFFERS IN ENCOUNTER NEAR PORT ELGIN.

Port Elgin, July 21.—An exciting time was provided on Sunday when a cow running on the road charged an auto, killing herself and badly damaging the car. This happened to Captain Langford and party while journeying home from Owen Sound Sunday night. On descending the big hill near Elsinore and Slabtown it was noticed that a cow was tearing towards them, being chased by a dog. Both of the brakes were applied, and the car brought to a standstill, when the cow struck the car directly in the centre of the radiator. The impact threw her into the air and over on her back, breaking her neck and killing her almost instantly. Fortunately for the persons in the auto the car was a heavy one, weighing about 3,000 lbs.

The accident was just at the bottom of the hill, where the road was rather narrow, and it is supposed that the cow being chased by the dog, made for the car, believing that to get between two big lights would be safety.

The animal was a valuable one and belonged to Mr. Porter. The dog in the case was owned by Mr. Powell.

Cocaine Vendors In London Court

Prosecution Proceedings Are Taken For Selling to Soldiers

Legislation May Be Necessary to Prevent Spread of Drug Habit.

LONDON, July 21.—Arising from the prosecution in the London Police Court of a gang of cocaine vendors who have been supplying the drug to soldiers, a fresh demand has been made for immediate legislation to cope with this latest form of plague. Owing to the fact that the development of this vice has only lately come to the public notice in England there is no legislation directly bearing on the evil except a provision in the Defence of the Realsm Act, under which vendors of drugs to soldiers can be punished.

So unaccustomed are the Metropolitan police to dealing with these drug cases that they called on the Canadian military police to track down the offenders, and it was due to the efforts of Major Clifford, Regimental Sergt.-Major Dee and Sergt. Smith that the gang of vendors just prosecuted were entrapped. The London city police think that the prosecution will at least put a temporary check on the system of vending, which was spreading to large proportions. The selling has been chiefly by small foreign shopkeepers, who secured their supplies through one or two druggists, who have also been trapped.

The drug habit has been finding its victims among soldiers on leave after suffering from nerve strain at the front and soldier convalescents who are troubled from old wounds, and the police authorities are urging that immediate action should be taken to allow more severe penalties than three months' hard labour, such as given to the seven men who have just been prosecuted in the London Police Court.

Writing in the Daily Chronicle, Dr. C. W. Saleeby, the sociologist, advises that legislation be enacted against all wine lozenge sweets. He cites what North America has done to check the drug habit, and points out that even the Sultan of Turkey has banned cocaine.

CALF HAS TWO HEADS, THREE EYES

FREAK BORN ON FARM OF A. PHILIPS, WABASH.

WABASH, July 21.—A rather remarkable freak of nature was displayed in the birth of a calf on the farm of Councillor Archie Phillips of the Wabash road, with two heads, three eyes and three ears, all clearly defined.

Farmers and their horses are working with great discomfort these excessively hot days in the hay and wheat fields. The wheat is nearly all cut and stooked. The heads are found to be well filled, but the straw is quite badly rusted, owing to the long drought. Oats are all headed out, but require rain in order to be well filled. In fact, every growing thing is crying out for moisture. Raspberries are drying up on the bushes. Grapes will be abundant, as the vines are laden with fruit. Plums also promise to be plentiful.

SOCKS HELP TO WIN THE WAR

Mrs. Thomas Ritchie of Peterborough, Receives Valued Letter From Front

Mrs. Thomas Ritchie of Peterborough, while visiting in Toronto, knitted two pairs of sox which were sent to France with the consignment from The Toronto World. Mrs. Ritchie is 80 years of age, and she values very highly the following letter just received from the recipient of her gift:

Somewhere in France, May 29, '16.

Dear Mrs. Ritchie.

I wish to thank you for the sox so kindly knitted by you, and to assure you that they do indeed bring comfort to the soldier who was so lucky to receive them. Do you know I firmly believe that everyone at home who helps to furnish sox is helping to win this war as truly as the one who donates a half million dollars for munitions, for a soldier must have his feet in good shape, and good sox are absolutely essential to this.

The address given on the slip is a rather curious coincidence, for my wife lives in oTronto, while my parents and brother and sister live within some ten miles of Peterborough, in fact Peterborough is their post office.

Some day perhaps, I may have the pleasure of thanking you personally for the gift which I have received from you.

Yours sincerely,
Driver R. S. Gamey, No. 89693, 23rd Howitzer Battery, 5th Brigade, C.F.A.

MEETING OF THE LIBRARY INSTITUTE

Large Number of Delegates Will Be Present on Tuesday Next

The meeting of the Library Institute of the Lindsay District will be held in the Public Library on Tuesday, July 25th. There will be delegates from thirty or thirty-five libraries present, and addresses will be delivered by Mr. W. O. Caison, Inspector of Public Libraries, Dr. E. A. Hardy, secretary of the Ontario Library Association, and others.

The public are cordially invited to attend any or all of these meetings. A sketch of the programme will be given in Saturday's issue of this paper.

Sir Wm. MacKenzie Sees 300,000,000 Bushels of Wheat in the West

DULUTH, Minn., July 21.—Bumper crops for the Canadian Northwest were predicted by Sir William MacKenzie of Toronto, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, who was here to-day on his way to Chicago.

He said the wheat yield alone this year would be 300,000,000 bushels and he did not think the farmers would experience much difficulty in securing help to harvest the crops.

Lady MacKenzie and son, R. J. MacKenzie, and a number of officials of the Canadian Northern Railway are accompanying Sir William.

PRESIDENCY OF UNITED STATES IS WELL PAID

President Receives $8 An Hour, a Striking Contrast to Early Executives

After this quadrennial race for the presidency, how much will the victor profit by his laurels and what will they cost him? asks J. E. Watkins. The purse offered is $300,000 for the term. This means $75,000 for a year, $205.48 a day, $8.56 per walking or sleeping hour.

Such is the wage for the office which George Washington offered to fill without pay. When he, the country's father, and his successors, for a half century and more travelled about on public business they paid the tollkeeper, the innkeeper and the coach driver out of their official salary of $25,000 a year. Now the government allows a president for yearly travel money a sum equal to the total salary of all of our early presidents from Washington to Grant. In other words, the president elected this year will be able to draw from the treasury four times as much in salary and allowances as was given to Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, and chief magistrates of their time, twice as much as was given presidents from Hayes to McKinley.

The presidential salary has not kept pace with the growth of the responsibilities attached to the office.

Besides the purse of $300,000 and the right to spend during the term $160,000 more in travel money (without giving any account of its use), the winner of the present presidential race will be presented with a four year lease upon the most stately and most famous old colonial mansion upon our hemisphere, upon whose enlargement the government spent $540,000 fourteen years ago.

Another recent expansion made for the benefit of the executive office, has been in the salary of the private secretary to the president, now the most tried official upon the government's payroll. He draws the full pay of a United States senator, or $7,500 per year whereas all presidents until Buchanan had to pay their secretaries out of their own wage of $25,000. The first salary allowed a private secretary was only $2,500.

Trebled Since Lincoln's Time.

Thus the remunerations of both the chief executive and the head of his office force have been troubled since Lincoln and his faithful Nicolay occupied the White House offices. Indeed, four of the clerks and stenographers in the president's office receive as much salary as was allowed John Nicolay, while above them is an executive clerk receiving $5,000 and a chief clerk drawing $4,000 a year.

The pay roll of this force now amounts to a goodly fortune every year, and this does not include a contingent fund of $25,000 annually appropriated for the stationery, record books, telegraph and telephone service, furnishings and conveyances used by the executive office, besides such new books as are needed for the White House library and "miscellaneous items at the discretion of the president." In other words, a sum total of $50,000 is annually expended at the chief magistrate's discretion for travelling expenses and office maintenance.

His business correspondence goes through the mails free. He has to buy stamps only for private correspondence with his sisters, his cousins and his aunts, or near friends. When he gives a state function there is a messenger at hand to go about town, leaving invitations at the doors of invited guests.

3 Girls, Garbed In Grass, To Try Cave Man Jaunt

NEW YORK, July 21.—Thirty-seven thwarted Miss Fridays turned sadly away from the Hotel McAlpin. Robinson Crusoe, in the person of Joe Knowles, the back-to-nature philosopher, had rejected them as the cave women applicants who are to spend a month with him in the Adirondacks communing with the elements alone.

"Not every modern woman is capable of being an Eve," he said.

His contention was proved by the fact that out of forty who pleaded to go with him to the Essex County Eden only three triumphant women have been chosen to make the attempt at being primitive.

AFRAID OF RATTLESNAKES

"All the same, there isn't a reason why the modern girl shouldn't be a Miss Friday if she makes up her mind to it," said the youngest of the three, 17 year old Audreta Griswold.

"Women have it in them to be a lot more primitive than men. I haven't a fear in the world that I shall not be perfectly happy up there in the woods, with only the food and clothing that nature provides, and what I get hold of by my own efforts."

She had one fear, though, and she admitted it in the next breath. Being an Eve, she is just the least bit appalled at the thought of rattlesnakes But Joe Knowles told her that a rattle snake will not hurt any one who did not annoy it, and she will not annoy them.

GARB OF PLAITED GRASS

"My idea in making the back to nature test is to show that a woman is just as independent as a man," said little Miss Griswold, with a sudden spark in her brown eyes. "I am not a suffragist, but I do believe that we ought to be able to stand on our own two feet, and we shall never be able to do it as long as we stick to French heels alone.

"I am going to make me a costume of plaited grass, with moccasins of wood with grass straps, and be perfectly simple and happy, for once."

A modern Eden is not complete without a chaperon, and Miss Katherine Baker of Brooklyn is to have this role.

Mr. Knowles explained that the first three or four days of the month he would devote to teaching the women nature craft, how to build leantos, how to strike fire, how to find their food, and how to plait their garments.

MATHEWSON TO THE REDS

Will manage Cincinnati Team—Deal With Giants Completed.

CHICAGO, July 21. — Christy Mathewson, the Giants' star performer, and the "grand old man of baseball," is going to Cincinnati.

President Weeghman, of the Chicago Cubs, made this announcement in admitting he had failed to make a deal whereby Shortstop Herzog was to come to the Cubs.

Herzog and Killifer are going to the Giants in return for Mathewson, McKechnie, the star third baseman of the Federal League last year, and Rousch, the outfielder. No announcement was made as to any money payment, but President Weeghman said he had offered President Herrmann, of the Reds, $25,000, and offered to take over Herzog's contract for three years at $10,000 a year.

DEATH BLOW TO GERMAN COMMERCE

From the beginning of the war the greatest brain powers of the two great groups of belligerents have waged the greatest battle of sciences in the history of the world. Germany and her allies have used every known means of evading the British fleet to get supplies through to Germany and her allies. Great Britain and her allies have been equally diligent in finding ways to meet every move.

Finally Germany practically admitted her defeat and the impossibility of either overcoming or avoiding the British fleet. It was this state of affairs that gave Germany her pretext of a reason for resorting to her submarine piracy in retalliation for the blockade. But it did not take British brains long to invent ways and means to meet this illegal practice. She has simply slaughtered these pirating U-boats until Germany, herself, has been forced to give up the campaign.

Suddenly, after they have ceased to operate for several months there was rumour that a giant U-boat was on her way from Germany to the United States, as a peaceful merchantman. Sure enough, she turned up alright and discharged her cargo at Baltimore, and is preparing to take a cargo back. Six months ago this very move was predicted in these columns. It was then known that Germany was building several large U-boats as merchant vessels. Now, they state positively that they shall establish a regular service with the United States.

Now, again, it is "move" of the allies. Can they find some way to wreck this enterprise. We hope so.

ST. JAMES' METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL EXCURSION

Sports Which Were Varied Were Keenly Contested—List of Prize-winners.

Special Meeting This Evening

Will Investigate Delay in Opening the Trent Canal

His Worship Mayor Duffus has called a special meeting to be held this evening in the City Council Chamber for the purpose of considering what steps can be taken to expedite the completion of the Trent Canal.

It is understood that the Trent Canal is practically ready for opening to Trento, except for the Grand Trunk Railway bridge at Campbellford, and so far as can be learned no arrangement has been made for a swing or other passage of boats through the bridge

In view of the vital importance of the opening of the canal, not only to the manufacturing and business interests of Peterborough, but to every citizen, and seemingly unnecessary delay in the opening of the waterway, the Mayor has called a meeting this evening to consider what may be done to expedite the matter. The public is invited to be present.

GERMANY NOW WEAKER, SAYS A. J. HEMPHILL

NEW YORK, July 21.— "German bankers feel that after the war the country will have sufficient resources to rehabilitate their country's exchanges and thus place her in a position to resume commerce with the world."

Alexander J. Memphill, chairman of the Guaranty Trust Company and treasurer of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, made this statement upon his return from a six weeks' trip in England, Germany and Belgium.

"Germany is by no means beaten militarily, but she is economically. She does not realize this, but her economic position is being steadily weakened by the increased blockade by the allies, which is becoming irksome to the Germans.

While she is enormously short of meat and fats, she is looking forward to the harvests to pull her through her food difficulties. The harvest will begin to show results in August and September. About one-third of her cattle has already been used and in another year two-thirds will be consumed.

German bankers cannot be convinced that their country is getting economically in a dangerous position.

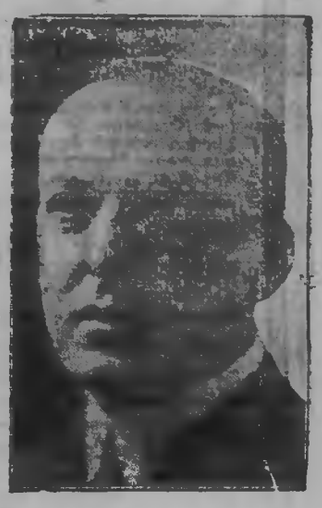
"In a military sense Germany is by no means exhausted and will have to be forced to go through a further prolonged wearing out process before it will be necessary for her to shorten her line. She can always fall back upon this expedient, and if compelled to do so can fall back to the line of the Meuse, which is almost impregnable."

Regarding Belgium, Mr. Hemphill said.

"The urgent need for continued relief is most apparent, and it is really heartrending to see the gratitude which the Belgian people exhibit to an American, Herbert Hoover, who is chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, is one figure which spells to the Belgium salvation from hunger."

Mr. Hemphill believes indications point to a continuance of the war for a considerable period.

Much happiness comes from making the ways of life smooth for other people.



HON. FLEMING B. McCURDY,
Who will be Parliamentary Under Secretary for the Department of Militia, and have charge of the administration of the Department during the coming absence of Sir Sam Hughes in England. Some say this means Mr. McCurdy will be the new Minister of Militia, as Sir Sam may take a high command in England or Flanders. Mr. McCurdy is M.P. for Queens Shelburne, Nova Scotia.

1916 FARM LABOURERS' EXCURSIONS VIA CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

According to present indications, the demand for farm labourers in the West this year will greatly exceed the supply. The Canadian Pacific are perfecting arrangements for these excursions, the first of which will be run early in August. Date will be announced later. BEWARE OF THE STREPTOCOCCI LURKING IN DUST

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 21.—Beware of the deadly streptococcus that is lurking just before your door. He is there with the staphylococcus and a few billion other enmies waiting to attack and kill you. The dust of the street is their home.

The streptococcus and the staphylococcus are germs that cause abscesses, boils and inflamations, and while they are bad enough they have some companions a great deal worse. The coli bacilli, for example, are among their allies and fellow denizens of the dust. This colon family, as bacteriologists call it, is responsible for typhoid, dysentery, intestinal disorders and many other troubles.

All these germs have been discovered in the dust gathered by a vacuum sweeper from the streets of St. Louis. City Bacteriologist Baldwin, who has examined samples submitted to him by Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert, reports that every cubic centimeter of this dust contains nearly 30,000,000 of these germs and other organisms inimical to health.

Large Variety of Germs.

A cubic centimeter is the equivalent of fifteen grains, or about an eighth of a teaspoonful. In this small compass millions of these germs have their lodgings apparently without congestion or discomfort. In a cubic centimeter of the gutter dust which was sent to Dr. Balwin for bacteriological examination, 270,000,00 germs were found, while in the same quantity of dust from the centre of the street there were 240,000,000.

Dr. Baldwin says that he has discovered several groups of pathogenic germs, including the streptococcus, the staphylococcus and the colon, but has not yet had time to separate them or determine their individual classes. Some harmless germs were taken in this bad company. It will require several weeks, Dr. Balwin says, to catalogue the varieties.

The belief that sunlight is sufficient to destroy germs is disproved by Dr. Baldwins examination. He says that sunlight is deadly in many varieties of organisms, but not if moisture and decaying vegetable or animal matter gives them lodgment. Dust in the streets near curbs and in sewer inlets affords an ideal habitat for deadly germs.

Studies Pavement Wear.

From the investigations he has begun Director Talbert hopes to learn not only the kind and number of germs that dwell in the streets, but also something of the relative wear of pavements under different traffic. Of the dust gathered from Locust street only 6 per cent. was "fine," or capable of being sifted through a 200-mesh sieve. Chestnut street dust was 31 per cent. "fine." In the section between Twelfth, Fourth, Market and Washington the dust was 11 per cent. fine.

From these variations in the fineness of the dust Director Talbert concludes that horse-drawn vehicles are more detrimental to paving than automobiles. He believes that the fine dust is largely the result of the detrition of the paving material under the constant pounding of horses' hoofs and the grinding of steel tires of wagons.

TRANSPORTS READY SOON

British Government Has Several Ships at Liberty To Carry Our Soldiers.

OTTAWA, July 21.—The Militia Department has been notified by the British authorities that a number of ships will shortly be available for the transportation of troops. This is the cause of the forthcoming big movement of troops from Western Ontario. These happen to be ready to proceed overseas.

Transportation has been one of the chief problems, and Canadian troops go forward regularly just as ships are available. Often only ten days notice is given. It is asserted in official circles here that Gen. Hughes anticipated that there would be a big call for Canadian troops immediately, hence the reason battalions were rushed to Camp Borden to get the finishing touches to their training before going overseas.

RESULTS OF THE LAWN BOWLING

The Tournament of Singles is Nearing an End—The Scores

The tournament of singles is nearing an end. There is just one more game to play in this series. Pratt and Taylor meet each other to-night in the final game.

Last night the contest was between Fitzgerald and Pratt. Pratt won out by three points. Fitzgerald had a nice lead up to the tenth end, after which Pratt drew ahead. The score was as follows:

First round to play on Tuesday:
Moore vs. Skinner.
Cairns vs. Mayneord.
Pratt vs. Elliott.

Should any of the Skips not be able to be present, it will be necessary for them to arrange with their vices to carry on the game, failing to do so their rink will be marked as defaulted.

Famous McGill Team in Khaki

MONTREAL, July 21.—"Chuch" Waterous, the one-time famous line plunger of the champion McGill rugby team, is one of the draft of artillery officers chosen for overseas. "Chuck' Waterous spent the week-end in Montreal with some of his former club mates and was given a royal reception. Lieut. Waterous was a student at McGill and gave up his studies to take a position with his father's company at his home in Brantford. "Chuck" graduated from St. Andrew's College at Toronto, where he first learned to play rugby and, after leaving there, came to McGill to take a course in science. He played with McGill during the season of 1910-1911-1912, and 1913. During the season of 1913 he played middle wing and was used almost altogether to do the line plunging. He completes the list of members of the famous team to don a King's uniform.

Three Hotels Are Involved

Commissioners, Despite Warm Weather, Show Aggressiveness, But Cannot Scare One Hotelman.

The Ontario License Board had a busy time yesterday. Four cases occupied the attention of the Commission, but only one hotelman was severely punished, the others escaping with warnings.

Robert Wood, West Hill Hotel, in East York, sold a bottle of liquor supposedly for medical purposes and was prosecuted in court and fined $40. Mr. Wood subsequently was quoted as saying he would do the same thing under similar circumstances. The board sent for Mr. Wood, and he appeared, accompanied by James P. Haverston, K.C., who argued that "for every idle word men speak they shall give an accounting on the day of judgment," etc., and he couldn't see why the board should interfere.

But the Board went after Mr. Wood in great fashion, and he left the room with the impression clear in his mind that no matter who was dying, no liquor should be supplied without a proper prescription of order. Mr. Haverson smiled on hearing this.

Took It Calmly.

J. G. Ashmore, King Edward Hotel, Lindsay, wasn't the least bit afraid of the five commissioners and sat readin ga newspaper while evidence was given as to a fight and carousal which was said to have occurred in his stable and yard on a Sunday not long ago. The Board seemed to be worrying more than Mr. Ashmore, so Chairman Flavelle lit into him. Mr. Ashmore continued to chew gum as the chairman informed him that he was responsible for his hotel premises, and if any more complaints came to the board he would be cut off.

They Had Influence.

E. Uptherove, Mount Forest Hotel, at Coyne, appeared on a charge of selling liquor on Sunday. He admitted selling bottles of beer to certain influential people in the town, and claimed he could hardly resist them. The board gave him a week's suspension, starting Saturday night, so that he may learn the law of resistance.

Allies Parade Through Paris

Although enthusiastic and often wildly so, not once to-day was Paris gay. There was a war parade, not a peace one. The weather was gray, the multitude, three-fourths of it in mourning, was black. The marchers wore the garb of the trenches, not of dress parade. The drab and khaki of the allies, with the more dominant horizon blue of the poilus, harmonized perfectly into the general ensemble and made a lot of grimness dominate the parade. Gladness and gaiety still wait for the exit of the Germans from French soil.

Leading the procession was a detachment of cuirassiers of the guard, their polished helments not responding to the light that was furnished by the weather. Following, but really leading the procession, as the first allied detachments, were the Belgians looking extremely fit and neat in their new khaki uniforms with helmets of the same color. Next came the British troops—the first parade appearance in Paris since Waterloo. They were led by Scot pipers, whose kilts were the only spots of bright color in the procession.

GREAT INTEREST IN RUSSIANS

Next in the line were the Russians, who aroused the greatest enthusiasm accorded to any detachment except the French. They were magnificent—all picked soldiers over six feet tall. Carrying long French bayonets on their rifles they loomed gigantically far along the line of march, typifying in every way the bigness of their empire. Although walking at exactly the same speed as the other troops they seemed to be moving very slowly, taking enormous strides and bringing their feet down heavily. The lines of their company formation stretched straight across the width of the boulevard the entire route. They sang a slow, wild war chant, and one thought of many things, including bears and steam rollers, as they swayed ponderously along.

THEN CAME THE FRENCH.

Last of all came the Frenchmen. They also typified in many ways the characteristics of their race. With quick, short steps and alert, vigorous gestures they kept time perfectly to the sharp clear calls of their bugles. The crowd was generously enthusiastic for the allies, but for their own, their very own, they emitted one sustained gallant roar of welcome during the 40 minutes that it took the regiments to pass.

But beyond and above the cheers one noted the seriousness of faces, one saw many eyes filled with tears. For scarcely a person there but has some one belonging to them who wears a similar uniform—or had worn one.

So when the last line of bayonets had disappeared and the last band had passed along triumphantly beating out the "Marseillaise," and the "Sambre et Meuse," songs that are indeed battle cries of triumph such as no other nation has, the crowd quietly melted away. In a quarter of an hour the boulevards were almost deserted.

"ROLLING STONE" NOW IS DOCTOR OF "GLASS ARMS"

New York, July 21.—Jack of all trades has settled down. And he has settled down to the proposition that confronts every player of the great American game of baseball—the "glass arm."

Jack of all trades—that is to say, Walter Parker, shrewdly guessing that nothing in the world would please a ball player more than to keep right on playing ball, has made himself a reviver of strained and worn out tendons. And thereby hangs the reason for mixing in all the trades.

Parker is a Chicagoan who has tried 'em all. Ten years ago he was reckoned as one of the best lightweight fighters in the ring. He grew weary of the grind of training and entered baseball. He became a big league pitcher of consequence and later went in to the American Association, where he made good for several seasons. Then he went into theatricals.

HE'S A POET, TOO.

It was in connection with this change that he turned a hand to poetry. Here is a clip from one of his pen thrusts:

The Lord must care for these west side punks,
Though there's little I find to love 'em;
But He must soften their weary bunks,
'Cause He made so many of 'em.

That became a part of a recitation used in a vaudeville sketch that Parker wrote and staged. It saw a fine run in the vaudeville and burlesque houses on the west side.

"I thought I'd be a sculptor," Parker said, as he sat in his "hospital for ball players" at Fortieth avenue and Twelfth street, "but it didn't work out. That is, I found that a fellow has to do a lot of work, and I didn't have time. I made that"— and he pointed to a bronze of a boxer that looked like art on first inspection.

TURNS TO BALL PLAYERS

But it was baseball and sculpture that caused him to turn to the anatomy of the ball players.

"I decided that the average ball player will do almost anything to extend his career a while," the jack of all trades continues, "so I went into a combination of common sense and osteopothy.

"I took Ed. Walsh and brought his old whip back into shape. It is up to Ed. to keep it there. I'm through with the prize ring and the stage and poetry and sculpture. Hereafter I am going to stick to the ball players.

"I like to take a famous old baseball arm and make it over. It is a fine science, and I not only keep in touch with the fellows that I have played with in the minor leagues, but I'm through skipping around from one job to another."

DIVORCEE TOILS AS 'PHONE GIRL TO RETURN HOME

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 21.—The indomitable will of Mrs. Christine Buist Pierce, who recently obtained an absolute decree of divorce from her husband, Dr. Horace Pierce of Santa Barbara, on a charge of desertion, is about to realize the victory for which she has striven ever since her youthful physician husband decided to live with his parents instead of with her.

For Mrs. Pierce is now earning money to pay her travelling expenses to her home in Moorestown, N.J., by acting as a switchboard operator at the Baltimore hotel. She will get there, she says, without being compelled to ask for any more assistance from her father, Jacob Buist, wealthy retired rubber manufacturer of the east.

Married Doctor in 1914.

Dr. and Mrs. Pierce were married during the fall of 1914, at the home of the bride's parents in Moorestown. A month later they came to Los Angeles, and the young physician tried to start a practice. But he fell ill and he was compelled to go to Santa Barbara to his parents' home to recuperate.

During his convalescence rivalry apparently sprang up between the mother and the bride, for young Mrs. Pierce appeared in Los Angeles, telling a remarkable story of how she had been practically ordered out of the Pierce mansion.

Given Absolute Divorce.

Through Attorney Lee Riddle she filed an alienation suit, asking $100,000 against her mother-in-law and sister-in-law. Later this was changed to a suit for absolute divorce, without alimony.

The divorce was granted. Young Mrs. Pierce asserted she did not want alimony, only to be free again.

During all this family difficulty the young bride was stranded 3,000 miles away from home, without means of support. Dr. Pierce finally sided with his mother and refused to see his bride, she says. The young woman soon exhausted her means of support and was forced to call upon her family for aid.

This extremity hurt her pride, and resulted in a determination to fight out her own battle without further depending upon her father, although the latter was more than willing to aid.

Too Proud to Ask Aid.

"I have always been working at the only thing I could do," she said, as she connected an irate party with central, inserting a conciliatory word between plugs. "It has been hard, but not as hard as requiring help from home.

"No, I have not seen Dr. Pierce since I left Santa Barbara. I have my absolute decree, without alimony, and I am perfectly satisfied."

And the young woman, whose wedding two years ago was regarded as the greatest social event of the season, continued her attention to the hotel switchboard, rebuilding her shattered life, 3,000 miles from home, with the same determination that her father must have exhibited in developing the great concern in the east that bears his name.

TO VISIT COLONIAL TROOPS

Parliamentarians from Overseas Will Observe Fighting Conditions.

PARIS, July 21. — Thirty-three members of British Colonial Parliaments, from Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, arrived in Paris, and will visit the British and French fronts. Each delegation will go to the sector of the front held by troops from his own colony.

Canada's delegation consists of Senators Landry, Belcourt, Dennis, and Ross, and Commoners Foster, Rhodes, Shepherd, Nickle, and Knowles.

The French Government has arranged an elaborate reception for the visitors. Premier Briand will give a luncheon for them.

OBITUARY

MRS. MELISSA COOK.

The death occurred Wednesday night at Nicholls Hospital of Mrs. Melissa Cook at the age of 81 years. The deceased lady was born in Cornwall, Ont., but had lived in this city practically all her life. She had been ailing for some time, and the end was not unexpected. Her husband predeceased her 31 years ago. She leaves behind to mourn her loss one son, Mr. R. J. Cook, Bethune street, and three daughters, Mrs. D. W. Brown of Calgary, and Misses Cassie and Jennie at home.

The funeral will take place Saturday at 2.30 from her late residence, corner King and Park streets. Interment will take place at Little Lake cemetery.

WM. T. BLANCO.

An old and highly esteemed resident of Sanford, Man., passed away on July 5, in the person of Mr. Wm. T. Blanco, at the advanced age of 94 years. Mr. Blanco was born in Ennismore, Peterborough county, and lived there until about 32 years ago, when he moved, with his family, to Nebraska, U.S.A. He lived there about 14 years, when he moved to Sanford, Man., and resided there until his death. He was one of the most successful farmers in that district and was loved and respected by all. His wife predeceased him about nine years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss, three daughters and five sons: Mrs. F. Pearson, Sr., Smith; Mr. Richard Graham, Sanford, Man.; Mrs. Richardson, Toronto; John and William of Sanford; George of Nebraska, and Alfred and Pte. James Blanco of Winnipeg, Man.

WARNS OF ANOTHER WAR.

Britain Must Prepare by Keeping People Within the Empire.

OTTAWA, July 21. — Sir Rider Haggard, addressing the Canadian Club here, reaffirmed that this war may not be the last one, that Germany will not be obliterated, but will desire to come back, and urged preparedness by a policy of keeping all British people in the British Empire.

He read a letter from Sir Robert Borden stating that the Government shared the views of the Royal Colonial Institute on the question of land settlement. Its policy, to be declared in due course in connection with such legislation as would be necessary, would, Sir Robert felt, be wholly satisfactory to Sir Rider and those he represents.

British Troops Attack The German Third Line of Defence

Five Enemy Air Machines Destroyed By British Aviators

Enemy Attacks Were Repulsed By The British Third Line Attacked

Germans Succeeded in Gaining a Brief Foothold in the British Front Trenches But Were Speedily Driven Out---British Forces Attack the German Third Line Defences---British Aviators Successful in Terrible Air Battle.

COMPARATIVE CALM PREVAILS

LONDON, July 22.—The Germans in a bombing attack gained a brief foothold in the British front trenches at Leipsic, but were speedily driven out. Elsewhere along the British front comparative calm prevailed.

THIRD LINE ATTACKED.

LONDON, July 22.—British forces again attack the German third line defences.

BRITISH AVIATORS SUCCESSFUL.

LONDON, July 22.—British aviators in a terrible air battle behind the German lines Thursday brought down five enemy air machines.

MAY RESIGN HIS RANK.

OTTAWA, July 22.—It is said that the Militia Department will permit Hon. Col. J. W. Allison to resign his rank

WANT TOTAL PROHIBITION

LONDON, July 22.—The demand for total prohibition in England is growing fast.

GREAT POTATO SHORTAGE.

Austrian Troops Compelled To Retire To New Positions

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

VIENNA, July 22.—Before the pressure of the Russian attacks, Austrian troops in the Styr and Lipa river districts, were forced to withdraw to new positions, says the War Office.

LOSSES ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

PETROGRAD, July 22.—Prisoners state that the German losses on the eastern front during the last ten days were nearly one hundred thousand.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE A TOWN.

PETROGRAD, July 22.—Grand Duke Nicholas' troops capture Gamushkane, which is fifty miles directly north of Erzignan.

ARTILLERY IS ACTIVE.

ROME, July 22.—General Kuropatkin's Russian artillery has steadily smashed Von Hindenburg's lines in Northern Russia for three days, and the German losses are colossal.

TOWNS ARE SET ABLAZE.

ROME, July 22.—The War Office made public the following announcement:

"In view of the persistent shelling of Ala and other places in the Adige Valley by the heavy artillery of the enemy, our artillery Thursday bombarded Riva, Arco and Rovereto. We caused fires and by our curtain of fire prevented their extinction.

SENT STARVING OUT OF LILLE

Germans Refuse to Relieve Shortage of Food in Belgium—Those Who Riot Are Scattered Homeless Throughout the Country

Rotterdam, July 22.—The shortage of food, which has resulted in serious riots in Belgium, according to the relief agencies, was due to the shortage of tonnage which is not likely to be corrected, as the German government definitely has refused to consent to the plan to use interned German ships to bring relief food, and because of the embargo which the German authorities have placed on the import into Belgium and Northern France of native Dutch food supplies, which, especially meats and fats, have done much to supplement the supplies sent into the occupied regions by the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

The quelling of the riots in the populous centres has been followed by the compulsory evacuation from the cities by the German authorities, of large sections of the industrial populations. These have been scattered homeless through the agricultural regions, the reports say, as punishment, and to minimize the risk of a recurrence of the trouble.

The greatest forced migration took place from the city of Lille, from which 25,000 people, including women and children, were expelled.

Ques.: "What does your pay-roll amount to?"

Ans.: "Oh, say $10,000 a month."

Ques.: "Quite a wad. Of course you insure it?"

Ans.: "Insure it? What's the idea Frank?"

Ques.: "Well—you see, you're paying out $120,000 a year. Now you insure your building, equipment, stock, etc., why not insure your pay-roll, against loss—to you."

Ans.: "Ask me something easy. What's the point and what's the cost?"

Ques.: "The point is that your pay-roll represents your purchase of the greatest of all raw materials—WORKING TIME. Its subject to loss every day—four times a day—or every time your employees come in and go out of your plant."

Ans.: "Yes, but I employ a time-keeper."

Ques.: "Of course you do. But he's human. Who checks your time-keeper? And who checks the man who checks him? You need a cold-blooded machine for that job—so there will be no favorites or no mistakes."

Ans.: "There isn't any such machine."

Ques.: "Isn't there? Probably your keenest competitor to-day is using it and is just that much ahead of you. And it will cost you perhaps $3 a month to use it. I mean the International Time Recorder. It's the cheapest and best pay-roll insurance you can buy. Gives you printed, unchangeable, records, made under lock and key, that become your weekly pay-sheets. If you want real, inside facts and figures on the system exactly suited to your business write International Time Recording Co., corner McGill and Notre Dame streets, Montreal, or to their Head Office, Anderson Street, Toronto, for latest folders and prices."

SWEETS ARE GOOD FOR YOU.

Sweets are good for you, but they must be good sweets, of course. One of the meanest things that anybody has done since the war began was an attempt to rob the children of sugar and sweets by people who were quite willing that men should have all the beer they want. One of the greatest doctors of our time, Sir Lauder Brunton, immediately wrote a protest against this suggestion of robbing the children, and gave us the comforting assurance that sweets are not at all harmful if taken in moderation, and at the proper time.

Sweets, he says, have the power of supplying a craving which his sometimes felt even after a full meal, a fact which is usually recognized by their being placed on the table along with dessert. They satisfy a vague desire which is sometimes felt at other times, and instead of leading to indulgence in alcohol or tobacco, they supply the place of these stimulants. Over indulgence in sweets between meals, especially in children, is apt to lead to indigestion, but sweets taken advantage. As sugar when converted into beer or spirit loses most of its nutritive power, it is a much greater economy to keep sugar in its own form and not convert it into beer.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

But,—instead of merely grinding against said Earth,—for Traction,—they CLING to it, much as your bare foot clings to slippery surfaces.

This new and wonderful Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber," is as stretchy almost as a pure Rubber band, —Light-weight as Rubber in its native amber color, but stronger, tougher, longer-wearing (in Tires) than pure Rubber could ever be.

That Lightness, Stretch, and CLING-quality is due, in part, to the absence of the heavy and inert white substances which, in other Tires, provide the gritty texture designed to give effective but grinding Traction, when Clutch or Brakes do their work.

To provide its maximum Traction with minimum Friction (which means minimum Heat, minimum Tread-Wear, and lessened Strain on the rubber adhesive between fabric layers.)—

—That's the Mission of the new Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber."

How well it does this work,—how much more Resilience, Comfort-in-riding, and Mileage, it gives,—may be realized only by test.

"BAREFOOT RUBBER" can be had in Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in no other make but Goodrich.

Stretch it thousands of times, but tear its fibres you can't.

With all this,—observe that the best Fabric Tires in America—made of this TENACIOUS "Barefoot" Rubber,—cost you no more (and usually less), than ordinary Tires made by other responsible manufacturers.

No "larger-sized" Tires (taken Size for Size and Type for Type), are made than Goodrich Black-Tread Tires.

Why, then, should any Business Man pay more than the Goodrich "Fair-List" Price, for any Tire, until he has at least tested one pair of these new "Barefoot" Rubber Goodrich Tires?

FORT GARRYS LED THE WAY

Officer Commanding the Cavalry Brigade Writes His Appreciation

Made Magnificent Job of Consolidating Second Line at Night.

London, July 22. —General Seely has received a letter from the general officer commanding the cavalry brigade which carried through the operations on July 14 when British cavalry got to work on mounted troops for the first time since the battle of Mons, saying that the Fort Garry Horse had the honour of supplying the advance guards for both brigades.

The whole regiment came into action on this occasion for the first time, although they had been up to the line before but had not been used. They were fortunate enough to get off lightly, losing only five men wounded and eleven horses. The troops on either side, however, suffered severely.

The Fort Garrys were the first cavalry through the line.

The letter to General Seely reads in part as follows: "Will you please convey to the officer commanding and all ranks of the squadron of the Fort Garry Horse which I had the honour and pleasure of having attached to my brigade, my thanks for the valuable work they performed and the keeness which all ranks displayed during the operations of July 14. The Fort Garry Horse squadron were called upon to consolidate the second line a long time after dark, and a magnificent job they made of it. It was a pleasure to have such a fine body of men attached to one. I am sure that even under more trying circumstances they will do equally good work and display the same marked keeness."

says the government has decided to purchase through the Liquor Traffic Control Board, the whole of the breweries and public houses—the latter number some 300—in the city of Carlisle. It is understood that over a hundred public houses will be closed. At others state-brewed beer will be sold under state control.

The government's action may be repeated in other parts of the country as the necessity arises.

WHEN GAS COMES OVER.

English Soldier Describes the Approach of the Poison Fumes.

In a lengthy letter home a Somerset, Eng., man serving with the Field Ambulance at the front describes daily life in the trenches. Writing on February 26, he says:

"During the night we had some strange excitement. We were playing cards when we heard the heavy buzz of a motor going slowly overhead, but we couldn't see anything. We went back wondering what it was. In the morning we found out that it was a Zep. in a raid over our lines. I can tell you it was weird. . . . . At night we got our first taste of the worst thing we have to contend with, viz., gas. You don't know where it is coming from. We were all seated around enjoying a game of cards when we heard the gas gong tinkling. Out went one of our fellows, and back he came with a rush, his gas helmet in his hand, saying, "Gas is coming over." He was followed by the sentry, with his helmet on, telling us to get ours on quick. We did not need telling twice. Out we went, and waited for what we did not know. When every one had their helmets on it was the weirdest sight I've ever experienced. It was exciting waiting there.

You have to duck and dodge the shrapnel flying about. I was standing at the dug-out entrance talking to some of the fellows, when—ping, ping—a bullet struck the sandbag over my head. I got covered with sand on my neck and face, but Mister Fritz wasn't quite near enough. You can bet I didn't stand there another minute, for they have a nasty habit of getting there again. . . .

We have the upper hand as regards artillery, and send over three to their one. Yesterday on our right there was a terrific battle on, and the guns going made your head ache with the noise. At night it was a sight. You could see the shells burst, and throw up flames. Lights of every description were going up.

This is war. . . . We had a chase in the middle of the night—an officer wounded—and we had to carry him all the way down the trench, and across the road. I was carrying in front. We got out of the trench, and Frits evidently spotted us, for we had a lively time—ping, ping all across the road every now and again, but we escaped being hit. I can tell you it's not a pleasant experience being a target for a sniper. You can't do a nip with a loaded stretcher, but must stick to it, and trust to luck. You have to remember the man on the stretcher. You may be saving his life by getting down to the dressing station quickly."

A Good Fish Story.

Lord Buxton, the Governor-General of South Africa, is an ardent disciple of Izaak Walton, and he tells many good fishing yarns. One of his favorites is about an angler who one day had four hours' tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at last he had made sure of his catch he took it home in ecstasy and related his triumph to his maiden aunt. Of course, like all fishermen, he made as much of the story as possible, and laid special stress on the time it took and the immense energy he had to expend before he could bring the salmon safely to land. When he had finished he waited anxiously for the praise due to his cleverness and heroism. For some moments there was silence, and then his aunt looked up from her knitting with a puzzled expression on her face. "But, my dear Tom," she said quietly, "why did you not cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

The Word "Derrick."

The word "derrick" for a machine used to lift heavy weights is curiously derived from a London hangman in the beginning of the seventeenth century whose name was Theodoric and who is often mentioned in old plays. "He rides circuit with the devil, and Derrick must be his host and Tyborne the inn at which he will light" occurs in "The Bellman of London," published in 1616. The name thus corrupted came afterward to be applied by an easy transition to the gallows and later still to any frame or contrivance resembling it in shape.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

WILLIAM WARREN.

A BOER WAR HERO.

General Mahon Relieved Mafeking by Clever Cavalry Dash.

Lieut.-General Sir Bryan Mahon, D.S.O., commander of the British forces in the Balkans, is the dashing cavalry officer who led the flying column to the relief of Mafeking in 1900. Sir Bryan was in Egypt when the South African War broke out, and the story goes that when he received a telegram to transfer himself to South Africa as quickly as possible he drove five camels to death in his feverish rush across the desert.

The story of how that flying column of 900 mounted men, 100 picked infantry, four guns, two pom-poms, and sixteen days' provisions fought its way to Mafeking forms one of the most thrilling stories of the Boer campaign. It was during his march to raise the siege of Mafeking that, having no cipher and wishing to send Baden-Powell a message concerning his force, Mahon wrote this enigma: "Our numbers are the Naval and Military Club multiplied by 10 (94 Piccadilly) x 10—940); our guns the number of sons in the Ward family (six); our supplies the O. C. 9th Lancers (little)."

Previous to departing for South Africa, Sir Richard Wingate paid a magnificent tribute to Sir Bryan in a despatch to Lord Kitchener, concerning his (Sir Bryan's) services in the Soudan campaign. "I cannot," he wrote, "speak in sufficiently strong terms of the excellence of the services performed by this officer. His personal disregard for danger, intrepid scouting, and clever handling of men all fit him for high command."

Sir Bryan is a Galway man, and learnt his soldiering with the 8th Hussars, ultimately joining the 12th Lancers, of which in 1900 he became lieutenant-colonel, reaching his present rank three years ago. It is interesting to note that he is a cousin of Sir Edward Carson, and, like Baden-Powell, loves polo, pig-sticking, and steeplechasing.

Campaigning in Africa.

We campaign in Wonderland (writes Reuter's special correspondent with General Smuts' force in East Africa), a land of surprising beauty, deep, dark forests, rushing, snow-cooled torrents radiating from the mountainous mass that stands upon the marshes of British and German East Africa.

Orchids of rare brilliancy of color, gigantic Batbabs, entanglements of tropical tendrils, hot-house heat, roads tunnelled through forests, rough and rustic bridges spanning the gorges, and over all the brooding spirit of "the man and the woman" Kilima Njaro.

The natives worship the mountain as a fetish. It is seldom to be seen in this misty weather. Only at sunrise and at sunset are the glissaded walls of the mighty crater, the "womb of the world, from which man and woman were cast forth," visible. Then for a moment gilded by the eastern rays or crimson in the western glow, the splendor of the unscalable heights is unveiled for the adoration of the faithful.

But this tropical terrain is as poisonous as it is beautiful. The lion and the leopard, to say nothing of the lizard, keep its fastnesses.

A scared motor lorry driver reported recently that two "rhinos" had attempted to charge his lorry.

"This place," complained a Cockney chauffeur, "is a blooming zoo; and they don't lock the animals up at night."

Coal in Perambulators.

Perambulator coal parades are one of the sights of Westminster just now. Elegant flats and mean streets jostle one another in this neighborhood, and the problem of the household coal supply has to be met alike by rich and poor. Storage is the main difficulty. In many of the highly rented flats there is a conspicuous absence of "cellarage." At the rare and welcome cry of "Co—al" people of all classes hurry out of their houses with pails, foot baths, string bags, scuttles, and anything else they can get, mob the coalman, and clear his stock. When the coal-cart fails to appear—which is more often than not—there are processions of perambulators and go-carts to the small shops (mostly greengrocers') in the neighborhood and the coal is bought up speedily in small quantities and wheeled or carried away. Poor people in Westminster have been buying it by the pound. It is not at all unusual to see well-dressed women coal-hunting around the mean streets. The treasure once discovered, they convey it home in portmanteaus, dress-baskets, and anything else handy. One woman was seen the other day carrying her "loot" home in a champagne-cooler and another conveyed hers in a motor-car.

Village Toy Industry.

Toy making, as a village industry, is making steady and satisfactory progress in Bedfordshire. An association has been formed to encourage the work and prevent the industry slipping back to German hands after the war. They have now got it established firmly on a sound business basis in thirteen villages. The work is mostly done by women.

Pound Cake.

A pound of butter, a pound of sugar, a pound of flour, a pound of eggs (usually eight), salt, a pound of raisins, a little nutmeg and a little baking powder. Bake this in a large tin.

Wash Day.

When mammy does her washin'
I wash my dolly's clo'e's.
Jes' how dey git so grimy
De land er goodness knows.

I sops 'em in de water,
Den swishes roun' de suds,
An' w'en I gets 'em ironed
Dey'll look like bran' new duds.

But 'twon't be long, I reckon,
Dey'll stay so nice an' smart.
De way dat chile gets mussy
Jes' breaks her mudder's heart.

But maybe when I hugs her
An' squeezes her so tight
De color runs—ma says it do,
An' my ma's allus right.

BELGIUM'S BENEFACTOR.

A Great Man Whose Name is Seldom Heard.

"Hoover? Who is Hoover?" someone asked at a war conference recently. The ignorance was excusable, for few people know who or what "Hoover" is, although, to quote the words of a member of President Wilson's Cabinet, "Hoover is the American of all Americans who has played the most important part in the great tragedy being enacted in Europe."

Herbert C. Hoover, who is head of the Belgian Relief Fund and has directed the expenditure of £10,000,000 in recent months, is one of the most brilliant engineers and financiers in the world. Europe has decorated him for his achievements in mining engineering, and he is a member of many scientific and learned societies.

His greatest engineering work has been achieved in China, where he has opened up mines and vast networks of railways. Starting life as a farmer's boy, he worked barefooted in the fields. Hoover paid for his own education, supporting himself for four years at Stanford University, afterwards qualifying for various mining appointments, achieving a reputation in Mexico and California before coming to Europe and becoming such a power in the mining and engineering world. It is a saying that where Hoover leads other men follow, and to-day the former farmers' boy is sought by Royalty and the business kings of the world. From his office in London he directs his huge mining operations in all parts of the globe, as well as the great relief work for unhappy Belgium.

To Regularize Marriages.

Irregular marriages in Scotland are receiving the attention of the Secretary of State for Scotland, and he has recently introduced in the House of Commons a bill to amend the present registration law. A memorandum attached to the Bill states that the present law provides that the parties to an irregular marriage in Scotland may apply to the Sheriff within three months of the marriage for a warrant to register the marriage. Owing to the neglect of the parties many warrants are not followed by registration. The number of applications has considerably increased since the war, and there is reason to suppose that the parties in a number of cases are soldiers and sailors. The Bill makes it possible for men serving with the colors to comply within the limits of a short furlough with the formalities necessary to a regular marriage. At present that is often impossible, and many who would prefer to be married regularly are compelled to resort to an irregular marriage.

Last Sedan-Chair in Use.

Lord Rosbebery's gift of a sedan-chair to the Corporation of the ancient city of Bath reminds one that, while most specimens are to-day in museums, there has been at least one "chair" in use in this country until quite recently. It was an old specimen, and very faded, and its owner had placed it upon wheels, so that one man could deal with it instead of two. In this guise, in the old-world town of Bury St. Edmunds, it was hired out to carry an old lady to church every fine Sabbath morning, and to do other odd jobs, such as taking young ladies to dinners at the Athenaeum and the like.

Shot in Heart and Recovers.

The proudest wounded soldier in London to-day is the man who recently had a jagged piece of shrapnel removed from his heart by an operation that has excited the greatest interest among doctors.

The shrapnel, whose edges might have torn through the adjacent tissue on any exertion of the sufferer, was lodged in the pericardium, in a position apparently so inaccessible that it was thought inadvisable to operate. The patient was able to leave his bed, but was obviously permanently unfit.

Then an Australian surgeon suggested how the operation could be performed. It involved most intricate surgery, and at the end the shrapnel was to be picked out by the surgeon's delicate fingers. The soldier, who is well on the way to complete recovery, now cherishes a mounted piece of shrapnel destined to become an heirloom.

Vaughan a Smoker.

Notwithstanding his discourses against the "sins of society," Father Vaughan is not by any means an ascetic; as a matter of fact he is very contemptuous of the person who denies himself every good thing in life. The story goes that on one occasion Father Vaughan offered a good cigar to a very anaemic and pious-looking minister who belonged to quite a different persuasion to himself, and who rejected the offer with horror.

"I was not sent into the world to smoke," he said, holding up his hand in protest.

"Ah," replied Father Vaughan genially, "I belong to a church that prefers to get its smoking done in this world. I hope you won't mind me lighting up."

A Famine in Envelopes.

There is a famine in envelopes, due of course to the restriction on the importation of paper. One firm in London recently ordered 10,000 envelopes, and the reply was that they could not be obtained at any price. If the famine continues, as seems inevitable, it will be necessary to do without envelopes. To meet this emergency, notepaper which can be folded up and gummed envelope-wise has been placed on the market.

They Found a Mine.

An exciting time was experienced a few days ago by the crew of the steamer Clermiston, when nearing Leith. A mine was sighted floating right in the track of the vessel. A boat was lowered from the steamer and a rope made fast to the mine in order that it might be towed to the nearest patrol boat. There was a choppy sea, so that the work of getting the ropes around the mine was of a hazardous character. The men succeeded, however, in securing it, but after towing for a quarter of an hour the mine blew up, sending smoke and water to a great height, and fragments of the mine fell aboard the steamer.

Mrs. Able Says:

PEOPLE ask me why my tea tastes so good. First, I use freshly drawn water. When boiling briskly I pour it over the leaves, allowing the tea to steep, not boil, five minutes. Next, I pour the tea off the leaves into another pot. In that way you get the flavor of Red Rose Tea in all its fullness and richness. Try it.

TO MAKE MAYONNAISE.

Mayonnaise is not difficult to make successfully. It is a mistake to think that every ingredient must be thoroughly chilled for successful mayonnaise. The ingredients should all be at about the same temperature. So if the oil is very cold, have the bowl and the egg cold. But if the oil is not very cold, let the bowl and the egg stand outside the refrigerator long enough to lose their chill.

Then beat the yolk of the egg with a silver fork or spoon or with a small egg beater. Gradually, beating constantly, add half a cup of oil. When this is well beaten in, with a resulting thick mass, add half a teaspoonful of salt, a little red pepper, half a teaspoonful of mustard, a pinch of sugar, if desired, and a little celery salt or a dash of mace. Then slowly add another half cup of oil and three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice or vinegar.

Beat for two or three minutes after all the ingredients are added and you will have a dressing that will not separate. The amount of acid used is variable, of course. If the dressing is too thick, and yet is acid enough, add a little cream. If you wish to double the amount without using more oil, add the same amount of whipped cream.

TO WIND YARN UNAIDED.

We all know that it is difficult to wind wool or yarn of any kind if there is no one to hold the skein. To overcome this difficulty put two flatirons on the table a sufficient distance apart to allow the wool to be tightly stretched. This will answer just as well as some one holding the skein.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Spondylo-Therapy:—The Chinaman is not the only human being that seeks by every artful device to "Save his face." Now, that is an expression with which you may not be familiar but with the actual mental process I believe nearly every human being is familiar. As briefly as I can describe the meaning it is to supply a plausible excuse for doing or agreeing to do something which one has previously condemned or said they would not do.

Nearly a quarter of a century ago an old system of treating human ailments under the name of Osteopathy was brought to public notice and favor through the opposition and condemnation of the self-styled "regular physicians." The new school of practice, previously known as "Bone-setters," grew rapidly under the opposition of the regulars, and was soon followed by a more concentrated method that was named "Chiropractic." This also was boosted by the opposition of the regulars and the benefitted patrons and like osteopathy grew strong and vigorous.

About that time also the question of scientific dietetics began to make headway. The subject had not been considered of sufficient importance to receive more than a limited number of lectures in the regular medical colleges, but the patient that was really sick was told to eat whatever was desired as the doctor usually considered that one that was really sick would have no appetite and the others would digest any reasonable food.

Next the nature cure apostles began an active campaign. All of these practical methods of treatment as well as hydro-therapy, zone-therapy, and the especial importance of the care of the teeth and eyes as well as mental or suggestive therapeutics, were advocated and boosted to the extent of my ability through Home Health Club. The result has been of vast benefit to humanity and the establishment of numerous schools where specialists have been graduated in these various methods.

That is not all, however, the Regulars, having through their opposition developed strength and efficiency in the various methods, found much of their practice slipping away, and that they must use the good things in their own practice, and so they invented a new name that would save the face and at the same time cover the treatments of both the osteopath and the choropractor, and they called it Spondylo-therapy. They had the advantage of the other schools of practice because the people have been taught from infancy to take something for every pain. The doctor that could adjust the spine or any bone and then give a few doses of medicine could charge for both and the patient was better satisfied so Spondylo-therapy made a hit with the doctors at least.

The great weakness of all of the various methods of relieving human suffering lies in the restricted use of the single method, so much specialising that correct diagnosis is frequently impossible, hence the disrepute into which a perfectly good system is liable to fall.

At the present time there is under way a movement to establish a school that will make diagnosis the first and most important part of its teachings, and then will follow a complete course of thorough instruction in all of the modern and practical methods of drugless healing, including the teachings of the Home Health Club that have stood the acid test of a quarter of a century. I will be glad to give further information about the new school to those that care to learn, because I believe that it is a move in the right direction.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

GOOD RICH BLOOD MEANS GOOD HEALTH

Just a Little More Rich, Red Blood Cures Most Ailments

The lack of sufficient rich, red blood does not end merely in a pale complexion. It is much more serious. Bloodless people are tired, languid, run-down folk who do not enjoy life. Food does not nourish; there's indigestion, heart palpitation, headache, backache and nearly always nervousness. If this bloodlessness is neglected too long, a decline is sure to follow. Just a little more rich, red blood cures all these troubles. Then you have new health, new vitality and pleasure in life. To get more rich, red blood the remedy is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. No other medicine increases and enriches the blood so quickly or so surely. This is not a mere claim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done this over and over again throughout why thousands of people always have a good word to say for this medicine. Miss Gertrude Haffner, Kingston, Ont, says: "About two years ago I was suffering greatly with anaemia, so much so that I had to give up my situation. I became so weak that I could scarcely walk without help. I had no ambition, no colour, no appetite and was constantly troubled with headaches and dizzy spells. I was taking medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me a particle of good. One day a friend asked me if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Though as the result of my condition I was greatly discouraged, I began the use of the Pills, and thanks to that good friend's advice after using a few boxes I began to feel much better. Under the continued use of the pills I gained in weight, my color came back and I grew gradually stronger. I looked so much better that people would ask me what I was taking and I had no hesitation in giving the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am so grateful for what this medicine has done for me that I will do all I can to extend its use."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUGGESTIONS FOR A PICNIC

Pack silverware dishes, paper napkins and paper cups in one basket and all eatables in another. Prepare sandwiches and mix salad just before serving. Use oiled paper on paper plates for serving cake, salad sandwiches, melon, etc. Pack melons in ice and use ice later for punch, lemonade or water. Clean up and burn all debris such as papers, paper plates, melon rinds, etc. Take along witch hazel and cold cream for sunburn or mosquito bites. Following is a simple and easily prepared menu: Fried chicken, olives, pickles, potato salad, cheese wafers, watermelon, fruit punch, cocoanut cake, cheese and olive sandwiches, breakfast radishes, spring onions.

WOMEN SHOULD NOT BE SLAVES

There are women so puny in self-respect that they can never command the respect of any one—even husband or lover. Even woman's growing economic independence is not curing this sort of woman.

There was Nancy, mistress of Bill Sikes—common, living characters that Dickens painted for us, Nancy thought she had to take Bill's abuse because she loved him so much.

Do not reason with your hearts—use your brains.

It is only true that to refrain from showing affection makes the wife miserable. She does not care for presents or lavish attention she wants those little tokens such as may be given even in a look, which will prove her husband's love. We wish some of the good things that some men are saving up to say concerning their wives after they are dead could be said now.

AN AGE-OLD SECRET

Suppose some famous beauty of the olden days had included in her diary, a list of toilet aids—we would probably read therein that the witchery of her smile she owed to "just a bit of charcoal."

CORSON'S CHARCOAL TOOTH-PASTE

is a wonderful new dentrifrice, silver grey in color, velvety yet effective in action and extremely pleasant to use.

The refined charcoal in this Paste whitens the yellowest teeth, hardens the gums and gives to the mouth a sensation of sweet cleanness.

Just a day or so—you do not have to wait long for results—and you will note with satisfaction how white your teeth are getting.

PRESERVING FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR.

THE RECIPE.

The fruit is prepared in the ordinary way, the jars are cleaned and scalded while the rubbers and tops are boiling. The fruit is then placed in the jars, in which cold water is placed. When the jars have been sealed air-tight they are placed in a boiler filled with cold water and brought to the boiling point. Berries will do if removed when the boiling point is reached, while large fruits, such as peaches, cherries, plums and apricots, should get 20 to 30 minutes boiling. Keep cover of wash boiler on tight.

A GOOD SUBSTITUTE FOR CAN RUBBERS.

When about to close a jar of preserved goods, the housewife very often finds herself short of a rubber band, or else the last one breaks. A very good substitute can be made from newspaper. This is better than other paper, because, as plumbers say, "it packs better." They often use it to make small pipe joints air and water-tight. Cut several layers of the paper the required size, put them on the can and screw the lid down as tightly as possible. If preferred, rings of soft leather, cut from the tops of old shoes, may be used, but they are not as satisfactory as those made from newspapers.

RASPBERRY CROWN.

Two tablespoons water, 2 tablespoons corn starch, 1 cup boiling raspberry juice, 1 egg, pinch of salt, lemon extract. Cook until creamy. Put into moulds. When cold serve with raspberries or whipped cream.

RASPBERRY TAPIOCA.

Put ¾ cup tapioca into a kettle, cover with 4 cups boiling water and cook until transparent. Stir into this 1 pint of fresh raspberries, adding sugar to taste. Pour into a mould. Serve cold with cream.

RASPBERRY CAKE.

One cup white sugar, ½ cup butter, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons buttermilk, 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon soda, nutmeg, 1 cup raspberries (to be added last). Bake in layers.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR.

Put 1 quart of raspberries into a suitable dish, pour over them a quart of good vinegar, let it stand 24 hours, then strain through a flannel bag and pour this liquor on another quart of berries; do this for 3 or 4 days successively and strain it; make it very sweet with loaf sugar; bottle and seal it.

RASPBERRY CREAMS.

Stir enough confectioners' sugar into a teaspoonful of raspberry jam to form a thick paste; roll it into a ball between the palms of your hands. Put a lump French Cream into a teacup and set it into a basin of boiling water, stirring it until it is melted; then drop a few drops of cochineal colouring to make it a pale pink, or a few drops of raspberry juice, being careful not to add enough to prevent its hardening. Now dip these little balls into the sugar cream, giving them two coats. Lay aside to harden.

RASPBERRY PIE.

To 2 cups raspberries and 1 cup of red currants and 1 cup granulated sugar, with which a teaspoonful of flour has been mixed; stir together. Line a plate with flaky pie crust, put in the fruit, cover with a tolerably thick sheet of paste, make several incisions for escape of steam, and bake until the crusts are nicely browned. Serve cool.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 35 or 38. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissues from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address, D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

JULY BRINGS OUT COOL FROCKS

Sports Costumes and Lingerie Frocks Favoured

Hats Are Large and Sparsely Trimmed

NEW YORK, July 22.—July lived up to tradition this year, affording us an opportunity to wear our sheerest lingerie frocks and our smartest sports costumes during the holidays. The nearby resorts were crowded on the Fourth, which chanced to be an ideal day, with well dressed men and women. A tiny flag, or a bit of red, white and blue, was a detail of most costumes; the men wore it on coat lapel, in that band, or protruding from a pocket; the women pinned it daintily to the underbodice of the sheer blouse or frock, from where its colours shone out softly and effectively; or tucked a small silk flag into the girdle of the white frock, or into the pocket of the sports coat. Our patriotism was just a little more pronounced than usual this year, owing, no doubt, to the rumors of war which have been coming to us lately, and the military preparations going on about us.

SUMMER COSTUMES COMBINE COMFORT AND CHARM.

There were not many among the holiday crowds, however, who looked uncomfortably 'dressed-up"; Fashion has at last managed to combine comfort with grace and charm. The sports costume predominated; various styles of middy and Russian blouses were worn with trim fitting skirts;

MIDDY BLOUSE AND SERGE SKIRT

chic suits of striped and plain mohair, pongee or linen, with Norfolk coats and pleated skirts, were favoured; and sweater coats, with self or contrasting skirts, were also popular. The middy blouse costumes were developed in the regulation white linen, duck or galatea, with collar and cuffs of blue and skirts of the new striped cotton novelties, mohair, or plain white linen. The modified Russian and "slip-on" blouses favoured the white and colored Japanese silks, pongee, plain or figured, Shantung, or Georgette, and were usually combined with skirts of thin; light or dark silks. One especially pretty costume developed in plain, natural colored pongee, trimmed and combined with a skirt of dark blue foulard dotted with bright green, is illustrated here. It is a slip-on model with cool, becoming sleeves, and an effective collar. The skirt is a simple gathered design, short and full, but unusually graceful.

The plain white Russian blouse taffeta o nthe skirt. The straight-lined ly effective and cool for these hot summer days, and perfectly appropriate for summer evening wear at roof garden, or summer show. The simple voiles, too, are being developed in charming models with a touch of black, or a bright colour at girdle or throat. The new voiles are washable in most mixtures, and generally satisfactory.

COOL FROCKS FOR STREET WEAR.

Dark blue in taffeta, Georgette, serge and satin is the leading colour for city street wear, in spite of its apparent warmth. As most of these frocks, however, are made with white or self-colored transparent sleeves, they are in reality quite as cool as a light colored frock. Dark blue Georgete is often used for the entire dress collared and cuffed with taffeta, and trimmed with a band or two of the tffeta on the skirt. The straigh-lined one-piece serges which one meets so often on the avenue these days—for there are many smart costumes to be seen on the avenue owing to the lure of the shops; for those who fly from town at the first hint of summer are tempted by the shops, and motor in frequently to visit them—are often trimmed effectively with braid or beads, in designs worked out in colours.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THERE are five chief ways in which disease spreads. These are: Water, Food, Flies, Milk, and Contact. These sources of infection are intermingled with one another. Let us look into them and see how disease travels from one person to another.

The source of all water supply comes from the rain and snow. Next we find it in rivers, streams, ponds, and lakes, stored in the ground in the form of springs, and in underground stretches of gravel whence it is obtained from deep or shallow wells. When a water supply is being considered it must be judged (like the character of a person) by the company it keeps. Any source of water supply cannot be pure if it is exposed to the entrance into it of sewage (the discharge from the bodies of human beings). This may occur in a variety of ways; for example, a stream, river, or lake which would otherwise be pure, may have the sewage of a town dumped into it, or there may be water-closets upon its banks, or the excreta of a typhoid case may be thrown on the ground nearby and washed by melting snow or rain into the water. A supply from such a source, unless purified, is a dangerous one. It might be safe for every day of the year but one; the pollution on that one day might start an epidemic of disease. The well may be unprotected, allowing surface water to enter, or it may be sunk in a creviced limestone rock which serves as a means whereby sewage may reach the water. The commonest diseases carried by water are Typhoid Fever, Cholera, Dysentery, and Diarrhoea (or Summer Complaint). In this country the commonest water-borne disease is Typhoid Fever.

WATER

* * *

FOOD

Food frequently carries disease because it becomes contaminated by flies, dirty fingers, and by mouth or nose-spray of carriers or persons affected by disease. Meat containing the germs of tuberculosis or the larvae of certain worms, if insufficiently cooked, may carry disease.

FLIES

Flies breed in manure, chiefly in fresh horse manure. They will not breed in fermenting manure which is too hot for them. A period of eight to eleven days is required to carry the fly from the egg stage through the maggot, larvae, and pupae stages to the full grown fly. The fly will not travel great distances if there is plenty of food at hand, but if hungry it may fly for some distance, say half a mile or more. One can easily understand how this insect may carry disease when one considers its well-known habits of flitting from the exposed contents of the water-closet to food in the kitchen. Diseases such as Typhoid, Dysentery, Cholera, Diarrhoea, and Tuberculosis are commonly carried by flies.

MILK

By milk from tuberculous cows children may become infected with Tuberculosis; or, if the handler is a consumptive, the disease may be carried to the users. Similarly, if those handling milk are in contact with diseases like Scarlet Fever or Diphtheria, these diseases may be carried. Washing of cans with sewage-polluted water, or dilution of milk with polluted water may serve to infect the milk, and, in turn, the consumers with water-borne diseases.

* * *

CONTACT

Contact with either the actual victims of diseases like Tuberculosis and communicable affections, or with "carriers" of such diseases is a very common means of infection. Those who come closest in contact with sufferers from communicable diseases are the greatest victims. Thus in cases of Diphtheria the mother, the nurse, and the doctor suffer infection in the order named. It used to be thought that Tuberculosis was inherited because members of the same family often died one after the other. Now it is well understood that Tuberculosis is a "Catching" disease and that it is the close contact between the members of the family, living, eating, sleeping together, using the same table utensils and the same towels, which is the cause of the terrible family mortality from this disease. The better this is known the better is the chance for prevention of Tuberculosis.

* * *

These facts about the manner in which disease is spread should be taught to every child. The school teachers might do well to have every child in his or her class learn these truths by heart. Children learn such facts very quickly. The knowledge of the growing population about these matters is the hope and the standby of the public health officer

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Occasionally we see a garment which so impresses us that we wonder and marvel at the success of the designers who more than dip into art to create styles particularly suited to a new fabric that may have suddenly gained supremacy over others. In shirt waists especially does it seem to be the aim of designers to create according to the popularity of the material.

Well, we gain by it and, of course, the designers are pleased, so everybody is happy.

Shirt waists may be divided and subdivided into many classes, so broad has their purpose become. We illustrate one that may serve as a practical garment or for better wear. You will agree that its excellencies silently appeal in polka dot material, and a small cape collar arranged over a large one in contrasting goods and each having a scalloped edge. The polka dot material, scalloping and the cape collar are all new style features—the material being hardly newer than the scalloping.

For copying this design there are many dotted fabrics in large and small effects. While a note of contrast is desirable it need not be striking. The shoulder fronts are gathered and the full sleeve is gathered to a deep cuff in self-material. There are some very pretty effects in dotted voile and in dotted swiss for those who lean toward this dainty fabric.

The pattern of waist No. 7,838 is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To make in size 36, like the illustration, will require 2 yards of figured material, 36 inches wide, and ⅝ yard of plain material in the same width for the collar. In all one material 2⅝ yards will be all that will be needed.

You may obtain the pattern by sending .to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Two Kisses

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

During the stay of the American troops in Cuba when the throwing off of Spanish rule was being brought about Captain Edward Mansfield of the staff was sent out, supported by a reconnoitering party, to sweep around Santiago for information. Coming to a hacienda, the captain, leaving his men at the gateway, rode up to the house. He was admitted by a negro woman, who announced that there was no one at home except Senorita Sierra, the daughter of the owner. Whereupon Mansfield asked if he might have a few minutes' conversation with the young lady.

The senorita was of a different type from the usual Spanish girl, who is small of stature and delicately made. She was rather above the middle height for a woman and of dignified demeanor. Having entered the room where the captain was waiting for her, she stood without speaking till he should make known his desires.

What Mansfield had called at the house for was information. He asked if the family sided with Spain or Cuba and learned that their hearts were with Cuba. But as to information, the young lady had none to give. Nevertheless the visitor kept her talking. He was a male flirt and had made many a conquest. Daring was a method he often employed with women, and he resolved upon this course in the present case. After engaging the senorita in conversation for some time, during which he showed admiration for her, he rose to take his leave. He offered his hand, and when she gave him hers he drew her toward him, and before she could draw back he had kissed her on the cheek.

That he had made a mistake was instantly apparent. The senorita's eyes flashed, and her face flushed scarlet. With an expression of contempt she turned, left the room, and Mansfield saw her no more.

When the fighting was over, before returning to the United States, Mansfield mounted his horse and rode to the hacienda to offer an apology for what he had done. The same negro woman who had admitted him before opened the door. Mansfield asked her to inform her mistress that he would consider it a boon if she would give him a few moments in which to apologise for what he had done on a previous visit.

Written word was returned that an apology would not be accepted. The lady demanded satisfaction on behalf of one who would act as her champion. Captain Mansfield would receive a communication at a hotel a short distance down the road.

The officer left the house in a quandary. Should he meet some one in mortal combat for a snatched kiss for which he had offered to apologize, or should he end the affair by sailing for home without paying any further attention to it? He would have chosen the latter course had it not been for the contemptuous treatment he had received from the senorita. He could not bring himself to incur the further imputation.

He rode to the hotel named and, taking a seat on the veranda, lit a cigar. Half an hour passed, and he was about to ride back to camp when a negro boy approached, holding in his hand a letter. Seeing Mansfield, he handed it to him. The captain opened it and read:

To the American Officer.—This evening at 6 o'clock I will take satisfaction for the insult offered my sister. Be at the northeast corner of the Sierra hacienda.
JOSE SIERRA.

Mansfield was puzzled as to the handwriting. The letters were large and bold, but it looked as if the writer had disguised his hand. The captain could not but smile at a challenge to mortal combat sent by a negro boy, addressed to "the American officer" and signed by a man he had never seen. If Jose Sierra had no friend to bear his challenge why did he not come himself? Evidently the senorita was put to it to secure her revenge. Possibly the brother was not at hand, and the sister had written the challenge in his behalf. Indeed, despite the large letters there was more that was feminine than masculine in the writing.

At 6 o'clock Mansfield returned to the hacienda, located the northeast corner and, climbing the fence, advanced till he came to a grove in the center of which was an open space. There he stood for a few minutes, when he saw a figure advancing. Though the costume was that of a man, the gait was unmistakably that of a woman. Mansfield, pretending to be deceived, said:

"Senor, your resemblance to your sister is remarkable."

"We are twins, sir."

"I presume we are to fight without seconds?"

"Are they necessary?"

"Before we begin I desire to offer through you to your sister the apology she would not receive. I was tempted beyond my strength from beholding the most beautiful, the most engaging woman I have ever seen. After I have killed you I shall renew my suit, restraining myself so that my intentions shall not be mistaken."

Portuguese and Codfish.

It is an interesting fact that the fishermen of northern Portugal started and developed the fishing industry on the "banks" off the northern coast of America, and, though they now send fewer ships, their taste for salt cod from Newfoundland is unabated—in fact, it is a national Portuguese dainty. It is found in every little grocery shop, hard and brown as a board. A number of Portuguese have made their homes on the islands to the south of the mainland of Massachusetts, and there the dark eyes of the Iberian maiden, raven locks and a certain picturesque element in dress are not infrequent. This connection with Portugal dates back many years, the ships of Marthas Vineyard bridging the distance over sea and returning with Portuguese crews.—Exchange.

WAR PIGEONS.

Flying From France to Yorkshire With Messages.

The announcement of the War Office that a large number of homing-pigeons are being utilized for naval and military purposes, and that many of these have been shot at and killed or wounded when homing to their lofts by ignorant people, calls attention to the value of the work of these winged messengers.

The pigeons referred to by the War Office are, in the majority of cases, birds offered to the Government by a large number of patriotic pigeon-fanciers. Wireless, aeroplanes, and telephones have supplanted the use of pigeons for various war purposes on the Continent, and the British Admiralty, which up to a few years ago had a pigeon service to a loft in the south of England, discontinued it on account of the introduction of wireless. Lately, however, pigeons have been found rather useful for certain kinds of work, and it is well known in east coast shipping circles that the British fleet in the North Sea found panniers of trained homing-pigeons on board German trawlers at an early period in the war.

These pigeons are able to fly tremendous distances in an incredibly short period of time.

The best record for long-distance flying in Great Britain is held at present by Messrs. Vester and Scurr, of Spennymoor, in Durham, who possess a pigeon named Prince of Rome which flew from Rome to its loft in 1913, a distance of 1,093 miles, when competing in a test race. A bird, King of Rome, owned by Mr. C. H. Hudson, of Derby, flew in the same race, and won it by flying a distance of 1,001 miles in much less time than the Durham arrival. A hen pigeon, Her Majesty, flew from Bordeaux, in the South of France, to her loft at Aberdeen, a distance of 854 miles, but took several days over the journey.

A very satisfactory feat was performed by a bird owned by Dr. Barker, of Clitheroe, Lancs, which, when liberated at Mirande, in the South of France, flew home to Lancashire and entered its loft the day following the toss.

The first English-bred bird to fly from Spain to England was a dark chequer cock named Alfonso, which in 1907 flew from San Sebastian to the loft of its owner, Mr. T. H. Burton, of Liverpool, a distance of 705 miles, homing on the third day following the toss, and thus winning the first prise in the Manchester Flying Club. Before the war birds frequently flew from Rence, in France, to Yorkshire lofts, and reached home the same day as the toss or, in bad weather, early the next morning.

TRIBUTE TO THE MULE.

With All His Faults He Is a More or Less Noble Character.

The mule is singularly free from the ills to which horseflesh is heir. He has more days' work in him in 365 consecutive days than any farm animal or farm engine. He requires less feed when at work than any horse that can approach his capacity, for when he is idle he can forage successfully where the draft horse finds the picking too slim. He takes pot luck with any owner cheerfully and keeps fit upon it.

In peace the mule is man's most faithful servant, although the gentlest of his kind is not entirely free from original sin and the oldest may experience unaccountable sporadic outbreaks of deviltment.

In war the mule retains his character as a hard toiler, a good scout and a homely figure about whom the poets and painters at the front do not grow enthusiastic. Although he is unsung when living and not greatly honored, he is not unwept when at thirty or beyond he lies down, sighs peacefully rather than regretfully and gives up his Spartan spirit.

If there is a hereafter for animals the mules' paradise is a series of Elysian fields with fences that only a good jumper can clear, with colts to chase, with something alive and preferably two legged to kick and with plenty of rough, plain victuals and a few goats to play with in sportive moods and negro drivers not brutal, yet not too indulgent, for human companionship.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Famous Monkey Dead.

"George" the well-known multi-colored mandril at the London Zoological Gardens, died recently at the venerable age of 40. This is a remarkable age for a captive monkey. Concerning "George's" strength, it has been said it took ten men to hold him down, but a Zoological Gardens official doubted whether even ten men would have dared the attempt.

A Socialist's Error.

Mr. R. B. Cunninghame-Graham, the well known English Socialist lecturer and writer, while on a visit to Morocco, had a very strong desire in Tangier one day to spread Socialistic views, a desire which proved impossible to resist, and within a very few minutes he was, therefore, addressing a motley crowd on the unhappy lot of the working man. He addressed them to the best of his ability in their own language, but soon discovered, rather to his surprise, that his audience were most decidedly unfriendly. After loudly disagreeing with some of his remarks they became somewhat threatening, and started to hustle him away. Fortunately for Mr. Graham some of his friends appeared on the scene, and he was extricated from his somewhat perilous position.

"What was wrong?" one of them asked him after they had got safely away from the irritated crowd. "What have you been saying to annoy them?"

"I was only telling them," replied the aggrieved Socialist, "that I thought an eight-hour-day was the only fair working day."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed his friend, dragging him away faster than ever. "Not one of those beggars ever works more than two hours a day in Tangier!"

How Halfpenny Newspapers Came.

The threatened shortage of paper in England brings to notice the rapidly increasing requirements in paper-making materials. Besides wood pulp, something like a million and a half tons of rags, straw, and waste-paper are also used to supply our requirements in paper.

It was the introduction of wood pulp in paper-making that so cheapened the material as to make the halfpenny newspaper possible. Indeed, it is said that the circulation of English newspapers trebled between the years 1875-1885, owing to the cheapening of paper following the introduction of wood pulp.

Quite a variety of other things are, of course, produced from wood pulp beside the paper necessary for the weeklies, dailies, and magazines. The most novel are paper saucepans, which have been used by Japanese soldiers among others, and ladies' imitation silk stockings, these being hardly detectable from the real article.

SWAYED BY THE WEATHER.

Some Persons Are Greatly Influenced by Climatic Conditions.

Weather influences on man may be roughly divided into two classes—viz, those which are direct and obvious and those which are the more or less indirect and obscure. The influences belonging to the second class have been during the past decade or so the subject of immense research.

Some persons are pronounced "meteoropaths," abnormally subject to "weather neuroses." Friedrich Nietzsche was one par excellence. Such persons, as a rule, are more specifically "cyclonopaths." The passage of cyclonic depressions accompanied by certain characteristic types of weather is reflected in their sensation and in the mode of operation of their bodily and mental functions.

The gross change of barometric pressure pertaining to a cyclone, or "low," is not in itself an important factor in producing these manifestations since it never exceeds that experienced in the ascent (without the effort of climbing) of a good sized hill. Indeed, many "lows" do not expose us to greater pressure of changes in the course of twenty-four hours than we experience in a couple of minutes in riding to the top of an average office building.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY AT WORK.

Rout of Hungarians by "Lava" Formation Described.

The open-order formation along an advancing oblique line which books on tactics describe as "in echelon" the Ural and Don Cossacks call "lava," because there are several oblique lines involved, which alternately seem to roll over one another as the members of the advanced line are put hors de combat. According to M. Filatoff, in the Russkoe Slovo of Petrograd, such a formation was responsible for the rout of eight dismounted regiments of Hungarian cavalry in the Strypa region. The engagement took place four days after General Brussiloff began his great drive. At the time the affair was dismissed by a brief sentence in the Petrograd official report cabled to this country. M. Filatoff writes:

"In the early morning of June 8 the Russians started out from a certain hamlet and forced the stream with such unexpected rapidity that the Hungarians had no time to destroy the bridge, and hurriedly retreated to a village designated 8, pursued by the Russians. On the following day the Russians awaited the arrival of an infantry brigade before starting the attack, which began at about 8 p.m. in echelon formation, dragoons leading the way, with hussars behind them, and lancers and Ural Cossacks in the rear.

"The charge was led by the regimental commander, Colonel I.; the senior staff officer, Colonel N., the regimental adjutant, and the regimental chaplain, Shpichak, and in front waved the regimental standard. The chaplain blessed the commander and the men and took part in the attack. His orderly was almost immediately slain by a shrapnel wound in the head. Stretched out in one line, squadron after squadron charged till the field was covered with hundreds of horsemen, whose lances and unsheathed sabres vividly reflected the rays of the setting sun. The enemy's fierce but scattered rifle and Maxim fire failed to check the Russian onslaught, though many horses with their riders fell in their mad career. Realizing their impending fate, the Hungarians moved out two or three battalions of infantry in order to take the Russian cavalry in the rear, but the Russians had prepared for this contingency by posting dragoons with Maxims on their flank, and these mowed down dense masses of the enemy as they emerged from the copse, and drove them back in disorder.

"The charge did not last long, though the Hungarians fought bravely and in isolated groups made a desperate resistance, sometimes discarding their rifles, seizing hold of the lances of their enemies and endeavouring to wrest them from the troopers' grasp. In all some 2,000 prisoners were taken and many trophies, including two howitzers, which the Russians removed by harnessing their horses to them with traces improvised out of their cloaks, which they cut up into strips and plaited together for this purpose. At 9 p.m. the bugles sounded the 'Fall in,' and, though not all responded to the muster roll, the Russian losses were inferior to the enemy's.

"The infantry General, in congratulating the cavalry, said: 'We thought cavalry had outlived its time, but evidently there is still good work left for it.'"

EVERY DAY EXPLOSIVES.

Potatoes and Bread Dangerous as Lamb Chops.

Some one has discovered that every nickel "contains enough explosive to blow a man's head off." This announcement is based on the fact that nickel combined with picric acid produces a powerful explosive. The purpose of the alarming announcement is not entirely clear. If it is intended as a warning to let nickels alone, a number of other common substances, quite as dangerous as nickels, should be included. Dimes and quarters are even more deadly than nickels. The silver fulminate that can be made from them is one of the most irritable and destructive of explosives. The fuminate side of it comes from alcohol, so that the nickel-avoider should keep away from that, too.

Cotton batting, the basis of guncotton, is an equally dangerous substance, as is also glycerine, because it can be made into nitro-glycerine. The nitrogen in a lamb chop, combined with the necessary carbon, hydrogen and oxygen to make picric acid, would probably blow half a dozen men's heads off. So we can see that the common or garden variety of bravery shown by every one of us every day in the calm handling of these potentially devastating substances—potatoes and bread are almost as dangerous explosives as cotton batting and lamb chops—is something the race has reason to be very proud of. We may also note the justice of Andrew Lang's observation that too frequently popular science is nothing more than the "expenditure of rhetoric on erroneous conclusions.' —New York "Evening Post."

A Frightful Death Suffocated In Asthma Attack

Every sufferer from asthma knows the terror, the abject fear that overcomes them when struggling for breath. The old fashioned remedies may relieve, but never cure. Best results come from Catarrhozone, which cures asthma after hope is abandoned. It's because Catarrhozone kills the asthma germ that it cures. Choking spells and laboured breathing are relieved, suffocating sensations and loss of breath are cured. Every trace of asthma is driven from the system, and even old chronics experience immediate relief and lasting cure. Equally good for bronchitis, throat trouble and catarrh. The large one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and lasts two months. Sold by all dealers or from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

HOW TO CLEAN WHITE FEATHERS.

Take gasoline and plaster of paris and mix the two together to the consistency of whipped cream. Dip the feathers in this mixture, squeezing, and pressing them. Then hang in the open air to dry thoroughly and until the gasoline evaporates. Be careful not to handle until thoroughly dry. Then shake well.

The result will be beautiful, clean and fluffy feather. White wings may be treated in the same manner. The gasoline must not be used where there is light or fire.

HAIG A QUIET LEADER

Studious, Reserved Officer Who Was Marked For Promotion by Work

When Sir John French became Viscount French a new and comparatively unknown officer took in his hands the responsibility for the lives of countless British soldiers. Sir Douglas Haig who had been commander of the first army. Of the Commander Frederick Palmer writes; No military leader is more averse to publicity or works more silently than Sir Douglas Haig, the British Commander-in-Chief in France. To those who are importunate for the offensive his answer is patience and yet again patience. His generals say that he never tells them his plans; only what they are to do. Probably not one man out of ten of the millions under his command would recognise him if they saw him. Not given to reviews or any kind of display, this quiet and studious Scotsman was the choice of the progressive, practical, driving element of the army as the one fit by equipment, training and experience to succeed Sir John French. At fifty-five he was on appointment nine years younger than Sir John and ten years younger than Joffre or von Hindenburg.

There is a story that he entered the army as the result of a boyish wager. He went through Oxford with distinction before he entered the military school at Sandhurst. But no sooner had he received his commission, later in life than most officers because of the time that he had spent at Oxford, than he set out with the thoroughness of the student to master every branch of his profession. "It was in Berlin in the nineties that I met a Captain Haig who was studying German and the German army," said an Englishman, "I was struck by his industry—not a brilliant man, perhaps, but a sound and well-balanced one. A little hesitant of speech, what he did say went to the heart of things."

He studied the French army, too, and the history of all campaigns with the systematic thoroughness that he applied to everything. It was the same with his pastimes as his profession. Whether he had talent for it or not he made himself a first class golf player, though the form which he developed did not excite the envy of professionals. At the British Army Staff College, where officers learn organization he was a marked man before he acted as chief-of-staff to General French in South Africa in the operation that made French's reputation. He was a soldier who had won solid professional esteem, though the public had hardly heard of this reserved, undemonstrative worker.

Of the men of command rank in the British army in August, 1914, he and Sir William Robertson—another studious man who had risen from the ranks—were the two who were appraised by the generation of officers who had developed since South Africa as having prepared themselves for the direction of large bodies of troops on the scale of continental warfare. They were not the magnetic, dashing leader type, but organizers.

FEATS OF CANADIANS

Artillery Officer's Ruse—Pats Fought to Last

General E. W. B. Morrison, of Ottawa, former editor of the Ottawa Citizen, and later in command of one of the artillery brigades at the front, has written to Mrs. Morrison of the Ypres battles of June, 1916, as follows: "After our troops retook the ground that had been temporarily lost, they found at one point the bodies of a big sergeant-major of the Mounted Rifles and two men of the Princess Patricias. Around them lay the bodies of twelve Germans killed with the bayonet before they had been done in.

"The Germans showed more decency than on former occasions, notably not firing on stretcher-bearers. One of our men was wounded and captured, and the Wurtemburgers gave him a cup of coffee, and said to him, 'cheer up, old man, you'll be over in England in a few days.' This probably alluded to the vainglorious accounts then in circulation regarding the naval battle. However, the wounded Canadian watched his chance and slipped in the bush and got away from his captors. He was caught again, but again escaped, and returned safely to our lines.

"A young Ottawa boy named Bruce Hill, who came out as gunner and had since got a commission, distinguished himself by remaining in his forward observing position after the Germans had charged past, and kept up communication by telephone with his battery for several hours, until the wire was cut by shellfire. He waited until dusk, and made his way back, carrying his telephone instruments with him."

Candid to Princess

An amusing confession was made by the Princess Royal. She told an intimate friend that she suffered so dreadfully from shyness that she could not bring herself to tell her guests to go to bed. "Well, ma'am," was the reply. "I wish you would depute the honor of doing so to me. Think of the amount of smothered yawns that would be saved." The Princess Royal was highly amused.

HEROES SEE NO BATTLE

Brave Stokers in Fleet Face Horrible Unseen Death

During a sea fight the engine room men tend the great engines of a battleship with all the care that they would bestow upon the same delicate yet mighty mechanism in time of peace, roaming listlessly, yet with a definite purpose, around the engine room with oil cans in hand, bestowing drops of lubricant here and there as required. Theirs and the stokers' is almost—not quite—the hardest part of the whole grim drama of a naval battle, for they are absolutely cut off from the fight, and are only cognisant of it by the quivering of their ship as the great turrets over their heads fire or as the enemy's shells thud against the armor or when some stray shot finds its way through the steel wall and the bunkers to the boilers. Such an event blends a whole stokehold in one frenzied orgy of death—death by exploding shell; death by awful wounds from burning coals, or death by scalding, hissing, blinding steam as the water tubes burst all around them.

ARE NOW FACING GERMAN THIRD LINE

GENERAL HAIG REPORTS TERRIBLE BOMBARDMENT

British Troops Now Face The Strong German Third Line

However the Foe is Being Driven Out of His Strong Natural Defensive Positions While the French Now Have Advantage of Fighting From Higher Ground---General Haig Reports Intense Artillery Combat Going On Along the Whole British Front.

FRENCH REPULSE GERMAN ATTACKS

LONDON, July 22.—For the first time since the Allies' great push started the Germans are losing the advantage of defenses furnished by nature. Official despatches to-day indicate that with the impending capture by General Haig's forces of the whole of Foureaux and Delville Woods, the German forces in this particular sector will be swept out of the last vestige of natural cover. This explains the tenacity with which the Teutons have clung to these two spots, now being steadily reduced by a tornado of British artillery fire to a blankened area of stumps and holes in the ground. But if the Germans are being forced out of their natural defensive positions the British forces are now encountering the full strength of the third line positions of the enemy. The trenches, bomb proofs and shelters which the Germans have had plenty of time uninterrupted by artillery fire to perfect. There has been almost a total cessation of the German pressure on Verdun, supporting the theory that the Crown Prince's army has been drained of part of its reserves to strengthen the line where it is under attack by the British and French. The French in the Peronne sector now have the advantage of fighting from heights on an enemy below them. The Teutons face the menace of a flanking movement in the crook in the battle line from Peronne south to Craonne, and if the southward swing of the French army in the direction of Chaulnes continues, a retirement must be considered by the enemy from the villages of Roye, Lassigny, Ham, Noyon, and possibly La Fere.

GERMANS USING GAS AND TEAR-MAKING SHELLS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 22.—General Haig reported the progress of an intense artillery combat going along the whole British front. For the past twelve hours the guns on both sides have roared, and the Germans have poured gas and tear-making shells into the British front lines.

German Attacks Stopped By The French

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, July 22.—(French Official)—Unsuccessful attacks were repulsed is reported in to-day's official statement. They occurred at Moulin-Soustouvent in the form of reconnaisance assaults, in artillery bombardments near Fumin and Fleury, an organized German attack south of Damloup, and a strong assault north of St. Dis. The communique announced that a French airsquadron on Friday dropped 115 heavy shells on Metzsablon in the Vosges, doing great damage. A German aeroplane which sought to pursue the French attackers was brought down. One French aeroplane of the squadron has so far failed to return.

Deutschland Is Waiting For Bremen

Special to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, July 22.—After the German sub-sea freighter, Deutschland had failed to take advantage of a terrible lightning and rain storm to get away from her slimy Patapsco shelter early to-day, the belief grew to the conviction that she awaits the coming of her sister ship the Bremen. The latter is said to be taking no chances with the Allied patrol, but instead is reported to be convoyed by fighting submarines.

BERLIN, July 22.—The German authorities have ordered the release of the British steamer Adam, captured by a German torpedo boat, since investigation disclosed the fact that the vessel was captured within Swedish territorial waters.

Foe Tries To Bluff Roumania

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 22.—Rumours persist that Roumania will enter the war by mid-August, but there is no confirmation of such a report in official circles.

Major Moraht, the military critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, in German papers which have just reached London, warns Roumania not to tempt Providence in view of the present developments on the western front, together with the presence of Bulgaria in the rear, and the formidable nature of the Austrian defences.

Russians Continue Victorious Drive

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, July 22.—General Brusiloff's Russian troops to-day proceeded methodically on the way to the northern Galician border southward from Lusk. The Russian forces accomplished the feat of crossing the swollen rivers Lipa and Styr in the face of the enemy's fire and of wresting the Austrian positions on the farther bank from the enemy. The Austrians are surrendering in whole units.

The Galician border lies very near Verben, and it was confidently expected here to-day that the official statement would reveal Russian troops fighting on Austrian soil. In Petrograd there is interest intense in the news from General Kuropatkin's drive at General Von Hindenburg's from west and south of Riga. The Russian attackers have swept across three lines of German trenches. The first big batch of German prisoners have arrived at Riga.

Rejoicing over the success of the Russian drives from Riga and toward Galicia was added by the official news that the Grand Duke Nicholas' forces in the Caucasus had captured Gumushkhaneh, near Trebisond, a point of great strategic value.

COUNCIL SANCTIONS THE SCHOOL BOARD'S LATEST EXPENDITURE

Sum of $5,500 Voted For the Purpose of Making Necessary Repairs to the South Central School—Hose Purchased For the Fire Department —Opposed to Convention Trips

"A POOR EXCUSE"

A resolution from the Board of Education, asking for the sum of five thousand five hundred dollars, with which to make repairs to the South Central School, and purchase additional property for school purposes, was endorsed at last night's meeting of the City Council. The original by law setting aside the sum of fifteen thousand dollars for this purpose was rescinded. Members of the School Board who were present at the meeting said that the Board had reconsidered their original decision to make permanent repairs to the school as the Board had decided that a new school building would be required in a matter of a few years.

Ald. Dobbin wanted to know if any of the money was to be used to improve the ventilation of the Collegiate Institute. Mr. R. Denne, of the School Board, replied in the negative.

Mr. Eastwood, also of the School Board, said that the matter of ventilation at the Collegiate Institute was a vital question with the Board. Despite the painstaking measures that had been adopted to make the building suitable in every respect, it was found that the present system of ventilation was not workable. It was the intention of the School Board to provide the sum of twelve hundred dollars for this purpose.

Hose and Horses.

The Fire Department is short of hose and horses. A representative of a well-known rubber company found his way into the meeting last night, and his presence there apparently inspired the Aldermen to authorize the purchase of three hundred feet of hose.

Ald. Evans, chairman of the Fire, Water, and Light Committee of the City Council, insisted that the Council first secure prices from several of the leading firms. He also contended that the Chief of the Fire Department should be present in a judicial capacity. It was finally decided to purchase three hundred feet, subject to the approval of the chairman of the Committee and Fire Chief Howard.

Mayor Duffus rightfully contended that it was of little use looking at samples of hose, as the Council was not qualified to judge the relative qualities of samples of fire hose. It was something that was more in keeping with the experience of Fire Chief Howard. First grade quality hose was quoted at one dollar and five cents a foot.

Civic Economy.

Clause two of the report of the Fire, Water, and Light Committee reads as follows:

"That the Chairman of this Committee and the Fire Chief at-

MORE LOCAL MEN OFFICIALLY REPORTED PRISONERS OF WAR

Three Members of the Mounted Rifles Reported---59th Battalion Men Are Now With the 21st Battalion---Pte. Chas. Stenner's Arduous Exyerience--Pte. J. Sandbach Home From England---To-day's Military News.

Three more soldiers who left Peterborough last year with B Squadron, 8th C. M. R., are now officially reported as prisoners af wor. They had previously been reported missing. The three are: 113349, Pte. Robert H. Latimer; 113587, Pte. E. Runsteadtler, and 113282, Pte. H. G. Hitchman. All three enlisted here last summer with the Peterborough Squadron.

Pte. J. Sandbach, of the 39th Battalion, who left Peterborough with that unit early last year, arrived home last night from England, having been invalided on account of an attack of pneumonia and pleurisy.

The Kingston Standard says: A few days ago the 'Standard' printed a list of the very few officers left in the 21st Battalion which left Kingston in 1915, and now it develops that the battalion has been so badly broken in its long fight in the trenches that there are very few of the original members left. To make up for the large casualties in the 21st battalion, the 59th battalion which was organized in Barriefield camp last year, and sent to the front from Brockville last winter has been turned over to the 21st, with all the officers, excepting Lt.-Col. Dawson, Major Craig, and Captain Bawden. It is understood that the command of the 21st battalion has passed to Major Jones of Brockville, and Lt.-Col. W. St. Pierre Hughes has left the battalion, and has reported at Shorncliffe, where he will assume his new duties as Brig.-General in command of a Canadian brigade.

F. H. Dobbin, of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, has received the following list of separation allowances granted:

Dinah Custance, 14 Inverlea street.
Elizabeth King, 548 Downie street.
Janet E. Lancaster, Westwood, Ont.
Sarah F. Moran, 390 Rubidge street.

TORONTO, July 21.—Judging from the rate at which recruits are pouring into the ranks of the 236th Forestry Battalion, there will be just about three weeks yet in which men may catch a place on any non-fighting unit in this part of Canada. There is no doubt that there are hundreds of Canadians who, through family ties or consideration of their relatives, do not want to become part of a regular infantry or artillery unit, but who are still anxious to do something for their country, and who are finding an avenue for their patriotism through the non-combattant Forestry Battalion.

When the 236th Battalion was organized three weeks ago, and when the announcement was made that the men who joined this unit would be asked to engage in lumbering work in England and France rather than in fighting, it was intended to allot one company to the province of Ontario. But now recruiting in Ontario has been progressing so rapidly that one full company is to be allotted to Toronto alone, while a second company will be devoted to the rest of the province. More than 150 men have applied at the Toronto headquarters, 55 Queen street west, but out of these less than half have been accepted. Ottawa has made the fine showing of 115 men, and will doubtless have the honour of the second company from this province.

As to the three weeks left in which a man may catch a place on this very desirable unit, it will be remembered that Col. Smyth estimated six weeks as the period for bringing his battalion up to strength. Now it is assured that in half that period Ontario has furnished more than 250 of the 500 men allotted to her, and if the Western Provinces are recruiting in the same proportion it will be a case of hurry if a man is to become a member of the 236th. At the same time it is well to remember that this will doubtless be the last unit of its kind to be authorized in this district.

Pte. Chas. Stenner, the only Peterborough county man who left Canada with the original Princess Pats, has had rather a hard time since he put on the khaki. Early in the campaign Pte. Stenner took fever through drinking water from a pool in front of the trench caused by a shell explosion. Stenner crawled out on his hands and knees one night to get a drink from the hole in question. He was ill in hospital in England for a lon gtimee. About two months ago Pte. Stenner was wounded in the back wit hshrapnel. The missile laid along the spine and through the glands and the small of the back, making a wound four inches deep. Pte. Stenner had to be ope rated on and was unconscious from 10 a.m. one day until 10 a.m. the next.

Lieut.-Col. Jos. Mills, inspector of Supply and Transport for No. 2 Military district, is visiting his home, here. Col. Mills' two sons, Lieut. A. B. Mills and Sergt. Sam. Mills are both with the 235th Battalion at Bowmanville.

Two Peterborough officers are with the 109th Battalion, V. W Lancaster is the officer commanding A Company, while Lieut. Clarence Henry is a subaltern in C Company.

SOLDIERS' SON DROWNED IN THE RIVER LAST NIGHT

CO. QUARTERMASTER SERGT. B. TARGET, with the 93rd Battalion. He was formerly a member of the 57th Regiment.

Ray Guerin, Son of Private "Teddy" Guerin, Another Victim of Peterborough's Lack of Supervised Swimming---Body Not Yet Recovered.

RECENTLY PASSED EXAMS.

Ray Guerin, the twelve year old son of Private Adelard ("Teddy") Guerin, 101 Simcoe street, who is overseas with the 2nd Pioneer Battalion, was drowned in the Otonabee river last night shortly after six o'clock, off the east end of Sherbrooke street. At noon to-day the body had not been recovered by searching parties who had poled and dragged the river throughout the night.

After supper last night Ray left his home, happy and laughing at six o'clock to go swimming with his chum, Tommy Smith, 336 Water street. At 6.25 o'clock Chief Howard received a call to rush the pulmotor to the river at Sherbrooke street. In less than half an hour the boy's pleasure plunge had become a tragedy under exceptionally distressing circumstances.

No Public Swimming Place.

It was stated that boys had been chased by the police from the vicinity of the boat houses immediately north of the C.P.R. bridge. Hence these two boys skirted around from the end of Simcoe street to the "hog's back" or bank which had been thrown up in the dredging of the river some years ago. This long projection of gravel from the river bed extends south to a point opposite Sherbrooke street, and it was in this neighbourhood the boys took to the water. It was stated that the Guerin boy swam to and from a floating boom, and in his last return strokes became exhausted. Young Smith tried to help him but was grasped around the neck and barely managed to escape the hold. He then held on to the boom and stretching his body out shouted to his companion to grab his feet. But Guerin sank and did not reappear.

Many Searchers Out.

Two Italians on the spur line witnessed the fatality, but apparently were unable to swim. Chief Howard arrived early and remained until dark. At 7.45 o'clock he believed he saw a commotion in the water and called Alderman Geo. Duncan to the spot. The latter used grappling irons but without success. Many canoeists and divers were out, and at one time Mr. Ed. Files, Water street, exploded five charges of dynamite in different parts of the river, but the opinion prevailed that the body had been carried by the swift current down below the railway bridge.

A Large Family.

Ray Guerin was the oldest of a family of nine. He had recently passed into the Senior IV room at St. Peter's school and was regarded as a bright boy. His twelfth birthday was in March.

Private "Teddy" Guerin, his father, was widely known as a lineman with the Otonabee Light and Power Company.

It is a pathetic coincidence that this is the second drowning here in which the victims were both children of soldiers on active service.

It is apparent that this was an accident that might have happened anywhere, and yet to those who demand supervised, public swimming places, it presents another argument in support of their appeal. Just now the river is supposed to be closed to boys who, under no control, are regarded as nuisances. Hence the boys of necessity are forced to surreptitious swimming and will continue it while the present lamentable conditions obtain.

IRISH THEMSELVES SHOULD SETTLE THE IRISH QUESTION

By Curious Freak of Political Fortune the Orangemen and Nationalists Find Themselves Pleading for Same Remedy

FIND COMMON GROUND

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, July 22.—Three names wide apart, are joined to-day in Parliamentary warfare. Mesopotamia-Dardanelles-Ireland. The fact that brings such dis-similar elements together, is that in all three cases the same charges are made against the present ministry, namely: — Delay, procrastination, indecision, and divided counsels.

It is possible that Premier Asquith's extraordinary adroitness, especially in view of the terror caused by the thought of substituting for him in the middle of the war, another man of untried quantity, together with the universal respect his abilities command as acknowledged by all his former foes as well as friends, may save him once again at a time when his fate seems sealed. However, this has been his worst week in the House of Commons since the beginning of the war, many of his statements being received with derisive laughter from several parts of the House.

Extraordinary Delay.

This growing dissatisfaction found its climax in the extraordinary delays incident to the Irish negotiations. It is now three weeks since John Redmond immediately after Devlin's triumph at the Ulster Convention, signified his acceptance of the Lloyd George terms. In the interval, the only thing that has occurred is the speech of Lord Lansdowne. That speech threatened the whole settlement by its naked avowal of coercion not only in the interval until the new Irish Government came into existence, but also afterwards. The Irish Nationalists saw their new government reduced by this speech to a shadow with all real power in the hands of a military dictator and an English Executive.

Lloyd George Angry.

It is known that Lloyd George was angry and Premier Asquith disturbed by the speech, but although it was roundly denounced by Redmond, no repudiation came from Lansdowne. In the meantime, things in Ireland became worse instead of better. Disappointment over the delay and resentment of Lansdowne's speech, the general unrest caused by Maxwell's executions, and raids, were ready weapons in the hands of factional extremists who desired to destroy both the settlement and the Irish Party.

Suggestions also were made of modifications to the settlement which would have made it impossible of acceptance and Redmond working incessantly, though quietly, had to warn the Ministry in the strongest terms of the perils of the situation. It is not possible to say just what will be the final outcome for everything, both in and outside of the House of UNNECESSARY OFFICERS.

In the daily orders of the 109th Battalion published at Barriefield camp on July 19th, there appeared the names of twenty-one officers—two captains and nineteen subalterns—who have been struck off the strength of the Battalion. Many people might pass over this paragraph without a thought as to its significance. It simply means that these officers were supernumaries, officers carried over the established strength. What do the taxpayers thinp of it? Those twenty-one unnecessary officers have been drawing the pay of their rank, many of them since before last Christmas, costing the county about $1,000 a week swaggering around in officers' uniforms, and now that the battalion is leaving for overseas, being struck off the strength. At times it is said the 100th Battalion, Sam Hughes' Pets, carried thirty-five officers more than was necessary. Thousands of dollars of the people's money have been thrown away on the 100th Battalion or, rather, on a squad of officers who only had one chance in two of going overseas. And right in Sam Hughes' home town. Another little transaction for the Minister of Militia to explain.

NARROW DRIVING SURFACES FOR CITY STREETS.

Time and words, used in arguing that two and two make four would be wasted time and words, but not more than they would be wasted in argument to show the economy and benefit of narrowed driving surfaces for our city streets, so self-evident is the truth to a mind that uses itself for thinking. We city people have, sometimes, to go to the country for examples of good roads, and we can, with good warrant, go to beautiful Keene for a demonstration, not only of good roads, but also of the utility and practicability, of narrow driving surfaces.

The main street of the village is of the standard width of 66 feet. In the middle of it stretches a driving surface, well-crowned, well gravelled and smooth, almst, as a city pavement. Between this driving surface on either side is a stretch of turf reaching to the four foot concrete wharf. This grass belt, which is slightly hollowed, is provided with a sub-surface storm drain, with gratings at regular intervals. The turf is old and the pride of place and self respect of the aesthetic villagers keep it neatly and closely lawn-mowed; so that from one end of the village to the other is a beautiful margin of green, velvetty old turf of a better quality than the average city lawn.

This mid-street belt of driving surface, is of an average width of twenty feet, and proves to be amply sufficient for the traffic of a thickly peopled countryside and the no insignificant traffic between the Grand Trunk railway station and the heart of the village—the business section—where, of course, the driving surface widens.

This twenty-feet width of driving surface is enough for traffic and the passing of meeting vehicles. Being narrow it is easily kept in its prime condition, which makes it a joy to city autoists who, as they strike this beautiful stretch of highway, flanked by velvety turf and lusty street trees, take off a delighted burst of speed, in sheer enjoyment of a piece of good road—or to astonish the natives and raise the dust, the only drawback to a perfect street, and an argument for the use of street oil.

tain: and as a matter of fact, the actual This example of the practicability of narrow driving surfaces is quoted to show that in practical administration; city corporations do not know it all, and do not adopt the better way. Of course a wide street allowance is desirable. It gives plenty of open space between the lines of houses. Open spaces are one of the conditions that make London, the Great, the healthiest city in the world, with the lowest death rate.

But at the same time the width of driving surface, in the residence streets of Peterborough, need not be so wide as they are. They are more costly to build, to drain and maintual driving surface used is not any wider than twenty-foot road surface in the main street of Keene.

Its of no use to argue that narrow driving surfaces for Peterborough residential streets are the better; there is no need to argue it for the aldermen know it, and in moments of candour, acknowledge it.

The question, if the question is admitted, is well worth studying. The present "bunch' of aldermen will, in their time, pass away to be succeeded by others. But the city will remain and grow and be traversed by good or bad streets. And whether they will be good streets or continue to be bad streets, will depend very much upon the public spirit and enterprise of the aldermen of to-day or of the immediate future—will depend upon whether they adopt the rational, sensible and economic way of providing narrow driving surfaces for our streets, such as can more cheaply be made, more cheaply maintained, and be in every way satisfactory for their real purpose, which is the comfortable use of wheeled vehicles.

No man of sense would put a six-foot entrance door to his house when one of three feet would be ample, and, being of oak, would cost half less. No corporation of sense will maintain or tolerate forty feet driving surfaces on residential streets when half the width would be ample and of proportionately less cost.

And cost is a live matter, as the time for taxes comes near. It won't make the taxpayer pay any more promptly or willingly, when he reflects that half the taxes he pays for street purposes will be wasted in maintaining—or not maintaining properly—street driving surfaces, double, or nearly double, the width necessary.

THE POT OF GOLD AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW.

The fancied pot of gold at the end of the rainbow has long been a type of the fallacies of hope, or reality of delusion, of children and of the unreasoning and easily duped, but there is a case of a real, or effective, pot of gold at the end of this Rainbow—that is at the end of the voyage of the steamer Rainbow, which terminated at Keene on Friday evening, July 14th. She came down the Otonabee river and up the Indian river to Keene dragging, in her winding wake, the "paalce barge," a tubby reminder of the popular excursions of by-gone days. The scow was laden to the water line with brick and tile from the Curtis Bros.' yards. The tile, consigned to farmers in the viciniity, being the bulk of the cargo. And the tile carried the pot of gold, is a figurative, and largely literal, sense.

Several farmer's teams were camped on the government wharf—for the Indian river is a branch artery of the great Trent Canal system—waiting to be loaded with tile. The tile were piled on the scow deck, which had often pulsated to the rythmic impulse of the dancing feet of young men and maidens.

An intelligent farmer who was one of these unloading the tile, when he had set down his empty barrow under the wooden awning of the barge, was asked by a holiday lounger—

"I suppose you have no doubt of the value of tile draining?"

"Not the least in the world," he answered with an aggressive emphasis, as if he resented the idea of any doubt; "it pays every time."

Then, wiping his perspiring forehead with the anterior aspect of his shirt sleeve, he straightened his back and straightway launched into a disquisition on the benefits of tile draining of farm lands. His arguments and explanations of the way it worked, were rather unnecessary, for he concluded with the assertion that abundant practical proof consisted in his experience and that of others.

"Pay the interest on the cost?" "I should think it did, and the principle, too; besides giving big crop dividends. Why, tile draining makes land. I know a piece of ground that was fallowed for fifty years—never grew a crop—it was too wet and soggy to work. It was tile-drained and the next season it grew a splendid crop. Why, in the past fifty years, on that piece of ground, enough crop yield was lost to pay for tile-draining it forty times over. We had an example this wet season. On tile-drained grounds there are splendid crops, in spite of the wet. But there are in Otonabee thousands of acres of undrained land, where it was too wet to put in seed. These farmers have lost almost as much in one season as would have paid for tile draining this land (with good crop results this season), not to speak of the profits for years to come. Yes, I believe in tile draining; it pays every time. It is not only good for wet seasons, but for dry seasons. In a dry spell the land is much more friable, more easily worked, and gives better crops. Some badly-fooled farmers say they cant afford to put down tile drains. I say, and, it is a fact, they can't afford not to do it, and—"

Here his flow of tile drain eloquence was interrupted by a voice from the shore—

"Say, Ned, if you don't hurry up we shan't get these tile unloaded before dinner time."

Here we have the proof that the pot of gold—in the shape of golden grain—lies at the end of the rainbow—Burnett's "Rainbow"—that towed the scow-load of drain tile to Keene—a type and figure of the golden results that come from underdraining farm lands.

We hear a great deal these days of "preparedness" for war. The farmers should provide preparedness for peace and profit. The greatest single item of preparedness is represented by underdraining his farm lands. He is thereby laying down a permanent line of defence against the assaults of wet as well as drought, and he is sure of winning the victory of humanly certain and good crops. No one, these days, can be found to deny the benefits of underdraining. The results show themselves in the early seeding—especially this year—the splendid stand in the field and the rich stream of golden grain that pours from the spout of the threshing mill. The farmer who underdrains his farm shows the enterprise that brings success and illustrates, as well as emphasizes the assertion, that it is the good farmer—the thoughtful, foreseeing farmer—that, one season with another, always has good crops, and that it is the poor farmer, the careless, the unforeseeing farmer, who blames Providence for poor crops, that are the harvest of his own improvidepce and lack of enterprise.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

Of the many important questions which the National Liberal Advisory Committee has considered in its three day session in Ottawa, the one that the public at large will be most pleased to see given attention is that of the treatment of returned soldiers. There are many who do not interest themselves to any great extent in the difficult problems which affect the state as a state, forgetting that that which concerns the nation concerns every citizen, but all of us are interested in that which affects those of our fellowmen who have made great sacrifices as soldiers in the spirit of patriotism.

The sub-committee under the chairman ship of Mr. Hal B. McGiverin foresees the largeness of the problem of caring for the returned soldiers. It is awake to the fact that the enactment of legislation providing for pensions does not commence to solve that problem. As this committee sets out in its resolutions, Canada's obligations to returned soldiers and to the dependents of those who have died or been incapacitated cannot be adequately discharged by the provision of pensions. It is the duty of the nation, through its government, to exercise a parental guardianship over those who have made the sacrifice for the country and to see that they suffer as little as possible from having made the sacrifice

As to the distribution of the pensions, the sub-committee urges the taking of a thorough census of the returned soldiers, and of all particulars concerning them. To understand how important this is, it is only necessary to recall the farcical way in which the Fenian raid pensions were distributed.

(Mr. McGiverin is to be commended for the energetic and thorough manner in which he and his committee have gone into this important question of relief for the returned soldiers. —Ottawa Free Press.

MR. ROGERS ON NAVAL MATTERS.

The effrontery of the Hon. Robert Rogers is staggering. Speaking at a convention of Manitoba Conservatives this week, he remarked, in a speech mainly devoted to abuse of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that through the Liberal party Canada had to take second place to Australia in naval aid to the Empire!

Wht an audacious perversion of the facts! The truth is that Canada agreed with Australia to establish a local navy, and did so with the approval of the present Premier and the party he headed in opposition. For political purposes, and in order to capture the votes of men who would shoot holes in the British flag," Sir Robert Borden repudiated his agreement on the naval question. Having got into power after repudiating that agreement, he had to do something in the way of naval aid. Therefore, in an attempt to regain his self-respect and please that portion of the population who are not Nationalists, he proposed his famous "temporary" measure by which the Government would evade responsibility by handing over a money contribution to the British Admiralty. The Senate, which has been blamed for vetoing the contribution, did not veto it. It merely asked for the proviso that this proposal should be submitted to the people of Canada for their approval. Rather than submit it to the people, Sir Robert Borden deliberately killed it.

Had the Borden Government proceeded to put the Laurier Naval Act into effect, at the outbreak of war they would have had a navy similar to that of Australia to place at the disposal of the British Admiralty. Instead of that, all they had to offer was two cruisers which had been purchased by the Laurier Government, and which, when war broke out, were found to have been put out of commission by the Borden Government. And yet Mr. Rogers has the effrontery to declare that it was owing to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers that Canada has to take second place to Australia in naval matters! The Laurier Naval Act has not yet been repealed!—Montreal Herald.

ALL THIS BOTHER.

The Salvation Army is perhaps the best beggar in the world, and for the best of causes. General Booth has been telling a good story of a poor woman who insisted upon giving £100 to the Army funds. Having assured himself that the woman had acquired the money honestly, he accepted it, after much hesitation, on condition she asked for it back again if she needed it.

"Ah," said the woman, "If your father what's in heaven had been here he wouldn't have made all this bother about it."

There is no fault so hard to overcome as the hasty temper. We may make any number of good resolutions and then the first time we have any provocation away we go without an instant's warning and before we realise what we are doing the unkind words have been spoken and no matter how much regret we feel that cannot be unsaid.

PATRIOTISM

Patriotism, like Charity, should begin at home. The man who is willing at any time to protect his country against foreign foes should be willing AT ALL TIMES to protect his Family against such common foes as Poverty, Privation and Suffering.

A Life Insurance Company cannot take the place of a Husband.

BUT---

It can preserve the family from want.
It can lighten their load of care.
It can build a barrier against adversity.
It can strengthen the foundation of the home.
It can certify to a man's affectionate regard for his family.
It can place his widow beyond the need of carrying for support.
It can add to a man's years by freeing him from anxiety.
It can enhance the respect and esteem of the public and of his wife and children for him.

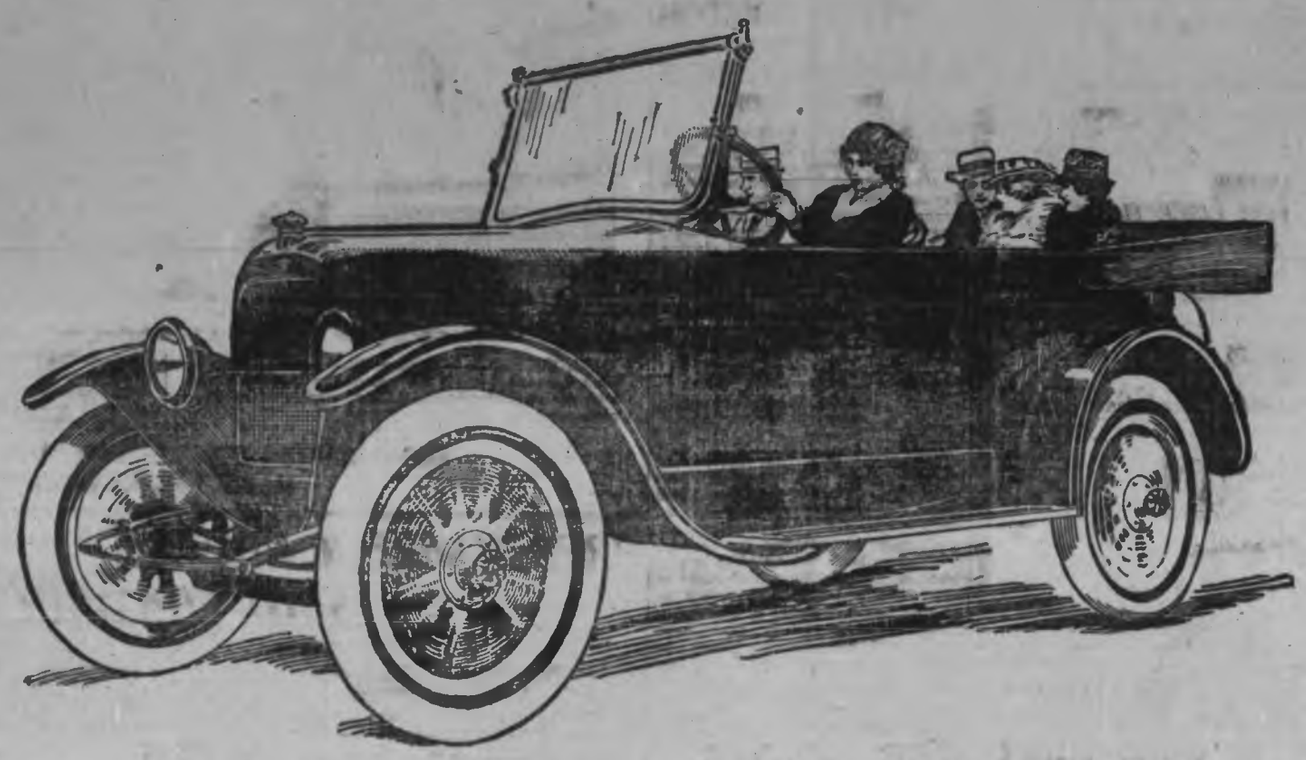
THE CAR WITH THE HALF MILLION DOLLAR MOTOR



Benjamin Briscoe's Life's Masterpiece
Read the Story of "The Half Million Dollar Motor."

At last the car built in Canada for Canadians, for the man of everyday income—the car that removes the last obstacle in the way of your coming into your heart's desire and owning a motor car that carries with it pride and happiness of possession.

A car that is so beautiful, so strong, so light, so powerful and withal so economical that it brings motoring within reach of thousands who heretofore have not been able to obtain the class of car they wanted at the price they wanted to pay.

Just as Benjamin Briscoe created a new era in motordom when he brought out the Briscoe Four-38 and Eight-38, so too, motor history begins all over again with the coming of the Briscoe Four-24 at $825, the car with the half millon dollar motor.

The Half Million Dollar Motor is the longest long-stroke motor in the world, 3⅛ inch bore to 5⅛ inch stroke—that's why the Briscoe Four-24 made 32 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

104 inch Wheel Base—Demountable Rims—Briscoe Line 5 Passenger Touring Body—Briscoe Line 4 Passenger Roadster Body—Exceptional Body-room and Leg-room—Full Elliptic Springs—Floating Type Rear Axle—Splitdorf Electric Lighting and Starting—Completely Equipped.

Five Passenger Touring,—Four Passenger Roadster,—$825.

It is a car to give you everything you could ask for in the way of style, attractiveness, comfort and equipment, with the minimum cost of upkeep for tires and gasoline.

Look up the Briscoe dealer and see this new Briscoe creation—the Four-24.

Write for copy of "The Half Million Dollar Motor" by Benjamin Briscoe. There are wonderful facts, little pathetic happenings and sunny spots of piquant humor. It's a real story written by a real man with the creative and artistic temperaments combined—probably the greatest ever written about a motor car. Mailed free on request.

Briscoe 8—38
Touring or Roadster
$1185

—the de Luxe Eight of super-power—the aristocrat of motordom. For sheer beauty of outline, luxury of appointment and even flow of power, the Briscoe Eight-38 leaves nothing to be desired.

114-inch wheel base—French stream line body—full cantilever rear spring suspension—and every refinement that comfort suggests.

The price includes every accessory.

Briscoe 4—38
Touring or Roadster
$975

The Car which was adopted by the Canadian Government for the Light Car Requirements of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

The motor is exceptionally smooth, efficient and sturdy—a veritable brute for power.

Completely equipped—not a dollar to spend for extras.

A Wonderful Proposition for Dealers

The Briscoe Cars are the greatest combination of light cars that any dealer in Canada can handle. First of all, they are Canadian-built cars—built right here in the Briscoe factories in Brockville.

Then, consider the price range.

Here's the new Four-24 at $825—the car for the average family.

Then—the Four-38 at $975—with longer wheel base and larger motor.

And the Eight-38 at $1185. the first Eight made in Canada, and the car that has paralyzed "light six" competition.

With the Briscoe Agency, you have Cars to suit practically every buyer,—and powerful advertising to help you create sales. Write, Phone or wire, or better still, come and see for yourself.

"Aged Sisters" She Aided In France Proved German Spies

NEW YORK, July 21. — Mrs. J. Randolph Marshall, sister-in-law of Mr. Walter H. Marshall, manager of the Vanderbilt, and Mr. Newton Marshall, assistant manager of the McAlpin, declared at the latter hotel that she had seen much of the effects of the war at close range during a few months she passed with an American woman in Paris.

"Like almost every other householder in the city," said Mrs. Marshall, "who could possibly afford it, we decided to house some of the refugees who flocked to Paris from the villages of the north. My friend and I set out one morning to pick out two of the most need), and we came across two aged women huddled close to each other on the curb. Their heads were covered with threadbare shawls. They wept bitterly when we told them that they could have a home with us. Before they consented to come, though, they made us promise that they would not be separated. All went well, although the widowed sisters, as we knew them, kept much to themselves. One of the maids one day went up one morning and was horrified to see one of the dear aged widows in the act of shaving, having carelessly left the door open. The maid told my friend and she sent for a policeman. Not long afterward the house was the scene of a thrilling raid, for our refugees turned out to be German spies."

KANSAS CRIMINALS AVERAGE $6.00 A YEAR.

Topeka, Kansas, July 21.—The thieves of Kansas, a fine body of men have decided that a life of crime in the Sunflower state will never ruin the criminal waist line. By actual statistics they have learned that it is practically impossible for a burglar, embezzler, a robber (highway or bank) a thief (sneak or brazen, or a pickpocket on land or sea to make a decent living out of the Kansas commonwealth. Six dollars a year is shown to be the height of soft pickings in this terrible climate.

John Durand, a prisoner in the Kansas penitentiary, has estimated the entire matter in black and white and has seven years left to experiment with the sliding scale. After talking with all of the 500 prisoners copped for careless conduct with strangers' money Durand retired to a small room equipped with bars to prevent interruption and developed the fact that the big six before mentioned is what the hard working criminal gets free and clear before they place him in the consesvatory.

The Durand flock of figures shows that the average haul is $39 and that an average of $21 of this is recovered by the owners before the chase is completed. The $21 remaining is all that pays the arrested man for the three and a half years' term that ordinarily awaits him. Counting good behaviour allowance on time, his average income is then $6 a year.

Legislation was once threatened to prevent Toronto holding an Exhibition except in years specified by the Ontario Government. Fortunately, the matter never reached the House.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Young Lad Was Found Lying at the Bottom of the River

Hugh Messerve, son of Mr. C. Messerve, general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday. It appears that he fell into the water near the T. A. S. park, and when discovered by his father was lying at the bottom of the water. He had been missed for several minutes when a search was instituted with the above result.

LIMBLESS SOLDIERS

Clever Feats Done With New Scientific Devices

British soldiers who have lost an arm in the war are doing some amazing feats. Indeed, with the artificial limbs now offered, it is possible for a persevering man to almost equal nature. Queen Mary Auxiliary Hospital at Roehampton is exclusively for disabled soldiers and sailors. The King and Queen visited this institution founded by Mrs. Gwynne Holdord, and were deeply impressed. At one of the branches the King saw a Tommy working and found that though he had lost an arm and leg at Armentieres, he is now able to do useful work. With a special clip taking the place of a dummy right hand he used a variety of tools under the King's inspection, and afterward took a match from a box and lighted it with dexterity and ease.

"Can you shake hands?" asked the Queen of an armless private of the First West Ontario Regiment. "Try me, your majesty," promptly replied the Canadian. The Queen shook hands with him, laughing merrily at the convincing grip of the artificial hand.

Professor Laverau showed the French Academy of Science a remarkable substitute for a missing arm invented by Professor Aurar. The arm hand and fingers are of aluminum and very light. With a glove on it is almost impossible to perceive the limb is artificial. Certain movements of the thorax acting on fine steel wires give to the hand and arm almost all the movements of the natural limb. Mutilated soldiers equipped with this device played the violin, made cigarettes and gave out change for a banknote before the Academy.

A pupil of the London School of Art went out to the front early in the war and lost the use of his right hand. He has now taught himself to draw with his left hand and his work is considered as good as he ever did with his right.

FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Nova Scotia Government Proposed Many Practical Measures

The Murray Government of Nova Scotia announced that free vocational training will be given disabled soldiers at the Nova Scotia Technical College, and expert training in farming to physically fit soldiers at the Nova Scotia Agricultural College. When the soldier is ready to purchase a farm eighty per cent. of the value of the farm may be loaned him, if necessary, for the purchase of property, stock, and implements. The soldier will have the expert guidance of a skilled farm inspector in purchasing, surveying, and cultivating his farm. Farmers' co-operative societies will be developed. These organizations will enable all farmers to purchase their seeds, fertiliser, implements, and feeds at the lowest wholesale prices; also to transport and sell their products co-operatively without recourse to middlemen.

Rugby Player-officers

Jack Maynard, twice captain of Toronto University rugby teams; Jack Lash and Alex. Snively, who also figured on champion rugby teams at 'Varsity, were officers in the 13nd Battalion (Highlanders), who left Toronto. On the final medical inspection of their battalion only two were declared unfit for overseas.

Peer's Heirs Die

The death of Lord Queenington, the only son and heir of Lord and Lady St. Aldwyn, who was killed at the front, removed the forty-ninth heir to a peerage and the eighth member of the House of Commons since the war began. This is further proof of the willingness with which members of the aristocracy have sacrificed lives in their country's cause. The Earl St. Aldwyn followed his son to the grave within one week of the death of the former. The title, it is understood, became extinct.

Colonels Edmund J. Phippe-Hornby, V.C., and Herbert K. Jackson were gazetted temporary brigadier-generals (Royal Artillery).

Two million gallons of rum, costing $1,500,000, have been purchased for the British army since the outbreak of war.

Why We Guarantee Holeproof Hosiery

The choicest of Japan's silk and the finest and longest cotton fibre grown in Egypt are used in their manufacture.

Then the secret process of mercerizing the yarns adds 22% in strength and it gives the thread a lasting lustre. The sulphur dyes applied by experts make Holeproof Hosiery stronger still.

Cheap dyes rot the yarn and are apt to injure your feet. The dyes used in Holeproof Hosiery do not turn grey. In ways like these and not by using coarse materials, Holeproof Hosiery wear longest and retain their style and shapeliness. They are fine and soft and fit perfectly.

Such perfect Hosiery would be far more expensive except for the tremendous output of the factory. They are manufactured by the million of pairs which keeps the cost down to its present medium standard for High Class Hosiery.

THE GUARANTEE FOR SILK HOSE

We guarantee that 3 pair of Holeproof Silk Hose will need no darning for 3 months. If they should we agree to replace them with new ones.

Price per box—

LEECHES PASSED THROUGH WATER TAP

Couple Were Apprehended By a London Street Resident

Mr. George Simpson, 411½ London Street, has in his possession a couple of leeches that passed through the water tap in his house. One made its debut last evening, and was followed by another one this morning. These aquatic blood-sucking worms are from two to three inches long, and dark in appearance. This is not the first time that leeches have passed through the taps of local householders, and while they are not considered with apprehension by the health authorities, they tend to disturb the peace of mind of the average water consumer.

Have Returned From Montreal

Mr. Robert Fair Was a Visitor to Barriefield Camp

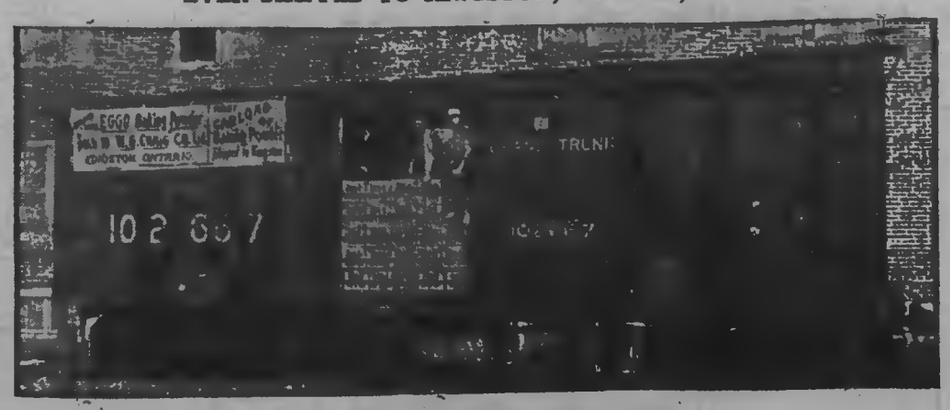
Mr. Robert Fair of this city, in company with Mr. J. C. Kells of Millbrook, have returned from a motor trip to Montreal. On their way back they stopped at Kingston, and through the courtesy of Col. Robert Stuart, formerly of Peterborough, were given an opportunity of visiting Barriefield Camp. Captain James of Bowmanville, was also a guest of Col. Stuart's on that occasion.

COURTLAND YOUTH MISSING; PARENTS ASKS POLICE HELP

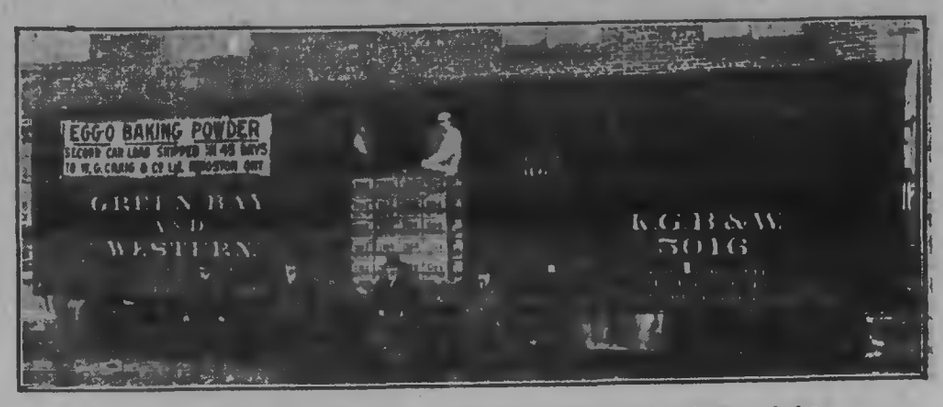
TILLSONBURG, July 22. — The whereabouts of Earl, son of Mr. and Mrs. John House of Courtland, still remains a mystery and his folks are much troubled over his absence. Last Wednesday he attended the Orange celebration here, but failed to return home at night. He was thought to have gone to some relatives, but as nothing had been heard of him up to Thursday noon notices have been sent out to all Canadian cities by Chief Patton to try and locate the lad.

It is possible that he has enlisted, although only 16 years of age. He is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 170 pounds and is well developed. Only on Thursday night his name appeared at the head of Delhi entrance examinations.

THE FIRST FULL CARLOAD OF BAKING POWDER EVER SHIPPED TO KINGSTON, NOV. 19, 1915



AND ANOTHER FOLLOWED, JUNE 2nd, 1916



And Last Friday, July 14th, 1916, a Third Carload was shipped to the same dealer.

This is EVIDENCE of Quality. Black Hand methods of firms that dare not sign their names to their attacks are futile against such evidence of public confidence and popular approval.

Egg-o Baking Powder is pure, safe, economical. It makes wholesome food and is an unsurpassed leavening agent. The Demonstration of Egg-o at Connal & Sons, George St., last week proved to hundreds of Peterboro people the superiority of Egg-o.

Suspicion Lurks That Ald. McIntyre Has Not Overlooked Oiling Many Streets In His Ward

A motor ride through the city leaves the impression that it is decidedly to the advantage of award to have one of its aldermen chairman of the Board of Works. For instance, after roughly checking over the length of streets that have been oiled this summer, there is a lurking suspicion that the North Ward has not been stinted. Water street is oiled all the way to the Smith boundary, and for a long stretch of this street there are houses on only one side of it. And yet the south ward, by way of comparison, has begged for oil on Park street for the comfort of the hundreds of workmen who frequent this street on their way to and from work. Scan Ald. A. A. McIntyre's ward and you'll find that he had not overlooked his neighbours and the voters of his ward. If he has given his own section any preference he is only following the discriminating practice that is bound up with the idea of the ward system of government. Ald. Saunders has begged for more oil or water in his ward, while Water street north was long since completely treated. It is a regrettable fact that citizens who benefit by the ward system boast of its alleged justice when they are fully aware that other wards are less fortunate. If Ald. McIntyre was inclined to consider the interests of the north ward first and before all, he is only following an established custom. It will be along time before certain streets are oiled for the simple reason that this work falls into a rut like most others, and any departure in favour of other streets would be frowned upon as a precedent.

If Ald. Saunders, for example, applied for oil on Chamberlen street, the question would be naturally (?) put to him. "Has it been oiled before." And it hasn't, therefore nothing doing. The first streets to be oiled are those treated last year. Doubtless the benefits of previous applications of oil urge that they be renewed to maintain the improved conditions of these streets. But this attitude presents almost a hopeless prospect to Perry or Parnell streets for instance. In short, "Them that has, gets." And the tantalizing fact sticks like a burr under the collar of the ratepayer residing on the dusty receives but little benefit from it receives but little benefit from it. The contention is advanced that only main thoroughfares are oiled first. Yet King street west of Park, and many others that might be named, are by no means arteries of traffic. As a Chamberlen street man said yesterday, it aggravates a ratepayer to realise that he is paying for oil which benefits others and of which he doesn't get even the odour.

tend the Fire Chiefs' Convention at Windsor in August."

Ald. Duncan asked that this clause be cut out. He said that it was not in keeping with the present parsimonious policy of the Council. Ald. Duncan characterized the trip as a "pleasure jaunt." We started out the year by reducing expenditures, and even went so far as to cut salaries," said Ald. Duncan. I am opposed to convention trips of any kind, he added.

Ald. Edgar assured his colleague that the Fire Chief and Ald. Edgar would not get information relative to a motor-driven fire truck any cheaper than by attending the convention in Windsor.

"That is a poor excuse," said Ald. Duncan. "You got all the information relative to motor trucks years ago. You had a machine down here on trial right in the snow season."

Ald. Edgar—"It's too bad you were not at the meeting to give us that information."

Mayor Opposed.

Mayor Duffus supported the contention of Ald. Duncan. He was opposed to convention trips of any kind this year. A resolution authorizing Ald. Evans and the Fire Chief to attend the convention was passed on the following division:

Yeas—Saunders, Edgar, Dobbin, McIntyre, Weir, Evans—6.

Nays—Mayor Duffus, Duncan, Langford—3.

"Who gave the Chief permission to go to Lindsay last Saturday?" enquired Ald. Duncan.

Ald. Evans—"I did. A deputation from this Council was in Lindsay on that date for the purpose of waiting upon Sir Sam Hughes, and it was agreed that it would be good business to take the Fire Chief along with a view of inspecting the motor truck installed recently in the Lindsay Fire Department."

THE HARDWARE AND METAL MARKET

A number of important price changes have taken place in hardware lines during the past week. Lanterns have advanced 75 cents per dozen. Owing to the recent advance in wire rods, quotations on some lines of wire fencing have been withdrawn. Advances have taken place in the prices on smooth steel wire, hay wire in coils. Price advances have also gone into effect on hand saws, emery cloth, chisels, English galvanized sheets, toe calks, small arm ammunition, empty shot shells. Price declines have taken place on Canadian and American-made galvanized sheets. Prices on most lines of firearms have been temporarily withdrawn. It is expected that the new prices when issued will be considerably higher than those formerly in effect. The ingot metals are still generally weak, with a further decline to note on tin. Spelter is firmer in the primary markets. Business in paint lines continues in fair volume. It has been generally agreed to extend present prices on lead and putty until August 31, in the case of the former and October 1 in the case of the latter. Orders for paint to the extent of twenty or thirty thousand gallons has been placed with Canadian paint firms by an Eastern car manufacturer. The paint will be used on cars which are being manufactured for a French railway. Another order for ten or fifteen thousand gallons will be placed within the next six or eight weeks. Business generally continues good. There is a good demand for summer hardware lines. Retailers are buying carefully.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IS TO CONTINUE

To the Editor of The Daily Examiner

Dear Sir,—A large and representative meeting of the Executive of the organization for continuing the Presbyterian Church in Canada, was held in Knox Church, Toronto, July 6th. Communications were received from all parts of the Dominion, all expressing a more resolute determination on the part of the people to continue the Presbyterian Church in Canada, in unity and harmony, as heretofore, with all other Evangelical Churches. After lengthened conference the following statement was agreed upon:

Inasmuch as the Presbyterian Church in Canada consists of its communicant membership, voluntarily banded together on the Banks basis of certain standards of doctrine, and church government, while the members of the General Assembly and of other Church Courts are but the servants of the Church chosen by the people to carry on work of the Church, within the Church, and on behalf of the Church, in accordance with those standards, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and are pledged in their ordination vows to such a course, so long as they remain ministers or elders of the Presbyterian Church.

Inasmuch as the General Assembly, in resolving, by a majority to terminate the separate existence of the Presbyterian Church in Canada as a member of the world-wide Presbyterin family, and to merge it into a new organization, has exceeded its rights and powers, and its decision in therefore merely the expression of the individual opinion of the members of the Assembly who thus voted, and is of no binding authority upon any others.

Inasmuch as those members of the Assembly who thus voted, being less than one-seventh of the ministers of our Church, and less than one fiftieth part of the elders of our Church, and representing the expressed desire and vote of only one-third of the communicant membership of our Church—have stated their purpose of seeking legislation to take away, by force of law, the name and civil rights and property of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and transfer the same to a new Church organization.

It is therefore recommended to all who do not approve of the unlawful action of the majority of the Assembly, that, in accordance with the protest made to the Assembly by those who voted against such unlawful action, said action of the Assembly be disregarded, that the Presbyterian Church in Canada be continued, and that all proper steps be taken to protect the interests and rights of the people as members of the Presbyterian Church.

Committees were appointed to make arrangements for a General Convocation in Toronto, early in September, of those who purpose continuing the Presbyterian Church.

As the action of the Assembly has made necessary the duty of defending our own Church, involving considerable expediture, those who wish our Church to continue are asked to share the burden, and to send their contributions for the same, as soon as possible, to the Treasurer, Mr. C. S. McDonald, 12 Queen street, East, Toronto.

(Signed) JOHN PENMAN, Chairman.
T. WARDLAW TAYLOR, Secretary.

Doctors Find Iron and Phosphorous Prolongs Life of Nervous People 25 Years

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorous is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking nervous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Bonized Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well sleep well, work well, digest well look well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Bonized Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Bonized Phosphorus with iron does not contain an antom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of F. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

Britisd Cabinet and the Irish Question

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 22.—For two and a half hours to-day the Cabinet discussed the Irish question and adjourned after authorizing Premier Asquith to acquaint John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, with the course of action proposed by the Government on Redmond's ultimatum that there must be an immediate settlemet of the Home Rule question. At the same time the Irish party members in the Commons met for two hours and adjourned till Monday.

Local Motorist Is Fined Five Dollars

The charge against the local motorist who was accused of having his rear light not burning was resumed at this morning's Police Court, and after hearing all the evidence, His Worship imposed a fine of five dollars. The evidence of two police officers was taken, and showed that the light was not burning at 8.52 p.m. on Tuesday last. The owner of the car was very strong in his contention that his rear light was burning. His theory was that a strong light extinguishes and lessens the effects of a weaker light, and he contended that the eyes of the local police were not good enough to see whether a rear light was burning when George Street Hydro rays were blooming.

Two more blacklisters appeared on charges of imbibing in the forbidden liquid and were assessed the customary ten dollars. One of the two did not appear, but the case proceeded without him, and he was fined.

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin Is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which can be had at any drugstore. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles. Gradually, the entire cuticle is absorbed, without pain or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness and sparkling beauty obtainable in no other way.

If the heat tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of powdered saxolite dissolve in half a pint of witch-hazel and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making you look years younger.

A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a slovenly, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar not buttoned and her skirt is torn, she cannot be liked. Learn to be neat and when you have formed it, it will almost take care of itself.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

PRISONERS OF WAR FUND.

It is with sincere pleasure that we have been told of several gifts to this fund which have been received by Miss Emma Morrow, the treasurer of the Society. St. Andrew's Women's Patriotic Society has sent a splendid donation of 50 dollars.

This, along with other donations, which will be acknowledged in the newspapers next month, will go towards sending parcels, not only of food but clothing, to the Peterboro boys who are prisoners of war. Mrs. Matthews and Mrs. Allan visited all the homes of prisoners whose names they received, so as to make certain that the number, rank, camp, etc., were correctly given. So in due time the Peterboro boys will be cheered by receiving regular parcels sent by the Red Cross Society of their home town. We wish no Peterboro boy to be overlooked, and hope their friends will send in full particulars to the Examiner, which is kindly co-operating in this matter and giving all the help possible.

We would be glad if someone would send us the required information regarding Pte. Arthur Pritchard and Pte. Alex. Bennie; also Lance Corporal Drummond.

We have not their home addresses so cannot get particulars as to the camp and place where they are prisoners, so we hope relatives and friends of these men will be kind enough to send the required particulars.

The following are three acknowledgments of parcels received. The boys get them regularly and intact but have to open them in the presence of some official.

Giessen.—I received my first parcel of food through the society on Nov. 25, and ever since they have been coming regularly. Have also had shirts, underwear, socks, gloves, muffler, blanket, overcoat, sweater and a pair of slippers. All working with me join in thanking the Red Cross for its kindness.

"I am most thankful for the parcels that you so kindly sent me. I have received three and I may say that they arrived in good condition. You can imagine my thoughts when they arrived and glad to see that some people do not forget the unfortunate ones. I am in fairly good health myself, hoping that you are enjoying the same."

"Many thanks for the beautiful parcel that you sent me, and can't express in writing how much it was appreciated. I have been moved from Meschede, Giessen. My new address being on the top of this card."

Any subscriptions towards this fund will be gladly received for in trying to make sure that none of our Peterboro boys are in want of food while prisoners in Germany, we feel sure of the sympathy of all.

It is really wonderful how literally everything possible is being done for the wounded, sick and convalescent soldier, not only are the most skilful of surgeons and doctors ever ready to do their utmost to save a limb, or perform the most delicate of operations on his behalf, but also splendidly trained nurses are ready to do their part towards alleviating pain and suffering, and to aid in restoring him to health. The British and Canadian people have provided hospitals perfectly equipped to the smallest detail along every line, beautifully situated, and wanting in nothing that human skill and foresight can provide. Then when convalescent, the soldier is sent to one of the homes until completly recovered, and where every comfort and amusement is provided for his entertainment.

At the King's Canadian Red Cross Hospital, they have their own theatre, billiard hall and recreation room, furnished as comfortably and completely as is Cliveden, which is acknowledged by all the medical military authorities who have visited it, to be well nigh perfect.

We have been reading recently the old and tragic story of Napoleon's army, of its return from Moscow to France, one of the greatest military tragedies in history. Napoleon set out to invade Russia in the spring of 1812

In the month of June 600,000 men crossed the River Niemen; of this army 20,000 famished, frost-bitten spectres staggered across the bridge of Koono, in the month of December.

They left Moscow on the 19th of October light hearted and gay, for they were returning to their beloved France, but the God of the Seasons caused the snow to fall on the 29th of that month (one month sooner than usual) and they never saw the green ground again until what was left of them crossed the valley of the Rhine. Never such cold, never such hunger—it seemed as though the God of Russia cried vengeance on them, and presently the trail of the army could be followed by the dead and the dying it shed upon the march.

One cannot read of past wars without endeavoring to contrast them with the present awful struggle, and there seems to have been much of the same vain glorious spirit, and lust for world power in Napoleon as in the Kaiser and his military advisors of to-day.

Bismark often counselled Germany not to "quarrel with Russia," but the advice of the hard, ruthless, but far-seeing old statesman has been forgotten and what he expected and looked for in that event is happening to-day. The Russia of to-day is proving as in hospitable to the kaiser and his army, as it did in 1812 to Napoleon and his men.

Perhaps nothing has convinced the public of the value and efficiency of the Society's work as has the Information Bureau, superintended by Lady Drummond and her able assistants.

The system of gifts to the wounded men, of visitors for Canadian patients, and of information for their relatives on both sides of the ocean, has earned the approval and the gratitude of all.

On this side the records are carefully kept and filed by Mr. Hugh Langton of Toronto University, and a staff of ladies.

We hope all our Knitters are doing their best to keep up our supply of socks, and remembering that Mrs Rush and Miss Burnett are in attendance every Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, in the teachers' room at the Public Library, to receive the socks and to give out the wool to those who will knit.

There are so many excursions these hot days and much knitting could be done while sitting and enjoying the beautiful scenery which lies so close to our own city, and for which we should be so grateful.

We are expecting the Knitting Machine, which has been gifted to our Society any day now. It will increase the supply of socks that we are able to forward every month very materially we hope.

INDIAN ACTRESS ENDS LIFE REVEALING DRAB DRAMA

NEW YORK, July 21.—When Blue Cloud was found dead in her dark little room in the rear of the top floor at No. 247 West Thirty-eighth street, a gas tube held to her mouth by a damp towel, acquaintances soon fathomed the mystery of her life and revealed a drab drama behind the mask of comedy she had worn as an actress.

Under the name of Blue Cloud Mrs. Lennie Mae Taylor had been familiar to vaudeville audiences throughout the country for ten or twelve years, until last winter, when illness called her from the stage and hastened the tragedy of yesterday.

She was the daughter of Colonel R. Clay Crawford, at the time of her birth thirty-five years ago one of the wealthiest residents of Macon, Ga. Colonel Crawford, who had been an English officer, came to the United States at the time of the Mexican War, and gained distinction as an American commander. In the civil war he raised a regiment of negroes, and fought for the Confederacy.

Mrs. Taylor's mother was a full-bred Cheroke Indian, daughter of Blue Cloud, chief of his tribe. As a child and young woman she had every luxury and refinement a home of wealth could offer. After being graduated from the Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Miss Crawford wished to study her mother's people and therefore she went to the Carlisle Indian School.

This ambition to aid her mother's people through knowing them better was the first step in the path that ended yesterday in her death by her own hand. An Indian and cowboy 'show' went to Carlisle while she was a student there, fourteen years ago. Ralph F. Taylor was a cowboy with the 'outfit,' and Miss Crawford fell in love with him and they were married.

Taylor said he was a nephew of the late Robert L. Taylor, for eight years Governor of Tennessee. He had lived among the Indians in the West for years and knew them better than did his bride. Matters went well with the couple for a time. They had a child, but she died as a baby. Mrs. Taylor put aside temporarily her ambition to aid her mother's people, and she and her husband decided to support themselves with an 'Indian act' on the vaudeville stage.

Mrs. Taylor adopted the name of Blue Cloud and soon the 'team' became well known throughout the vaudeville world. After that the tale is quite simple and runs like many others. Conditions arose which caused Mrs. Taylor to find another stage partner and Taylor drifted along until now he is an orderly in Polyclinic Hospital.

Blue Cloud became ill early last winter and a series of surgical operations followed, which kept her in bed until a few weeks ago and exhausted her savings. A little money came her way two weeks ago when she put on an 'Indian act' in a Boston theatre. She returned to New York a week ago and met her husband. She rented the room in West Thirty-eighth street and they lived there, more or less happily, until yesterday. He went to his work early and she wrote a note asking his forgiveness, saying the world had lost any attraction for her and that Blue Cloud would find what was in the next world. The woman who conducts the house smelled gas and found the body. Efforts to revive the actress failed.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

A happy home, whether it consists of two or twelve members, is one where love presides at the board and watches over the couches; where each person loves himself last and considers the other first; where the irritable word is restained and the affectionate thought given utterance, and where each is glad in laboring for the other's comfort and relieving the other's care.

Anniversary of Burns' Death

Yesterday was the anniversary of the death of Scotland's greatest poet, the famous and beloved Bobbie Burns, Scotia's child poet of nature, and one who endeared himself to a cold literary age by his plain, unconventional and senimental outbursts.

The beauty of Burns lies in his realism. In all his works there is a touch of the real of the living, and of what is foremost and prominent in men's lives and men's feelings. He puts in all his works the richness of personality. In a plain, simple touch he paints his own inmost thoughts and feelings, and thus makes an undisguised confession of all his own weaknesses and faults. Burns was not a hypocrite, and in his works we see the weakest side of his nature, namely, his sentimatism. Unlike Dryden, Pope and the rest of the eighteenth century school of English, Burns refused to put too much of the intellectual in his poetry. He gives us the speakings and the workings of his own heart, and herein lies the essence of real poetry.

Burns did not intend to be a poet in the real sense of the word. He tells us himself he is only a "rhymer." He was a ballad-singer, the singer of his parish, and by the use of his Scottish Lowand vernacular he idealized the small things and the homely joys of Scottish Lowland life. Burns as a poet was at his best in his native "vernacular," and it is in this dialect that he speaks to us best. It was his own vernacular which gave him the best opportunity of exercising his kindly humour and of giving expression to his own thoughts.

Unlike other poets, Burns was not an innovator. He does not mark the beginning of a new school, nor does he mark the beginning of any great movements in English literature. Burns' gift to English literature was his own personality. He derived all his refrains from the older lore of his country-side, and by his use of a familiar poetic diction he spoke in a tongue able to be read by all, ignorant as well as learned.

Our German Prisoners

In the Wittenberg Camp a thousand typhus patients, allied prisoners of war, were abandoned by their German guards. Their supplies were passed in on a trolley, so that there should be no contact between the prisoners and the outside world.

The state of affairs in the prison camps in England is quite different. At one British internment camp, St. Mary's Institute, where 750 German subjects are housed, the prisoners are provided with workshops, recreation grounds, reading rooms, in act every facility which will promote their comfort and well-being. A maitre d'hotel, a prisoner, attends to their cuisine.

St. Mary's Institute differs in no vital point from other such internment camps in England. It is typical. A large building with many windows is situated in the centre of some well planned grounds; a stone wall encircles it. In a little plaza before the central doors of the tall building there is a fountain. To the right and left there are two enclosures, with paved walks and trees and benches. In the shadow of the wall there are flower beds, bright with flowers, and the white drive-way is bordered by a clipped hedge. There are everywhere spaces and sunlight. The tall building rises immaculate, white against the grey sky of London. The tall trees make shadows on the bright windows. It was hard to realize that this cheery place was the abode of men, alien enemies, imprisoned according to the codes of war.

I went inside the building, and was first of all taken to the chapel, where services are held. It is not set apart for one religion, but is for all religions and faiths. The British Government does not interfere with or direct the individual lives of the enemy subjects who are under its authority for the space of the war. From the chapel I went nto one of the big dormitories. It was a long room with a high ceiling; the beds were in two rows with one aisle between them. Little tables were placed beside the beds, and on these were books and small personal possessions, and the whole room was flooded with sunshine. In addition to the big dormitories, there were small rooms. I went into one of these and found its occupant at the table writing. He was a young German, and very proud of his room, as he had an excellent view from its windows, which overlooked the courtyard and conservatory

To me the most interesting thing was, the co-operative system upon which the place was conducted. None of the inmates were Socialists, yet in this camp the oldest laws of theoretical Socialism were applied in practice. Each man contributed his portion of labour to the community, and each individual gave a certain toll for the upkeep of the camp. The young German who lived in the separate room paid in proportion to his privileges; as he profited, so did the community profit. This was true of all the departments of the camp.

If a man has served his apprentice at cabinet - making, he makes cabinets; there is a lawful place for his talents, whatever they may be. The market for St. Mary's is not only the camp itself, but also the city of London. There is a particularly good tailor shop, which caters to a fashionable trade, and the toll is in proportion to the profits. If certain interned men have business interests which lie outside the camp these are protected by a London barrister, who gives his advice and time to St. Mary's. How different from the camp at Wittenberg!

Outside the tennis lawns and croquet lawns were occupied, and in the two enclosures at either side of the plaza were the German prisoners talking to their wives and children, for this was visiting day.

All this emphasizes the British conviction that in war, justice and good faith have their lawful place. Britain no longer stands for a principle of domination as she once did at the time of the American War of Independence, but she stands for the principle, "Live and let live"; for coherence through common ideals and affections rather than for coherence through force.

And in Wittenberg one thousand typhus patients, allied prisoners, were abandoned by their German guards and left to die.

If Strength Declines As Age Advances Follow This Suggestion

So many women grow old before their time, perhaps your wife or sister. A little while ago, buoyant, full of vigor and activity — she enjoyed life and imparted pleasure to the whole family; but now in a few short years she has faded and lost colour and strength. She is just ready to develop some disease that will further weaken and debilitate. You remember how it began, failure of appetite, tired in the morning, found housework burdensome, always nervous and a little irritable. It's a shame to let her go down hill further when you can build her up so quickly with Ferrozone. The change this nourishing tonic makes in a weak woman is surprising. It gives great zest for food, increases appetite and digestion enormously. The blood gets richer and stronger and adds new life to every organ in the body. A rebuilding process works through the entire system. The first week will show an improvement, and a month or two will fatten up the thinnest, most run-down woman you can think of. Take Ferrozone for lost colour, for nervousness, for weakness, — use it when run-down and feeling poorly — it will do you more lasting good, keep you in better health, than anything else. Just as good for men and children, too, because Ferrozone is harmless and safe. 50c. per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir.—I noticed by your paper last night that it was the intention of the Chief of Police to send some of his men out to the corner of Park and Charlotte Streets to try and catch some of the parties that are racing up and down this street. The residents of this street, from Park to the Boundary Line, have wondered why we have not had some police protection long ago, as this is a residential section, but we are subjected to all kinds of annoyances, as everyone that has a vehicle of any kind thinks this street was laid out expressly for their benefit, to race up and down upon. A great many people also drive on either side of the street, regardless of the law, and I feel sure if the police would come out to this part oftener they would be able to catch the law-breakers.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the use of your valuable space, I remain, 500 CATS PUT TO DEATH.

Children of Brownsville Help in Crusade to Prevent Spread of Epidemic.

NEW YORK, July 21.—Five hundred stray cats were put to death in the pound of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Brooklyn. Agents of the society said that the number was a record for one day.

The cats were collected in the Brownsville section of the borough. Children living in the Liberty Avenue and Brownsville precincts aided the police in the cat crusade when it became known that five cents was the price set on every tabby's head.

The crusade was begun in connection with the measures being taken to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis.

We have during the past year placed a large number of our students in positions which have paid $400 to $600 per year as an initial salary.

What does this mean? Simply that in a few years they will be making per year. Our records show this to be the case in the past. How much salary will you draw three or five years hence—if untrained.

$1000 to $1500

Think this over — write us — we'll tell you all about our courses.

Resolution Urges The Speedy Completion of Trent Valley Canal

Special Meeting Was Held Last Evening to Consider the Matter---Was Endorsed by the Meeting and Subsequently By the City Council--Co operation of the Municipalities Will Be Invited---The Resolution.

Whereas the opening of the Trent Waterway from Lake Ontario to Lake Simcoe will be of great benefit, not only to the manufacturing, agricultural and mercantile interests, but also to every resident of the whole district;

And whereas large sums have been expended upon the waterway and there is only some minor work to be done at a few points to open navigation between the waters named;

And whereas the bridge of the Grand Trunk Railway at Campbellford is an obstruction to the navigation of the waterway;

It is resolved that the Honourable, the Minister of Railways and Canals for the Dominion be urged to have, at once, the Grand Trunk Railway bridge at Campbellford raised to a sufficient height so that it will not interfere with navigation, or to have a swing put in the bridge for that purpose, and also to have all work required to complete the canal done as quickly as possible, and to have the waterway opened for traffic at the earliest possible date.

The foregoing resolution was passed at a special meeting that was held last evening for the purpose of devising ways and means of impressing upon the Grand Trunk Railway the necessity of erecting a bridge across the Trent River at Campbellford so as to make the canal navigable along that particular portion of the route. The endorsation of the municipalities along the waterway will be secured, after which representations will be made to the Department of Railways and Canals.

The Roll Call.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. J. W. Miller, W. G. Morrow, Dr. C. H. Neal, R. Denne, J. J. Turner, Jr., V. Eastwood, James Kendry, W. H. Dunsford, R. Ruddy, A. L. Killaly, His Worship Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Weir, Evans, McIntyre, Langford, Dobbin, Edgar, Saunders, and Duncan.

The meeting opened with the election of His Worship Mayor Duffus to the chair. Mr. Robert Ruddy was elected secretary. The latter said that in the absence of Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., he had communicated with the Government respecting the matter before the meeting, and in reply was advised that the Department had the matter in hand, and that plans were before the Board of Railway Commissioners for approval. The officials of the parties interested visited Campbellford yesterday. In conclusion, the message stated that the work would be expedited as quickly as possible. Some difficulty had been experienced at this point owing to the topography of the land.

Endorsed by Council.

Mayor Duffus said that pressure should be brought to bear upon the railway authorities with a view of completing the work as quickly as possible. The bridge at Campbellford was the only apparent delay, with the exception of a few minor difficulties that could be easily overcome. The present bridge has a clearance of eight or ten feet. It will be necessary to raise this or construct a swing bridge. Mr. James Kendry, ex-M.P., said that the completion of the Trent Canal meant much to the city of Peterborough and the surrounding country.

The resolution passed at the meeting was later submitted to a meeting of the City Council and unanimously endorsed.

THE CITY HAS ORDERED ANOTHER CARLOAD OF OIL

Work of Oiling the City's Streets is Progressing—A Pointed Observation by Ald. Evans—Light on Waterford Street.

COUNCIL MEETING

This morning another carload of oil was ordered for use on the city's streets. It will be some time next week before it arrives, after which streets that have not already been oiled will receive an application. At last night's meeting of the city council several aldermen arose to enumerate a number of streets that were in need of oil. City Engineer Parsons informed the Council that the work was being done as rapidly as circumstances would permit, and that no district was discriminated against.

"They won't want any oil now they have got their tax bills," observed Ald. Evans, following a dissertion on the question of cost.

STREET LIGHTING.

Ald. Langford is anxious to have the street lighting introduced on Waterford street. This has been an election promise for the past decade and now the Council has decided to either move the arc light at the corner of McDonnell and College streets further east, or place a small light on Waterford street.

Workmen employed on the outfall sewer are seeking an increase in wages of two and one-half cents an hour. The high cost of living is given as the reason.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon advised the Council that the Peterborough Metal Products Company has agreed to remove the extra railway siding at the conclusion of the war. The extra siding is necessary at the present time to facilitate the shipment of munitions.

New York Stock Market

New York, July 22.—United States Steel Common sold above 86 to-day for the first time in two weeks; traders looking with great interest towards Tuesday's directors meeting. Rumor of an extra dividend accomanied the rise. Steel sold at 86¼ shortly before the close. Several specialties were strong. General Motors sold up 10 to 500; Butte and Superior moved up 2; American Tobacco 4½, and Liggett and Meyers 3 1-2. The market closed steady.

Huckleberries Appear On Local Market

This morning's market, in point of numbers, was a very quiet one and only a few of our weekly representatives from the surrounding district were on hand with their wares at the market square this morning. Haying operations are now in full boom in the county and farmers are taking advantage of the excellent weather to get through with it. The weekly trip to the city can wait for a rainy day when farm work is not so convenient and comfortable.

Huckleberries made their appearance to-day to replace the appetizing strawberry which cannot go on forever. A large quantity of huckleberries were on hand and selling at two quarts for twenty-five cents.

LIBRARY INSTITUTE WILL MEET HERE ON TUESDAY, JULY 25th

The meeting of the Library Institute for the Lindsay district, which takes place on Tuesday, July 25th, in the Public Library Lecture Hall, promises to be a very successful affair. For the benefit of the local patrons of the library and others, it may be mentioned that these institute meetings are held every year in one or other of the towns represented in the district. The Lindsay district is made up of the following counties: Peterboro, Durham, Ontario Victoria, Haliburton and Muskoka.

The meetings are held for the express purpose of discussing library methods, and the best way of overcoming the problems that arise almost daily in library work.

At the meetings to be held here there will be addresses delivered by the president of the district, Mr. Farmer, of Port Perry, Dr. Hardy, secretary of the Ontario Library Association, and Mr. W. O. Carson, the newly appointed inspector of Public Libraries for the province. All of these gentlemen are fluent speakers and a treat is ahead for those who will have the pleasure of hearing them. At the evening meeting Mr. Carson will deliver his address and will doubtless deal with the various phases of library work.

A most cordial invitation is extended by the Library Board to the public generally to attend these meetings and to become in some measure acquainted with the progressive methods that are being adopted by the Government in extending the advantages that the Public Library movement has already so markedly procured for the reading public:

THE PROGRAMME.

The draft programme is appended herewith:

Morning Session, 10.30-a.m.
Inspection of the Public Library.
Reception and registration of the delegates.
The Inspector of Public Libraries will be present and take part in the discussions.
Appointment of Nominating and Resolutions Committees.
Afternoon Session, 1.30-5 p.m.
1.30, Address of Welcome.
2.00, Annual Address of the President.
2.30, Open conference: Book Selection for small libraries (with demonstrations.)
4.00, Discussion.
4.30, Report of Nominating and Resolutions Committee.
Evening Session, 8-10 p.m.
8.00, Address by W. O. Carson, Inspector of Public Libraries, Toronto.
8.45, Address by representative of O.L.A. or any other speaker.

Through the kindness of various residents of the city a motor ride has been arranged for the delegates after the close of the afternoon session.

Trades and Labour Notes

In spite of the intense heat a goodly number of delegates turned up at the Trades and Labour Council meeting this week, to discuss questions pertaining to the welfare of workers. Vice-President Frost occupied the chair.

Subjects submitted were mostly of a personal nature. Secretary Wm. Stevens has had official notice taken of his eight-hour day scheme from both the Federal and Provincial Premiers.

A local member of the Electrical Workers has returned from the front after having been gassed and rendered unfit for further service. Employment has been given him by the C.G.E., but owing to his condition he cannot continue the work. No pension coming from the government adds to his troubles, so the Trades Council will take the matter up with the proper authorities.

Next meeting, August 2nd.

Summer Care of Milk

When Milk is delivered it should be put into the Refrigerator at once, or, lacking a Refrigerator, into a cool place. A very brief exposure to Summer Heat tends to render Milk unfit for use. If you are using—

Pure Pasteurized Milk from The Peterborough Creamery

YOU ARE PROTECTED FROM MILK IMPURITIES

All Sediment and Dangerous Impurities are Removed. You are protected against contamination from infected cows, as well as from all other dangers liable to arise from Raw, Unpasteurized and Unclarified Milk.

No Milk is So Clean that it can not be Improved by Clarification.

The Clarifying and Pasteurizing of milk, properly executed, is an efficient and practical means for protecting the consuming public at all seasons of the year, but more especially in heated terms.

Milk keeps much longer when it is clarified and pasteurised.

Cleanliness and Clarification

The important compounds of milk, so essential to the growing child in stimulating growth, bone and muscular structure, are safeguarded from pollution by clarifying and pasteurizing, which also improves the milk for infant feeding as well as adult use.

IT IS NOT SO

Some objection is raised to the pasteurizing of milk because some think the heating of the milk destroys the healthful lactic acid so beneficial in all good milk. THIS IS NOT SO. It has been proven over and over again, that pasteurizing milk at a temperature of 140 degrees F., improves the value of the milk. The important proteids of milk are not affected by the heating at this temperature; but on the contrary, remain entirely normal and unchanged.

When a very high temperature is used, near the boiling point, some destructive changes are known to occur in milk; but they do not occur in correct pasteurising at 140 degrees F., which is the temperature used in the pasteurizing process at the Peterborough Creamery.

Little Boy Nine Months Old HAD DYSENTERY

Dysentery is one of the worst forms of bowel complaint. The pains in the bowels become intense, the discharges occur with great rapidity, and are very often accompanied by blood, and the sufferer becomes very weak and languid.

Unless these discharges are checked, death may ensue in a very short time.

There is only one remedy to use in all cases of dysentery, and that is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It will cure when all other remedies fail.

Mrs. J. Leslie McKee, Redvers, Sask., writes: "I used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for my little boy when he was about nine months old. He was awfully bad with dysentery. I had not laid him down for three days and nights, only when his father took him for a few minutes. He had both the diarrhoea and vomiting. I had tried everything until my husband got "Dr. Fowler's, and three doses cured him."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy you want. Don't take any other when you ask for it.

SENDS $300 TO "PAL" IN PRISON

ANONYMOUS DONOR WRITES THAT IT IS HIS 'BOUND DUTY' TO ASSIST CONVICT.

SING SING, N.Y., July 22.—Martin Sweeny, a long term prisoner in Sing Sing and a member of the Judiciary Committee of the Mutual Welfare League, recently received an unsigned letter with a money order for $300 enclosed. The letter read as follows:

"My dear Old Pal:

"It is nearly thirty years since I saw you last. I recently heard about your circumstances in a most accidental manner. I have been in New York city for three weeks. I shall stay here a week longer, then I leave for my home in the West. Last night I walked into a billiard parlor on Broadway. I was alone. I sat down to watch a game. Two men, strangers to me, sat near me. When I had been sitting there a few minutes I was startled to hear your name mentioned in connection with Sing Sing prison. Martin, I cannot get you out, but it is my bounden duty to assist you in some way, so I send you a Post Office order for $300, hoping it will do you some good."

IRISH THEMSELVES SHOULD SETTLE THE IRISH QUESTION

Commons at present, is in a state of delicate balance. Anything may happen from a breakup of the Ministry to open conflict on Ireland between the Irish Party and the present Ministry.

It looks at the moment like another of England's many lost opportunities of winning the confidence and affections of the Irish people.

There will never be an authentic account of the remarkable convention of Irish Nationalists at Belfast, which practically decided the fate of Ireland for many generations. This is a great loss to history and perhaps to Ireland. One speech alone would have been sufficient to make the meeting historic, apart altogether from the fatefulness of the decisions; that speech, of course, was Mr. Devlin's, which swept the Convention off its feet, and made what was a very doubtful result at the beginning, quite certain. Indeed that speech accounted for the majority in favour of the Lloyd George Settlement; for it not only gained votes, but it so disturbed and moved the consciences of some of the men who had come into the room pledged to vote against the settlement, that they left the room rather than break their pledge on the one side; or on the other vote against what Mr. Devlin had shown them to be the interest of Ireland.

Convention Orderly.

..I do not go back, however, on the Ulster Nationalist Convention for the purpose of relating the personal incidents, but rather to point out its significance in the future of Ireland. It is admitted by everybody who was present that the Convention was orderly, patient, self-restrained; that everybody was listened to in patience; that the interruptions were few and far between, and then were sternly repressed; that there wasn't a particle of that flap-doodle talk of which there has been a regular debauch in Ireland since the Rebellion; in fact, that great Convention was worthy of a great historic moment and of the portentous issues. An Englishman who was present declared that if he had ever any doubts of the fitness of Irishmen for self-government this convention would have removed them.

A Sad Reflection.

But now comes the sad reflection, that Ireland will have to start the experiment of self-government without the assistance of these Ulstermen, and of the Ulstermen of both camps. For it is right to put the Ulstermen together — widely as they differ in political and religious conviction. They resemble each other much more than either of them resembles their political friends in the South. Of course there is a tendency on both the one side and the other to bitterness and to narrowness; this is inevitable; for the bigotry of the Orangeman naturally reacts on the Nationalist, and renders his creed a little harder and more assertive than in the softer atmosphere of the South. On the other hand, these politicians of the North have infused into each other a number of strong political virtues. They are uncompromising; they are at the same time businesslike; above all, they have discipline and unity. In all the many splits that have divided the rest of Ireland, the Ulster Nationalists have stood apart; even in those hours when a spirit of something approaching despair dried up the courage and the funds of the Nationalists in the South of Ireland and even among the Irish abroad, the Ulster Nationalists still maintained their organization and their subscriptions. Every year for more than a quarter of a century, the subscription of 1,000 lbs. came regularly from Belfast. These are the men who will not be represented in the new Irish Parliament. On the other hand, the other type of Ulsterman is equally a loss: for they again have revealed very remarkable business powers. The harbour, of Belfast is very well managed; the Belfast man is very businesslike, prompt, ready to meet the views of his customers, able to get hold of trade; building up a city with something of the feverishness of an American city; and gradually attracting to his capital a great proportion of the business of the whole South of Ireland. It is from Belfast that the Southern grocer gets his tea; it is from Belfast that the Southern draper gets a great part of his cloth and the ready-made clothing business where at one time belonged most exclusively to Leeds and other English cities, has now been taken in hand by Belfast. I may add the wellknown fact that the banks of Belfast collect the money which the thrifty and now prosperous farmers of the South of Ireland are willing to give at 2½ per cent. or 3 per cent. on deposit account and invest it in a thriving and go-ahead city like Belfast at six or seven per cent.

A Look To the Future.

These are the relations between Ulster and the rest of Ireland, and while wailing a little—as one must do over the lost opportunity for the moment of bringing these two parts of Ireland together for the common benefit of the country — the proper thing to do at present is to see how far these things can be remedied in the future. I am convinced that the partition of Ireland will be of short duration. Even already I see signs of the beginning of the end of partition. For one of the many paradoxes of Irish life is that while these Northerns are so divided — fiercely divided from one another, they can always find common ground in an even greater dislike of other people. I made the observation to a prominent member of the Orange Party, that I was rather astonished sometimes at my own psychology during an Irish debate. I could hear, I said, one of the Orangemen abuse my principles, my party, myself, without turning a hair, it didn't stir my blood or make my pulse beat faster a second; but when on the other hand an English Tory soldier got up and began to abuse us, I saw red. "But my dear T.P.," answered my Orange friend, "It is just the same way with me. I can hear you or any other of the Nationalists—even Joe—(meaning Mr. Devlin), attack me and my party and my friends, and I don't mind—indeed I rather like Joe; but when one of these English Non-conformist Liberals gets up, then——." But I daren't transfer to these chaste columns what my Orange friend said.

Orangemen and Nationalists.

By a curious freak of political fortune, the Orangeman and the Nationalists find themselves to-day in the position of opposing Englishmen together; taking the same side; urging the same case; pleading for the same remedy. Their position—as strongly felt by the one as by the other—is that the question of Ireland is a question to be settled by Irishmen themselves; and in the Lloyd George settlement they found common ground. Then come along a certain number of Englishmen who begin to try and undo their work, raise all kinds of difficulties and suggest all kinds of impossibilities. At once the call of the blood was heard by both the Orangemen and the Nationalists. For nothing has been more admirable and more remarkable than the steady and inflexible loyalty with what the Orange leaders have stood by their contract. Sir Edward Carson was interviewed, cross-examined, I am told even rudely treated by the British Unionists; he didn't budge an inch; he had given his word; he meant to keep it. The same was true of the other Orange leaders, with this curious and paradoxical result; that the Orangemen and the Nationalists find themselves on the common ground of resenting this English interference, and of fighting the same battle with the same arguments, and the same zeal.

What moral must one draw from these things? That, after all, amid all their differences these Orangemen feel themselves Irishmen just as much as their Nationalist fellow-countrymen; that they know that amid all their differences they understand each other much better than the Englishmen understand them, and that in time, when both sides have shown their respect for each other's differences, they will be drawn together inevitably and perhaps in a short time, by economic forces, by practically decided the fate of Ireland social forces, above all by the community of their nationality.

In four years, 1912-15, 3,597,000 people have visited the Canadian National Exhibition. Yet in all that time there has not been an accident getting on or off the cars at the main entrance, where practically all the traffic is handled.

RUGBY FOOTBALL WILL BE DROPPED BY INTER-PRO. UNION TILL END OF WAR

generally understood throughout the Big Four circuit the game would be dropped this fall. Sentiment as well as enlistment actuated the club officials in taking this stand.

The Canadian gridiron has given hundreds of strong young fellows to the ranks, many of whom have died on the battlefield. Of all Rugby organizations, the Big Four and Intercollegiate stand out most conspicuously in contributing defenders of the Empire.

In order to vary military training it is quite probable a military football league will be formed this fall between the units located here, in Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal, and if a series of games are not played, many exhibition contests will be put on. This should prove a big feature in these martial days.

Of the two Ottawa teams of 1914 and 1915, no less than thirty are wearing khaki. Other teams throughout the Big Four circuit can show quite as good a record.

OTTAWA, July 21.—The Free Press says:

There will be no senior Rugby football played in Ottawa this fall. Neither will the Interprovincial Rugby Union be active. Of all sports in Canada, football has been most affected by the inroads of enlistment. Practically the whole of the Argonaut team of Toronto, the bulk of the Hamilton Tigers, the backbone of the Ottawas, and the major portion of the Montreal team, are serving the colours either in France or preparing for service abroad.

The Montreal A.A.A. declared itself out of all sports till the termination of the war. This would leave but three clubs in the Big Four, even if there were enough players available to muster teams. It is doubtful, however, if an ordinary intermediate team could be rounded up in either Ottawa, Hamilton, or Toronto at the present time.

Secretary-Treasurer Charlie Snelling, of the Ottawa Club, stated it was

The full rink games will begin on Monday, July 24. Any rink that is not represented by at least two of its members will be entered as having defaulted.

The draw is posted up in the club house. It is the duty of every skip to acquaint himself with the date of his game, the members of his rink, and to notify his vice, when necessary to take charge of his rink.

Being ignorant of any of the above information will not be considered as an excuse for not being on hand to play.

SONG WRITER DID RAISE BOY "TO BE A SOLDIER"

LOS ANGELES, July 19. — "My son has my permission and blessing to go and fight Mexico if Mexicans menace my fellow citizens on the border, and whenever America is invaded or threatened with invasion by a foreign power I want to see him shouldering a gun in her defence.'

Thus spoke Alfred Bryan, the man Colonel Roosevelt called something akin to a mollycoddle because he wrote, about two years ago, a popular song entitled, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." Alfred Bryan, Jr., has just been married, and it was at a family party at the Bryan home in Hollywood that the father delivered himself of his sentiments.

KAISER BRIBES SOCIALISTS

Berne, Switzerland, June 13.—The International Socialist Committee has received a report from the German Socialists indicating that notwithstanding the privation, misery and consequent depression, discontent and eagerness for peace among the workers, there is not a probability of aggressive revolutionary action on their part.

It is reported that the Socialist members of the Reichstag have lately made a deal with the Kaiser who promised electoral reform as a reward for Socialist support in the war.

Examiner Special:

PARIS, July 22.—Senator Henry Berenger, who has returned from a visit to the British field headquarters, quotes General Sir Douglas Haig as saying: "We must impose a peace that is really valid as we shall have paid for it."

"The technical skill of the British General Staff," said the Senator, "is on an equality with the heroism of the British troops."

Monster Procession of London Women

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 22.—"They also serve who stay at home and work," was the slogan borne home to Londoners to-day by a monster procession of women which paraded Whitehall and nearby thoroughfares appealing for more through cooperation by women in the business of war.

There were thousands of women in the parade. It was under the auspices of the Woman's Social and Political Union. Many were attired in man's working clothes.

French Government Inspection of Horses Took Place Yesterday

The French government inspection of horses, as advertised in a previous issue, took place yesterday at the Munro House yards. Of all the horses inspected, none were rejected as being unfit for general service, and this showing should be borne in mind by all owners who are desirous of selling surplus stock. The inspection conducted under the French system was quite liberal and prices were A1.

Another inspection will be held next Saturday, July 29th, but it is urged that those who can, should bring in all available stock, as future purchases are not guaranteed. Messrs. L. Green and T. Cruikshanks, our local buyers, are conducting the sales, in conjunction with the representative of the French government.

Inspections will be held every Saturday at the Munro House until further notice is given.

Indians Home On Last Leave

Roseneath Warriors Home From Valcartier Camp

Some twenty-five redskin warriors from Roseneath, members of the 139th Battalion, now stationed at Valcartier Camp, arrived in the city last evening on their last leave and are proceeding down the lake to spend the week-end at Roseneath. The Indian tribes along the shores of Rice Lake have responded nobly to the call to arms, and Roseneath and Hiawatha are well represented in the various battalions stationed around the country.

The Indian takes well to the soldiering game and anything that savours of outdoor life and exercise immediately appeals to him. The hardships of camp life are simply a shadow of his formed surroundings, and his hardy frame thrives on anything that is arduous and bereft of home comforts.

Judging by the number who have already departed from the huts along Rice Lake it looks as though the rice beds of the lake will go ungathered for a year at least, unless the squaw lives up to her ancestral instincts, and gets busy, herself, to do the work of her khaki warrior now fighting, or at least training, for King and country.

FISH DON'T BITE IN HOT SPELL

Fishing on Rice Lake and the River has taken a decided turn for the worse according to the latest reports of aquatic sportsmen. Earlier in the season things looked decidedly bright and the finny tribe were biting in great style, to the delight of local anglers. The fishermen, however, who have been visiting the fishing haunts of the Otonabee return these days with saddened and dejected faces and groan "nothing doing" when asked about their day's spoil.

STILL DRAGGING FOR BODY OF RAY GUERIN

The body of Ray Guerin, the 12-year-old lad who was drowned in the Otonabee last evening, had not been recovered at a late hour this afternoon. Edward Vinette, who is well versed in the use of a drag-net, along with several willing hands, spent practically all the day dragging the river in the vicinity of Chip Island and north of the C. P. R. bridge. Mr. Archie Barbeau and Mr. Frank McPherson worked throughout the night

WHARF NOTES

The Str. Stoney Lake arrived at the George street wharf at noon today with a large crowd from Hastings. Nearly 250 Hastings folks took in the long water trip up the Trent, across the wide stretch of Rice Lake and up the winding Otonabee.

The St. Geneva is tide up at the local wharf on her weekly trip from Harwood and the Landing. She brought up a cargo of three tons of Harwood creamery butter.

The Government yacht 'Skola,' under Capt. Robt. W. Carson, Fishery Overseer, is tied up at the Wolff street wharf.

WEDDING BELLS

SPANKIE—DAVIDSON.

A very pretty wedding was quietly solemnized at Delta on Wednesday, July 19, at half past 6 in the evening when Jean May Davidson, B.A., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Davidson of Delta, Ont., was married to Arthur T. Spankie, M.D., C.M., of Calgary, Alta. The bride entered the drawing room accompanied by her father and was gowned in Georgette crepe over white duchess satin and silk embroidered veil with orange blossoms. She was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Davidson, A.T.C.M. She wore a gown of white taffeta edged with chiffon. The bridal music was played by Miss Jessie Davidson, another sister of the bride. The groom was attended by his brother Ralph M. Spankie, B.A., of Calgary. Rev. Mr. Barker conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. L. A. Pierce, M.A., B.D., Ph.D. During the signing of the register, Miss Edith Davidson sang. After the ceremony the bride's mother, gowned in silk embroidered lace over black silk greeted the guests, who included only relatives, and very close friends, and supper was served on the verandah. The out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. Gill and Master Ernie, Mrs. Graves, and Miss Ruby Donnelly of Kingston; Mrs. A. E. Amos, of Ernestown, Mrs. W. Spankie of Calgary, Alta., the mother of the groom, and Mrs. J. Moulton of Peterboro. After the honeymoon Dr and Mrs. Spankie will make their home at 220 26th avenue west, Calgary.

OBITUARY

JOHN VINCENT POWERS.

Mr. John Vincent Powers passed away at 7.30 Friday evening, July 21, at his residence, 106 Lock street, at the age of 36 years. The late Mr. Powers was born in Fenelon Falls, where he resided until ten years ago, when he came to Peterborough, where he has made many friends, being of a kind and loving disposition. He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowful wife and five sisters, Mrs. T. Cook, Mr. G. Jenkinson, Mrs. Wm. McCarthy, Miss E. Powers of Fenelon Falls, and Mrs. Wm. Gallagher of Cobourg.

The funeral will take place from his residence, Monday morning, at 9 o'clock, to Sacred Heart Church, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

Body Was Recovered

Remains of Ray Guerin Who Lost His Life in Otonabee River Recovered Yesterday

The body of Ray Guerin, the 12-year old son of Private Adelard Guerin, of the 2nd Pioneer Battalion, whose home is at 101 Simcoe street, was recovered Sunday afternoon. Guerin lost his life while bathing in the Otonabee River on Friday evening. From the time of the accident up until yesterday afternoon several men prosecuted the search for the body.

SHARKS ARE ON GOOD BEHAVIOUR; SEVERAL KILLED

New York, July 22.—Reports of sharks along the Atlantic seaboard are as numerous as on previous days, but since the incident at Matawan Creek a week ago when a man and a boy lost their lives, there has been no report of a shark attacking a person.

Captain Thomas C. Cottree, a fisherman of Keyport, N.J., who participated in the "shark hunt" of last week, and Richard Lee, caught a seven foot blue nose shark off Keyport yesterday afternoon. They had been fishing out in the ocean and on the way back they passed many sharks in Raritan Bay, they said.

Near the mouth of Matawan Creek they sighted the shark that they decided to kill, so they spread a net. He fought vigorously until stunned by a blow on the head with a mallet. Then he was drawn into the boat and killed. He weighed 230 pounds.

G. C. Whitely, of the motorboat Romany, owned by Holland S. Buell, reported that yesterday he saw a shark about fourteen long at Yonkers and approaching boys swimming at the end of the pier. Whitely warned the boys out of the water and then pursued the shark half way across the Hudson, losing him.

Joseph Garlock and Edward Heckel, merchants of Bloomfield, N.J., killed a shark five feet long off Seabright, N.J., after a fight lasting for twenty minutes. The shark will be exhibited at Bloomfield.

Sharks have been reported at New Haven and other places in Long Island Sound, and along the New England coast. One four feet long was killed at New Haven. Fishermen reported to Noank that the yacht Bagheera under charter to a party from Chicago, had killed a shark weighing 300 pounds off Watch Hill, R.I.

A shark 6 feet in length was reported to have been shot and killed near a bathing beach at Onset, Mass.

All exhibits at the Canadian National Exhibition from foreign countries are admitted by the Customs free of duty.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES ON THE WESTERN FRONT

BRITISH ADVANCE ON A FIVE MILE FRONT

Carried German Outer Works---Penetrated Into Pozierres and Drove a Wedge Across the Bapaume Highway ---French Make Progress in the Region of Fleury--Austro-German Forces Retreating in Great Disorder.

AN ENTIRE REGIMENT SURRENDERS

LONDON, July 24.—The British troops attacking on a front of eight miles carried German outer works for five miles and penetrated into Pozieres and drove a wedge across the Bapaume highway between Pozieres and Bapaume, capturing a number of prisoners.

FRENCH MAKE PROGRESS.

PARIS, July 24.—New French lines south of Soyecourt on the Somme front have held against strong German counter-attacks. Artillery battle continues.

The French made some progress yesterday in the region of Fleury capturing seventy prisoners.

ARTILLERY DUELS AT VERDUN.

LONDON, July 24.—Severe fighting on all parts of the western front yesterday. Allies repulse all German counter-attacks with heavy losses. Fighting continues.

Strong artillery duels mark present activity at Verdun. French forces still hold the fortress tight.

GERMAN REGIMENT SURRENDERED.

PETROGRAD, July 24.—Austro-German forces retreating in great disorder along the Lipa and Styr rivers. All counter attacks fail to arrest the advance of the Russian troops. The 13th Landwehr Regiment surrendered in its entirety.

SUBBMARINES CAN CARRY ONLY VERY SMALL CARGOES

A correspondent of the New York Times, V. V. Messner by name, writes the following very interesting letter regarding the Deutschland and the possibilities of carrying freight by submarines:

The arrival of the German submarine Deutschland at Baltimore a few days ago created a considerable amount of discussion as to what effect the dyestuffs brought by the submarine would have upon the dye industry in this country.

The amount of dyestuffs imported from Germany before the war was in the neighbourhood of 60,000 tons a year. According to these figures it will take a great number of submarines to supply the demand of the market.

We are informed by the newspapers that the Deutschland has a displacement of 1,000 tons, which shows that her actual cargo capacity cannot possibly be greater than 150 tons. It must be borne in mind that the weight of a hull of a submarine boat is twice as great as that of a surface boat. This is because of the fact that any submersible boat hull must of necessity be stronger to withstand the hydrostatic pressure of water below the surface, so that the actual cargo capacity of the giant submarine cannot be taken as more than 15 to 20 per cent. of her displacement. Now, it takes 15 days to cross the ocean when going part of the way submerged. If we add to this fifteen days for the return trip and one week on each end of the line to take on and discharge the cargo, without allowing any time for overhauling the delicate motors of the submersible, the submarine cannot make more than eight trips in a year, and this will be a very hard thing to do. If we say the efficiency of the submarine is two-thirds (that is allowing one-third of the time for repairs and adjustment), each submarine could make about five trips across the Atlantic in a year's time. This means that no more than 750 tons of cargo could be brought over to this side by one submarine in a year.

Bearing in mind the amount of dyestuffs imported from Germany in a year one can readily see that the successful trip of one submarine, which, perhaps, had a rather hard time of it keeping herself out of sight of the allies' warships, cannot produce any effect upon the dyestuff industry of this country.

It was a remarkable achievement from the standpoint of daring, but the commercial value of this trip, or of similar trips in the future, will have to be demonstrated.

LONDON, July 24.— The treasury department has issued a "supplementary estimate" for the vote of credit of £450,000,000 which Premier Asquith will ask the House of Commons to vote the Government to-day.

The vote is the largest asked by the Government since the beginning of the war, and brings the total voted this year to £1,050,000,000, and the total since the beginning of the war to £2,832,000,000.

SCHOOL ATHLETE DIES IN RIVER

NEW YORK, July 24.—Francis J. Callahan, widely known as an athlete in public school contests, and a nephew of Professor James E. Laden, of the department of mathematics, Columbia University, was drowned in the Hudson River off 110th street last week when he was seized with a cramp while swimming. Three of his companions, who made futile attempts to rescue him, said they had saved him from drowning the previous day. On Tuesday young Callahan was made helpless by cramps in almost the same spot where he was drowned.

Although only fifteen years of age, Callahan was six feet tall. Due to his great physique he was able to win many contests held by the Public School Athletic League. He had been a member of the track team of Public School No. 165, in West 108th street, having been graduated from the school last June. He had registered for the coming term of the High School of Commerce.

Accompanied by three chums, Theodore Lenhardt, of No. 153 West 108th street; Frank McPartland, of No. 151 West 108th street, and Arthur Shufflebotham, of No. 155 West 108th street, young Callahan left his home, No. 215 West 108th street, to go swimming in the Hudson. After several hours of bathing Callahan's chums decided they had enough of it, so they started for shore. Callahan, swimming one hundred feet from shore, kept up his strokes ten minutes longer. Then he started to make for shore, but cramps seized him in the legs and he could go no further. His chums saw the trouble and jumped into the water to rescue him, as they had done the day before.

Callahan sank before the boys could reach him, but they soon were diving after him. The swimming below the river's surface exhausted the three boys to such an extent that they were forced to abandon their efforts. In the meantime no trace of Callahan could be found. His body has not been recovered.

Mr. Callahan, a widow, did not learn the news until she returned home from Oyster Bay, L.I., where she had gone to call on friends.

STORM OF HISSES GREETS MOVIE SHOWING SIR SAM

Soldiers and Civilians Unite in Outburst in Local Theatre.

LONDON, July 24.—The appearance of Sir Sam Hughes in a film showing a review of the 11th Battalion in the local theatre here, was the signal for one of the most violent outbursts that perhaps has ever been heard in London. In an instant from every part of the house there came hisses, hoots ad groans, which continued as long as Sir Sam was in the picture. In the audience were a large number of soldiers, and they, it was stated, were among the loudest in showing the esteem in which Sir Sam is held.

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT TO LINDSAY MAN

Mr. Wm. Leahy, a well known resident of Lindsay, who resides on St. Lawrence street, was the victim of a most distressing accident on lot 5, con 8, Brock township, near Sunderland. Mr. Leahy had gone out to Brock to the farm of his son, who had recently been married, and who was away on a trip. He was engaged in the field operating a mower and while adjusting the machine it gave a lurch and Mr. Leahy was thrown forward with some force against the lever, which struck him in the eye, bursting the eye ball and destroying the sight of the optic. The unfortunate man after receiving medical attention, was hurried to Toronto, where he is at present in a hospital. It was reported on Friday that there was grave danger that Mr. Leahy would lose the sight of the other eye, but this could not be confirmed.

STARVES TO DEATH AT SEA.

Stowaway's Body Found in Tunnel of Fruit Ship.

NEW YORK, July 21.—Shortly after the United Fruit Company steamship Calamares docked her officers found the body of a man in the tunnel in the after end of the ship. He had starved to death, according to Dr. Hadley, the company's physician, who made an examination of his body. In the tunnel, which is about six feet square, were found an empty water bottle and a few crusts of bread, unfit to eat. The man seemed to have been a German about 25 years old, with brown hair, and was about 5 feet 6 inches in height.

The Calamares touched at Port Limon, Havana, and Colon on her way here, and it is thought that he stowed away at one of those ports. There was nothing on the body to identify it, and it was sent to the Morgue.

FAINTED AT SIGHT OF BLOOD.

Butcher Swooned When He Got Small Cut on Finger.

Cases of strong men who faint at the sight of blood are fairly common. An extraordinary case is recorded by a doctor who was called in to attend a man who had a fainting attack as a result of slightly cutting his finger. On inquiring the business of his patient, it transpired that the man was a butcher! Though used to animal bloodshed, he could not bear the sight of human blood, and always worked in strong leather gloves to prevent accidents.—Answers, London.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Unfortunate Blunder

By F. A. MITCHEL

When the world war broke out there were the usual quantum of American summer tourists in Europe.

Frederick Jackson was one of these Americans near the seat of war, being at Thun, Switzerland. He made a bolt to get through France to the sea, so that he might embark for home. He was unable to register his trunk any farther than Berne and on arriving at that city began a hunt for it. Approaching a pile of baggage, he saw his trunk—at any rate, it had his initials on it—and was about to claim it when a lady exlaimed:

"There it is! Bring it along quickly. I shall be left."

She pointed to Jackson's trunk, a porter shouldered it and was about to carry it away when Jackson interfered.

"Beg pardon, madam. Are you sure that is your trunk?"

"Certainly. Don't you see my initials on it—F. E. J."

"Those are my initials, and I am quite sure that is my trunk."

"Go on, porter," said the lady, and off they went, leaving Mr. Jackson gaping after them. He was about to follow them to regain his trunk when an official pointed to another trunk with the same initials on it and asked if it were not his. Jackson was puzzled. No matter how familiar one is with his trunk he cannot be certain unless there is some familiar mark on it. However, it was evident that there were two trunks with the same initials on them, and Jackson argued that this one was either his or hers. So he claimed it and directed a porter to shoulder it and go for the train.

The episode occurred on Aug. 2, 1914. A week later Jackson crossed the English channel, the vessel having darkened lights to escape German warcraft, and landed safely in England. There he waited two weeks for a passage to New York.

When the ship was well out to sea Jackson one morning left his stateroom somewhat peculiarly attired. He had on a ruffled collar, and his necktie was a broad blue ribbon. In the cabin he met a lady in a pair of masculine spats—much too large for her—a man's choker and a blue speckled cravat ornamented with a mosaic pin resembling one Jackson had bought in Rome. The man and the woman stopped and looked at each other with marked interest. Jackson raised his cap politely.

"I believe, sir," said the lady, "that you are the man who claimed a trunk at Berne which I believed to be mine."

"I am."

"Well, the trunk turned out not to be mine."

"I captured a trunk with my initials on it and held on to it."

"Heavens be praised; it must be mine!"

"That scarf you are wearing matches one I own, and the pin is exactly like one I brought from Italy."

"Quite likely. I have been obliged to use some of the articles I found in your trunk. I fancy that ruffled collar you wear is mine, and the ribbon" (she tried to repress a smile) "is the exact color of one I got in Lucerne. I assure you I am very tired trying to make out with a man's neckwear. Look at these enormous spats!"

"I assure you I have found a woman's robe de nuit altogether too cramped. Besides, the workmanship in it scratches me."

"You are very bold!"

"I will apologize if you will assure me that you have not used my own for a similar purpose."

The lady colored, but made no reply.

"I will have a porter carry the trunk to your stateroom and get mine. I will reserve such articles of clothing as I have been obliged to use to be laundered."

The lady looked uncomfortable.

"Will that suit you, madam?" he added.

"But what shall I do in the meantime for—for—"

"Can't we get the pieces laundered immediately?"

A stewardess was passing. The lady called her and put the laundry question. She was told that to get clothes laundered aboard would be next to impossible and if possible would cost a large sum. A few pieces only would cost a guinea.

"Rather than pay that," said Jackson, with a twinkle in his eye, "I will sleep in embroidery and lace all the voyage."

"But I will not sleep—I mean you shall not sleep in"— She was stalled.

"Then we must change trunks with the articles as they are," said Jackson.

"That's very mean of you."

"I don't see how you can call me mean. At Berne I was about to have my trunk carried to the train when you interposed and had it carried off as yours. Since then I have had to depend upon garments to which I have been entirely unused."

This ended the interview. The lady turned and beat a retreat. Jackson paid an enormous sum to have the articles he had used laundered and sent the trunk with everything in it to the lady's stateroom. He did not receive his own until the end of the journey.

A year from that date when these two were about to start on a wedding tour the groom to be sent some of his clothes to his fiancee to pack in her trunk on the ground that he hadn't room for them. She sent them back in a huff.

He laughed.

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va.—"After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the Change of Life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizzy spells, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends."—Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Unique Ring.

Lady Dorothy Walpole, who was recently married in London to Captain Hobart Mills, had her wedding ring set, by her own special desire, with a portion of the shrapnel with which her husband was so dangerously wounded in France.

He at present holds a high position in the Censor's office, and is the author of one of the most brilliant books of impressions of the war. Lady Dorothy has always been the close companion of her father, Lord Oxford.

ANIMALS ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Regimental Mascots Which Have Distinguished Themselves.

Regimental pets on many occasions have distinguished themselves on the battlefield. In one instance a regimental dog proved to be one of the few survivors of a terrible British disaster when the famous 66th were cut up in the battle of Maiwand. Valiant Bob, the pet of the regiment, sat and howled dismally in the centre of the rapidly-dwindling square, where the Britishers stood back to back, fighting against hordes of Afghans. When every man had fallen, Bob crawled over the bodies of the dead, and, although wounded in the leg, traveled over ninety miles of country by himself.

In the battle of Iukermann, Sandy, the terrier mascot of the Royal Engineers, thoroughly enjoyed himself by running after the Russians and snapping at their legs. He was eventually run through by the bayonet of an exasperated Russian, but Sandy recovered, and had a special medal struck for him by the colonel of the regiment at the conclusion of the campaign.

Bruce, the enormous mastiff who displayed similar fighting tactics in the battle of Kandahar, met with a less fortunate fate, and was killed and buried on the historic battlefield. A poodle who hobbled about on three legs was for some years a familiar spectacle at Chelsea Barracks. The Guards captured the animal in the battle of Vittoria, and adopted him as their regimental pet. He went through the campaign with the regiment, but had two legs broken by a shot through refusing on one occasion to remain in the rear when the charge was sounded, but dashed to the front of the galloping horses.

At the battle of Tel-el-Kebir a private of an Irish regiment went into the fight with a little black kitten concealed in his tunic as a mascot. He came through the battle unscathed, and so did his furry, four-footed friend.

Getting Rid of Him.

It was in the north of England, and the owner of some large manufacturing works was competing for a seat in the House of Commons. He was not a favorite amongst the several hundreds of hands whom he employed, so that the term "doubtful" might have been appropriately used in defining his chance of gaining their votes. Consequently, his opponent was smiling up his sleeve at the idea of a certain "walk-over."

But on the result of the poll becoming known the countenance of the latter can be better imagined than described, for the employer of labor had beaten him by a majority of nearly six hundred. Anxious to know if there had been any bribery in the affair, he employed an agent to sift the matter out. The agent's first move was to the manufacturer's foundry works, and there the following conversation took place:

Agent: "How was it that you voted for your master when you all have such a bad opinion of him?"

One of the workmen blurted out: "Weel, yer see, mon, we voted fer 'im so as he could put hisself away in the House. We don't want him here."

Friend of King Edward.

The late King Edward would have been delighted to have heard of the military distinction which has been won by Captain Wells, ex-Chief of the London Fire Brigade, for they were great friends. His Majesty, on more than one occasion when Prince of Wales, accompanied the Captain to great fires. Captain Wells invariably took his uniform to social functions, and more than once I have seen him change from a dress suit to brass helmet, long boots, and all the fireman's rig-out, by the light of a burning building.

Captain Wells has earned war honors for transport service in the Dardanelles. No doubt it was his reputation as an organizer that led to his employment in transport work—a reputation that he won in the navy. Forty years ago, as a lad of about seventeen, he was a middy in the Bellerophon. Then an officer in the Royal yacht, then a specialist in naval signalling and torpedo work, and finally commanded the battleship Benbow.

Embargo on Glycerine.

Severe restrictions have been imposed on the sale of glycerine. Chemists cannot obtain fresh supplies unless they give a written guarantee to dealers that it will only be used for preparing medicines and that they will not sell it over the counter unless it is ordered by a doctor's prescription. It is not to be used as an ingredient of any toilet prescription. Manufacturers of glycerine are debarred from supplying it to wholesale dealers unless the dealers give a written undertaking to supply it only to chemists who sign an agreement to the above effect. The reason for this embargo is that the supplies of glycerine are required for the production of explosives.

Mine Sweeping.

Thousands of mines have been swept up off the English coast since the war began. Half the vessels engaged on this work are craft that in peace times go a-fishing or do a coastal trade. There are very few bluejackets amongst their crews, the greater number of the ships being manned solely by the brave fellows of the merchant service, the fisheries, and the coast trade.

The Navy's Record.

During twenty months of war 21,000 merchant vessels have passed a certain patrolled East Coast area, and of all that number only three have come to grief.

BLOCKADE TRIPS.

Rubber Onions a Means Used by Enemy to Import Commodity.

Tumbling over the waves on her way back from a "search" came Seascraper's boat. She tied up alongside and her crew scrambled inboard along the boom.

"Bill, here's something to put in your soup," called one of them to a messmate, holding up a large onion.

"Right you are: pitch it here," answered Bill, extending a huge, work-hardened palm. Whizz came the onion, which touched Bill's horny paw, rebounded from it, struck the edge of a table, and then went bounding along the mess-deck like a ball.

"Well, I'm blowed;" exclaimed Bill, looking after it with a surprised yet understanding eye. "So that's the latest, is it? Blest if you can ever make sure you've properly overhauled them ships until you've prized open the mouths of the crew and looked down their throats with a telescope."

The alleged "onion" was made of rubber and had been brought back as a curio by one of the search party from the ship that had just been overhauled. All sorts of clever devices are adopted to try to get contraband through the British blockade. The American genius who invented wooden nutmegs gave an idea to would-be blockade runners which they have elaborated and vastly improved.

But hard war experience has taught our patrol service not to accept things as being just what they seem—no matter how guilelessly like them they may appear. In this particular case, when the vessel was boarded many sacks of onions were found among her cargo. Most succulent, oniony onions, too, they looked, and the crew opened the sacks quite confidently. However, when the examining officer picked up one of the onions at random and dropped it on the deck it bounced back into his hand—and the game was up. Except for a few real ones spread carefully at the top of the sacks, the whole of the "onions" were made of rubber. They were undoubtedly on their way to Germany through some neutral port, but the discovery of their real composition meant confiscation, and the wily Hun got none of these "vegetables" for his warbroth.

Long months spent in countering the wiles of clever tricksters have made the crews of our blockading ships the most suspicious people on earth. And not without good cause do they decline to judge by appearances only. Yet with all their astuteness they sometimes come very near to being deceived.

Harrow Boys Strike.

A "strike" among the boys of Harrow School, who had a conscientious objection to being taught by a master who, in turn, had a conscientious objection to performing any kind of military service, ended with the resignation of the master. The master applied at the local tribunal for exemption from military service on conscientious grounds. He stated that he objected to joining the R.A.M.C. because its main purpose was to keep the maximum number of men in the firing line. The boys heard next day for the first time of these views, and steps were taken to organise a protest. When the master met his first form the next day things were very unsettled. A note pinned on his desk read: "The man who takes this class is a 'funk,'" and several boys arrived with quill pens made of big white feathers. A form of older boys who were due to take a lesson in the afternoon "cut" it in a body and sent a protest to the headmaster, in which they stated that "the boys of Harrow, one of the leading public schools, object to being prepared for the army by a master who objects to going into the R.A.M.C." The master then tendered his resignation, which was accepted.

Runciman Progressing.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Runciman is making satisfactory progress. He will not, however, resume his duties at the Board of Trade for some time. The sleeplessness from which he has been suffering has been rendered more acute by his gallant efforts to go on with his work, notwithstanding his illness.

For some time he tried the expedient of having his head massaged, but at last his medical advisers insisted upon rest as the only real cure. Before going for a holiday Mr. Runciman offered to resign. Very properly the proposal was scouted by the Prime Minister.

M.P.'s Brilliant Son.

Lieut. Arthur Walsh, eldest son of Mr. Stephen Walsh, British Labor M. P. for the Ince Division of Lancashire, has been gazetted a temporary captain in the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment. Lieut. Walsh, who is only 23, had already taken his degree as Master of Arts when, on the outbreak of the war he enlisted as a private in the Territorial Force for general service. It was not long before he was drafted into the Officers' Training Corps, being afterwards gazetted second lieutenant in a Manchester City Battalion. Lieut. Walsh won his way unaided from the elementary school to the university by means of scholarships. He first won a scholarship which took him from the elementary day school to Wigan Grammar School, and there he was awarded the Powell Scholarship, which took him to Owen's College, Manchester, where he not only took his B. A. degree with honors but also carried off further scholarships, which enabled him to prosecute his studies at the Sorbonne, Paris. After two years at the Sorbonne with brilliant success, he was awarded the degree of Licentiate of Letters by the University of France, and later proceeded to his degree of Master of Arts. Just before the outbreak of war he was appointed assistant master in languages and literature and mathematics at the Nelson Municipal Secondary School.

He Would Never Know.

A well-known English novelist recently found himself in a train with two very gushing ladies. Having recognized him from his published portraits, they began to praise his novels in a manner which was unendurable to the sensitive author. Presently the train entered a tunnel, and in the darkness the novelist raised the back of his hand to his lips and kissed it soundly.

When light returned he found the two ladies regarding one another in icy silence. Addressing them with great suavity, he said: "Ah, ladies, the one regret of my life will be that I shall never know which of you it was that kissed me!" From latest accounts the ladies have not yet spoken to each other.

Fighting in Jungles.

A vivid account of the fighting in East Africa shows that the enemy has the advantage of irregular lanes skilfully cut designed in the thick, thorny bush, where machine-guns were able to engage in cross-fire. Snipers were artfully disposed in trees and in contracted open spaces. The work of locating them was risky under these conditions. The enemy's native troops were formidable, but in the open the armored cars commanded by naval officers created terror in the minds of the natives, who named the cars "Rhinoceros."

Nicely, Thank You.

Mr. Arthur Roberts tells an amusing story of an unsuccessful comedy. When the curtain rose at a matinee performance there were fifteen people in the audience. In the front of the house there was only a young girl in the second row. In the first row of the balcony sat one young man. As the leading man spoke his first line, "The sea is purple: have you, too, noticed it?" the voice of the young man in the balcony responded: "I don't know about the young lady downstairs, but I can see it very nicely up here."

"The Cobbler."

A game that is very enjoyable is called "the cobbler."

The cobbler sits in the middle on a stool or hassock, and the others join hands and dance around him. "Now, then, customers," says the cobbler, "let me try on your shoes," and at the same time, but without leaving his seat, makes a dash for some one's feet. The aim of the others is to avoid being caught. Whoever is caught becomes cobbler.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS
Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

FATHERHOOD OF GOD SHOWN IN SCRIPTURE

Blessing of Present Harmony With God.

Signification of the Word Father—This Relationship Means Responsibility—How Mankind Lost Their Sonship—God's Character Sadly Misunderstood—The Heavenly Parent's Love for His Human Offspring—Who Are Now Sons of God—All of the Fallen Race to Have Opportunity of Becoming God's Sons—Human Sons and Spiritual Sons.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

Portland, Maine, July 23. —Pastor Russell spoke here today before the I. B. S. A. Convention being held in our city this week. His discourse was based upon the opening clause of the Lord's Prayer — Our Father, which art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy name." (Matthew 6:9.) A condensed report follows:

The word father and the thought behind it should be very impressive to us all; yet it is sadly true that many who bear this name manifest but little regard for what is right and obligatory in connection with their fatherhood. It is very different, however, with the Heavenly Father, who is the Perfect One, who meets fully all the obligations resting upon Him, and who is a Father in the truest sense. The imperfection and weakness of human fathers only manifest the more by contrast the glorious perfections of the Father in Heaven—His Love, His Power.

The term father signifies life-giver, one who bestows life. The Bible declares that the great Jehovah God is the Fountain of life, the One from whom everything proceeds, the One "in whom we live and move and have our being." (Acts 17:28.) All life emanates from Him alone. Without Him nothing could exist. When we have before our minds the thought that God is a great Father, a true Father, we also have the thought which is properly connected therewith—that He recognizes the responsibility of a Father—a matter which very many of the fallen race of Adam little appreciate, but which Bible students are coming more and more to appreciate

Every earthly parent has a responsibility in connection with his children. It is his duty to see that they are provided for, as respects clothing, shelter, food for both mind and body, etc. To make such provision is a part of a father's duty; and whoever does not expect so to provide or has no good reason to believe that he will be able to do so has no moral right to bring a child into the world. Thoughtful provision for such child should be made before it is brought into being. This seems to be a just and right principle, and one generally recognized by all intelligent people.

People Misled by False Theology.

Then surely this principle would apply to the great Father from whom comes every blessing. But this contradicts much of the theology that has been given to us; for when the creeds tell us that God is all-wise, all-loving, kind and good, they spoil it all by stating that, notwithstanding His Love, Justice, and Wisdom, He is sending the vast majority of our race to endless torture. In other words, the creeds imply that God has made a miserable failure in creating mankind, and that His Plan of Salvation is a farce. We should have known better than this, even without a Bible. Could we not have seen that the Plan of the great Father of Mercies, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, who has all power at His command, could not be such a failure—that in harmony with His glorious character, He could not bring into existence an entire race, knowing that 999 out of every 1,000 of them would spend eternity in torture?

The only reasonable explanation for our credulity in this respect is that which the Apostle Paul gives; namely, that the Adversary the Devil has greatly misrepresented our just and loving Creator. Satan, the god of this world, has so blinded the minds of many by the delusive theories which he promulgated during the Dark Ages that the majority seem unable to reason intelligently upon the subject of religion. St. Paul declares that "the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." (1 Timothy 4: 1.) This prophecy has been fulfilled. There has been a great falling away from the primitive faith of the Church; and heathenish theories, which were no part of the Scriptures, were introduced to frighten the people and to bring them into submission to ambitious leaders.

We have been deluded into thinking of our great God as a great demon, all-powerful and all-wise, but not all-good, who has brought into existence millions of people whom He knew would be compelled to suffer eternal torment. The Adversary has a shrewd way of continuing his deceptions. When the thought is suggested that if God knew that the result of Adams' disobedience would be that the majority of his posterity would suffer eternally. He could not be just to have permitted the propagation of the race, Satan is quick to suggest, "God would have destroyed Adam if He could; but, having made man with an immortal soul, even the Creator cannot destroy mankind now."

From no other source than from the great Adversary of God and man did this idea emanate—that in creating man God gave him something that even the Almighty cannot take from the race. How puerile such a God would be This prevalent but erroneous thought is directly contradicted by our Lord Jesus Himself, who said, "Fear Him who is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna"—the Second Death. (Matthew 10:28.) The Almighty God, who knew the end from the beginning, would bring no beings into existence whom He could not destroy when they had proved themselves unworthy of the blessing of life.

No Eternal Life in Misery.

Furthermore, the Bible declares, "All the wicked will God destroy." (Psalm 145: 20.) How simple, how reasonable, the Bible is! We get our confusion of thought by neglecting the Word of God and taking instead the traditions and vagaries of men, which have been handed down from the Dark Ages. Bible students, however, are finding the wisdom of going directly to the Word of God. The wisdom from Above is what we need, not the wisdom of this world, which is foolishness with God, and which is becoming more and more foolish to all thinking people. The Heavenly wisdom comes only from the Word of God. 1 Corinthians 3:19-21; James 3:17.

In taking the text which I have chosen, and in saying that I greatly appreciate the thought there presented of a loving Heavenly Father, do not misunderstand me to mean what many to-day mean when they speak along this line. Some very learned people talk about "the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." Doubtless they mean well enough in referring to God as the Father of the entire human race in their present fallen condition; but they speak contrary to the Bible. The Scriptures exhort us not to lean to our own understanding, nor to that of other people, but rather to inquire, "What saith the Lord? Does God's Word say anything about the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man?" —Proverbs 3: 5, 6; Isaiah 8:20.

There we find that mankind are the offspring of God, that He is their Creator, the One who gave them being. But the Bible does not say that He is now the Father of the race, in the sense in which many think that He is. These urge the theory of universal salvation of mankind, saying that because God is the Life-giver of the world therefore He will save the entire race. We are not faulting this class; for they are sincere in their thought. Personally, I would greatly prefer to believe in universal salvation than in universal damnation. But the Bible takes neither of these extreme positions.

What the Bible Teaches.

The plain declaration of the Bible is that our first parents, Adam and Eve, received life from God, and its perpetuity was promised them only upon certain clearly specified conditions. They were plainly forewarned that if they met these conditions, they would continue to live; if they failed to be obedient, they would die —cease to live. There was not even a hint given of a life continued eternally in torture, as the penalty of disobedience.—Genesis 2:17; 3:19; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; Romans 6:23.

In forewarning our first parents as to the sure result of disobedience, God also intimated that in such a case He would disown them, would no longer be their Father. They became disobedient, and thereby lost all right to life. Thus from God's standpoint, the entire race of Adam is dead—condemned, not to eternal torment, but to death. The right to life has been taken away. They are under legal condemnation to death.

Thus we see that the human family are not now the children of God. Adam was a son until he forfeited that blessed relationship; but from his day onward no member of his race is called a son of God, except our Lord Jesus, while He was in the flesh. He was a Son of God before He came to earth a man; but His spiritual life was given up in order that He might become a perfect man, to die for Adam and his race, and thus to open up the way whereby the whole world might come back into the relationship of sons of God, might regain what Adam lost for himself and for his family. "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." (Hebrews 2:9.) This does not mean universal salvation, however.

God's Plan Just and Reasonable.

When our Lord Jesus came into the World, He opened up a way whereby those who would believe on Him and would sacrifice as He did, becoming His followers, might become sons of God on the spiritual plane, yea, the very highest plane in existence—the Divine plane. These, if faithful unto death, would share the glorious reward which the Father had promised to our Lord Jesus—immortality, life in its highest form. But the religious leaders of His day did not believe on Him, did not receive His Message; and during His ministry only about five hundred of the people believed. The god of this world—Satan—blinded their eyes.—2 Corinthians 4:4.

The people asked, "Have any of the Scribes and Pharisees believed on Him?" When they learned to the contrary, they concluded that there was nothing in the Message. They took the course that many are taking to-day.

It may be asked, Why did our Lord not open the way for the whole world to become spiritual sons of God, instead of for only an elect class? We answer, We are sure that God is taking the best way; for the whole Plan is of Him. He could have kept the way of salvation closed until the Millennium, and then have done for all alike. But this was not His Plan. He purposed first to gather out of the world an elect Church. This is not an arbitrary Plan, however; for He is not selecting any contrary to their own wills. All who are called have the privilege of accepting or rejecting the Call. Whoever prefers to wait until the next Age, and take the opportunity then to be offered to the world, may do so; but the offer then to be made will not be nearly so glorious as that now held out.

There are some who desire to know and to do the will of the Lord, if only they are shown what it is. To this class God purposes to show His Plan and to give them His choicest blessings. He gives them the opportunity to join with Jesus in His sacrificial work for humanity, the privilege of suffering with Him now that they may reign with Him by and by, in the Kingdom. Foreknowing that there would be a class of this kind, who would gladly give up the pleasures and the ambitions of the present life for the far grander blessings which He has to bestow, God has given them the privilege. He has sent forth His Message far and wide, to let this class know of their opportunity.

The Class Which God Now Seeks.

For over eighteen hundred years this call to sainthip has gone forth in a quiet way. But comparatively few have responded, and the world has generally set it at naught. People in general do not think it worth while to go to some small upper room to attend a little prayer-meeting or to some ordinary hall to hear preaching. They prefer to go to some fine edifice to hear an eloquent oration and charming music. God has permitted His Truth to be thus obscured from the worldly-wise and self-sufficient, and to let it appear as if the Gospel were accomplishing little or nothing. But all along He knew just what He was doing. He was accomplishing just what He had designed. He has always known them that were His. 2 Timothy 2: 19; Isaiah 55:8-11.

The class which God is selecting now have sharp ears for the true Gospel Message. When they hear of the Love of God in Christ, they believe it. They listen to God's Word, rather than to human theories and traditions. They become pupils in the School of Christ, followers of the Lord Jesus. The Master did not have a smooth way. His path was rough and thorny. Some, when they learn this fact, stop immediately. Others, however, press onward, even though they know the way to be narrow and rough. They desire to get back to God; for they find satisfaction nowhere else.

These hear that our Lord Jesus will become an Advocate for whoever contracts to follow in His steps, and that the Father will not receive them without this Advocate to make good for their weaknesses and blemishes. They learn that our Lord will become the Advocate of any who will accept His terms—"If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." To deny self means to give up one's own will and take the Master's will instead. Whoever takes this step will find various crosses and difficulties along the way. The contract is not to last for a month or for a year, but for life. Our Lord guarantees that His grace will be sufficient for all who follow Him, that His strength is made perfect in weakness. Surely this is sufficient assurance.

There are not many of this class anywhere. But it is only to these that God now becomes the Father. There are the sons of God, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit. These say with their Master, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God! The Law is written in my heart." If in their hearts they should say, "I know that I have to do God's will, and so I will do it." He would say to them, "Go back; for I am seeking only those who love My will, not those who serve merely through fear or compulsion." Those who take a stand with Christ must burn all the bridges behind them when they enter the narrow way. They are to follow the Lamb withersoever He goeth. Only such will constitute the Bride class.

"The Father Himself Loveth You."

It is only after we have received the begetting of the Holy Spirit that we are privileged to say, "Our Father which art in Heaven." The world cannot call God their Father, but through our Redeemer the Church has this privilege. And so the Apostle says, "Now are we the sons of God." (1 John 3:1, 2.) But as such, we are not free from the aches and pains incident to the groaning creation. While in the flesh we must suffer, but still we are the sons of God, in the sense that we have the begetting of the Holy Spirit. In the resurrection change, however, we shall really be the children of God.

By nature we were children of Adam, condemned to death in him. But when in our consecration we gave up everything pertaining to the human nature, our Lord received us and made us acceptable to the Father, who then begot us with His Holy Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry "Abba, Father!" This is a blessed position; for our Heavenly Father is in perfection what earthly parents should be. He has made every provision for us. Our Lord Jesus is simply carrying out our Father's Plan.

This brings us to one of the most precious texts in the Bible: "The Father Himself loveth you." It is a wonderful thought that the great God, the Almighty, should love those who are so weak and small as we are. We can understand how He might tolerate us and endure us if we came into harmony with Him; but the thought that One so infinite in Wisdom and Power should LOVE US seems marvelous indeed. When we realize our own littleness, realize that we are mere bundles of imperfection, we marvel at the love of God for His children.

Twinges of Lumbago

Poisons left in the blood by deranged kidneys cause rheumatism, lumbago, backache and bodily pains.

Lasting cure is only obtainable when the activity of the kidneys is restored.

This is best accomplished by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, because of their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. The system is cleansed, the blood purified and the pains and aches disappear.

FOR QUEBEC RECRUITING

Appeal to Catholic French For France And Church

A spirited appeal by Sir William Peterson, president of McGill University, reads thus: "The published figures relating to recruiting in Quebec and the other provinces of the Dominion show a very marked balance against Quebec; especially as compared with Ontario, the returns for Quebec are the reverse of satisfactory, both absolutely and relatively. The Maritime Provinces, with a very much smaller population, have done nearly as well as Quebec. There may be something that is soothing to British vanity in the proof that the English-speaking population of Quebec have done fully as well as Ontario. But Quebec as a whole stands in need of some such stirring manifesto as Mr. John Redmond issued to the young men of Ireland. He pointed out to them that 'this was a just war, provoked by the intolerable military despotism of Germany; that it was a war in defence of the rights and liberties of small nationalities, and that Ireland would be false to her history and to every consideration of honor, good faith and self-interest if she did not respond to his appeal.'

"May not these words be applied with equal force and appropriateness to French-speaking Canada? To the average person, who can look away from local issues to the spectacle of the world's agony, it would appear that Quebec has, if anything, a greater stake than any other province in the issue of victory or defeat. One thing that is certain is, that there should be sounding to-day in the ears of the French-Canadians a call to arms rendered imperative by the dual nature of association.

"To the lover of France, under whatever guise he may choose to view her, the duty is clear. For him, when the existence of that France, past, present and to come, is at stake, there can be no excuse, and there should be no hanging back. Has he ever thrilled to read of the greatest soldier and the finest army known to history, to think that both were French? The Imperial eagles are soaring upwards once more towards a fresh Austerlitz and a greater and finer Jena. Is he a lover of liberty, a democrat?—liberte, egalite, fraternite—up, for the armies of the first Republic in the world are striving to hurl back the hordes of militant autocracy in a greater Valmy. Is he a Christian—nay, more, 'bon catholique?' Then ten times more should there be no hesitation. The white cross of St. Louis is once more in the field against the infidel. The Cathedral of Jeanne D'Arc has been defiled by the Hun. Happy are those from Quebec Province who have gone and are going forward. May their number be increased! The tide of war is turning now, and now it is time to play a man's part in the final triumph."

Men Got Own Chaplain

If the 99th Essex Battalion is fortunate in the type of men in its ranks, it is also especially favored in its officers. The chaplain Capt. G. W. Plews, is an Englishman and a graduate of English universities, but who after preaching in Methodist pastorates in the State of Michigan for some time, enlisted as a private in the Essex Battalion, and so endeared himself to the men that they insisted upon him being their chaplain.

Amsterdam learns that the German commander at Louvain ordered closed a new restaurant which had been named "Cafe Wilson," in honor of the American President. The restaurant had been doing a rushing business.

The Peace Kite

It is a sign of the times that Germany is again flying Peace Kites.—From "To-day," London.

Futility of Hate

B.L.T. writes in Chicago Tribune: The weakness of some Irishmen is hatred of England, more futile than the Corsican vendetta. Hate is sheer waste of time and energy. Britannia rules the waves because the English are poor haters; a negative virtue, perhaps, but a virtue. The Tommies on the western front listen with unfeigned delight to the Teuton Hymn of Hate, and then proceed to sing as they march—

'Ite of the eart an' 'ite of the 'and,
'Ite by water an' 'ite by land!
'Oo do we 'ite to beat the band?—
Hengland!

There is no use in hating the English. They won't take it seriously. A man or nation that cherishes hate has given hostages to fortune.

K.'S "ALLEGED" JOKE

Was Really Funny When Talking to Maori Girl

Lord Kitchener is immensely pleased with the work of the New Zealanders and Australians in the war, and has expressed his admiration of them in no slight terms. Apropos of this fact, it is interesting to recall that it was in New Zealand that his lordship made one of the very few jokes of his life.

When "K. of K." was in New Zealand he was taken to see a remarkable cave by a pretty Maori girl who acted as his guide. She informed him that if a Maori wants to insult anyone he calls him by the name of some kind of food. Once a certain Maori chief told another that he was roast veal and then fearing vengeance he fled to this particular cave where, however, he was followed and killed by his grossly insulted enemy.

Lord Kitchener listened to the story with great interest. "Ah!" he exclaimed, stroking his moustache with one of his rare smiles, "then I suppose it would be highly dangerous to call a Maori lady a little duck."

ORDERS HEARSE; ENDS LIFE.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 22. — After calling up an undertaker at West Palm Beach on the telephone and ordering a hearse to meet him near the city, R. W. Hutchinson, a wealthy tourist, of Pittsburg, Pa., and formerly connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad, committed suicide by shooting himself.

He tld the undertaker that he knew where there was a dead body and to meet him and he would show him where it was. The undertaker followed Hutchinson near the beach and the latter stepped behind an old house and shot himself.

"Fruit-a-tives Again Proves its Extraordinary Powers

ROCMON, QUE., March 2nd, 1915.

"I have received the most wonderful benefit from taking "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered for years from Rheumatism and change of life, and I took every remedy obtainable without results. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and it was the only medicine that really did me good. Now I am entirely well—the Rheumatism has disappeared, and the terrible pains in my body are all gone. I hope that others, who suffer from such distressing diseases, will try "Fruit-a-tives". MADAME ISAIE ROCHON.

NEW GOVERNOR OF CEYLON

Sir John Anderson Has Held Many Proconsulships.

Sir John Anderson, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., has recently been appointed to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon and its dependencies.

Sir John Anderson, who is already well known at a Colonial administrator, is a Scotsman by birth. He was born in Gartly, in Aberdeenshire, in 1858, and is the eldest son of Mr. John Anderson, Superintendent of the Gordon Mission in Aberdeen. He was educated at Aberdeen University, and passed from there with a first-class degree in mathematics, and the gold medal for the most distinguished graduate of his year. He was appointed to the Colonial Office in 1879, and held the Bacon Scholarship at Gray's Inn in 1887, and an Inns of Court Scholarship the following year. As private secretary to the late Sir R. Meade, he was attached to the staff employed on the Behring Sea arbitration, and by 1897 had risen to be principal clerk at the Colonial Office. He was secretary to the Conference of Colonial Premiers in 1897 and 1902, and accompanied the Prince of Wales on his Colonial tour in the latter year. From 1904 to 1911 he was Governor of the Straits Settlements and High Commissioner to the Federated Malay States, and from 1906 to 1911 High Commissioner to the State of Brunei. Sir John was made a C.M.G. in 1898, K.C.M.G. in 1901, G.C.M.G. in 1909, and K.C.B. in 1913. He has been Permanent Under Secretary of State for the Colonies since 1911.

The appointment of so strong and prominent a man to the Governorship of the isle of tea and "Spicy breezes," shows that the British Government is not inclined to take any chances of being caught unawares, by any secret machinations of the enemy in any of the remote corners of the Empire. It is understood that there are special reasons for carefulness in filling the appointment in Ceylon not to be revealed just at present, "in the public interests."

Meredith's Daughter-in-Law.

Mrs. Margaret Meredith, whose choral ode will be performed at the Kingsway Hall in aid of wounded soldiers, is a daughter-in-law of the great novelist, George Meredith, and daughter of John Maclean, the engineer associated with De Lesseps in the construction of the Suez Canal. Her son has won the Military Cross.

Scotland is Rich.

"Scotland has rarely, if ever, possessed in the hands of its wage-earning people so much ready cash, says the Glasgow Herald. Glasgow is revelling in gold. Ask the shopkeepers. Ask the directors of our places of public entertainment. Ask the publicans themselves.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

LORD LONGFORD KILLED.

Peer Who Missed Death by an Inch in South Africa.

Previously reported wounded and missing, the name of Brigadier-General the Earl of Longford now comes into the casualty lists as killed. Lord Longford, born in 1864, became a second lieutenant in the 2nd Life Guards in 1887. Twenty years later he was commander of the regiment. Meanwhile he had seen active service in South Africa. He was on his honeymoon when the Boer War broke out, but immediately proceeded to the front with the Yeomanry. He was with the 45th (Dublin) Co. Imperial Yeomanry, which he raised and commanded, when it was surrounded by De Wet at Lindley. A bullet hit and badly wounded him in the neck, and the surgeons afterwards told him that if the bullet had struck an inch higher he would have been a dead man. On his return to Ireland he had another escape at the Curragh, a stray shot from a machine-gun carrying away his shoulder-strap. Lord Longford is the 11th peer who has died in the war, the others being Lord Annesley, Lord Brabourne, Lord Congleton, Lord De Freyne, Lord De La Warr, Lord Hawarden, Lord Kesteven, Lord Petre, Lord Seafield, and Lord Vernon.

The Earl of Longford was very popular in the army, partly perhaps because of his negligence in the matter of dress. He used to be chaffed a good deal about his strangely composite costumes. One day a fellow-officer pointed out that his boots matched ill with his breeches. "My breeches were made by a Fenian tailor," he replied, "and the boots by an Orangeman, so of course they don't agree."

Inventor of Smokeless Powder.

A remarkable man in many respects is Mr. Walter F. Reid, whose recent remarks regarding cotton and explosives have created so much attention. Although the general public knew little about him, Mr. Reid is a man whose position and attainments in the scientific world entitle his views to every respect and consideration.

It was he who invented smokeless powder, helped to found the Aeronautical Society, assisted the Aero Club as an expert, and has worked on committees for the Board of Trade. Incidentally, he has led an adventurous life in many lands. His invention of smokeless powder was a result of his experiences among the Red Indians, when he relied on his rifle for food.

On one occasion Mr. Reid was dying of thirst in the pampas of the Argentine. In his extremity he noticed his horse, during the night, licking the dew off the vegetation. Then he had an inspiration. He dragged his shirt over the grass until it was saturated, and then squeezed it out. He worked in this way for hours, and in the morning there was enough water to save the lives of both man and horse.

Naval Facts.

In the British shipbuilding yards, when the present orders are completed, well over 1,000,000 tons of shipping will have been turned out during the war. A ship which used to take eighteen months is now executed in twelve, although extravagant acceleration rates have been abolished. In one yard, which has never yet failed to keep the appointed day for delivery, the rate of work in the last twelve months has been one destroyer every seven weeks. Three aeroplanes a week are also part of its product; and this in spite of the fact that skilled men have been taken from the shipyards for the army and there is a cry for more men. They are building ships so fast in one yard that only one side of certain vessels can be finished till the ship next to it has been launched on account of lack of space. Not a yard of ground, not a minute of time, is wasted. The heads of these wonderful yards are enthusiastic over their work and its efficiency. One of these men spent £25,000 on an experimental tank for models of ships, while another spent £32,000 on a similar experiment. The tools and machinery for these colossal shipbuilding operations are huge. At one of the yards on the Tyne there is a crane that could lift an express locomotive off the Tyne high-level bridge, while some of the tools for the boring and lining of large projectiles weigh twenty-four tons.

"BIGGEST SET OF COWARDS——"

Lance-Corporal Tells How a Big Bombardment Feels.

A vivid picture of trench warfare is drawn by a lance-corporal, who, in a letter to his home at Boston, Lincs., says: "No doubt you have read of the big success we had the other day. I was in that lot, and I am glad to say I came out without a scratch, but I had some very narrow escapes. I think it is only by God's mercy that I am alive now. I did not imagine there was such a thing on earth as the lot I went through.

"The bombardment started about four in the morning, and lasted until five o'clock next day, tea time. I thought that hell was let loose. The noise of the guns was awful. They nearly deafened me. There were Jack Johnsons, whizz-bangs, trench mortars, and coal-boxes dropping all round me. If it had not been for the steel helmet I was wearing I should have got killed a hundred times over. Such terrible sights I never saw in my life before. At another time I should have died at the sight of such things. Some longed to get at the Germans although they were wounded. To make matters worse, it was raining and snowing all the time.

When the time came for the charge things were awful. The Germans came out of their trenches waving white rags and any other things they could get, surrendering in hundreds. They are the biggest set of cowards I ever saw in my life. They cannot stand an English bayonet charge, but they make horrible work of our trenches with their guns. They levelled them down all over, but the German prisoners say their trenches were worse than ours. If they were, God help them. The German trenches were blocked with their dead and dying.

"I am writing this letter without any clothes on to speak of. I was in an awful mess coming out of the trenches—but still I am quite happy and cheerful."

Command of the Sea.

In his essay on "True Greatness of Kingdoms and Estates" Bacon speaks thus of command of the sea:

"To be master of the sea is an abridgement of monarchy. Cicero, writing to Atticus of Pompey's preparation against Caesar, saith: 'Consilium Pompeii plane Themistocleum est; putat enim, qui mari potitur, eum rerum potiri' ('Pompey's plan is clearly that of Themistocles; for he believes that whoever has command of the sea will attain the supreme power'); and without doubt Pompey had tired out Caesar, if upon vain confidence he had not left that way. We see the great effect of battles by sea; the battle of Actium decided the empire of the world; the battle of Lepanto arrested the greatness of the Turk. There be many examples where sea-fights have been final to the war; but this is when princes or States have set up their rest upon the battles. But this much is certain: that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will; whereas those that be strongest by land are many times, nevertheless, in great straits. Surely, at this day with us of Europe the vantage of strength at sea (which is one of the principal dowries of this kingdom of Great Britain) is great; both because most of the kingdoms of Europe are not merely inland, but girt with the sea most part of their compass; and because the wealth of both Indies seems in great part, but an accessary to the command of the seas."

A Willing Worker.

An amusing incident is told which took place in one of the occupied districts of Belgium where the German occupier doles out potatoes to such of the starving people as agree to work for him. One recipient presented himself before the German authorities and declared himself quite ready in return for a supply of potatoes to work for the Germans and only for them. He seemed quite decided and genuine in his offer of work.

"Then you are quite willing to sign the declaration?" asked the German officer.

"Yes, quite willing."

"And what is your trade?"

"I am a grave digger," replied the Belgian stolidly.

Revenge!

An interesting discovery was made a few days ago, when a resident in the Eastern Counties picked up in a meadow what appears to be a message dropped by one of the Zeppelins that took part in a recent raid. It was in the form of a piece of pasteboard, on one side of which were the words, written in pencil, "Vengeance for L19," with a signature underneath. On the reverse side were some words in German which were so indistinct as to be undecipherable.

Novel Electric Signs.

Demonstrations with a new type of electric sign have been held in London, and have aroused considerable interest. It differs materially from the prevailing signs of this character which display words and phrases, for the reason that it can be made to show any desired message within the capacity of its letters virtually at a moment's notice; moreover, the message may be read either by day or by night. The elements are of special design, consisting of an array of white circular members, each of which is fitted with two metallic covers resembling eyelids. These are rotated by means of an electric motor in such a way as to uncover the discs.

Behind each of these is placed an electric light for illuminating purposes at night. In the sign with which the demonstrations were carried out there are nearly two thousand elements, and these are coupled to a single keyboard, which is selectively placed in relation with each monogram. By means of this keyboard the legend of the sign can be changed once a minute; consequently the idea is extremely useful for the flashing of news.

Mud Houses for English.

The possibility of using mud as a building material and so solving the urgent problem of providing cheap country cottages in the rural districts and housing accommodation in the areas where there has been a sudden influx of war workers, is being made the subject of an interesting experiment by the new Household and Social Science Department of King's College for Women, University of London.

Six mysterious looking walls have just been erected in the grounds at Camden Hill, each wall being composed of a different mixture of mud, with a view to testing which proves most suitable to the English climate.

"In each case the earth has been subjected to a different process of preparation. In one case waterglass has been added, in another soft soap and to the earth and soft soap in another case lime has been added. A 'grouting' of cement has been poured over the mud wall in yet another case, and there is one wall made of earth alone.

Colors and Heat.

In an attempt to illustrate graphically the relative values for summer wear of different colors in dress materials, an interesting experiment was recently conducted. Four strips of cloth, made of the same material and weight, but of different colors, were placed on a cake of ice and exposed to the sun. The fabrics were white, yellow, red, and black. The result showed in a striking way how white reflects the sun's rays while black absorbs them.

The ice covered by the piece of white cloth was not melted to any appreciable degree during the test; that under the yellow strip was slightly depressed; a deep cut was formed beneath the red cloth, and a groove approximately twice as deep as that covered by the latter was melted under the black fabric.

White-Washed Kerbstones.

Since the exigencies of war have made it necessary largely to eliminate street lighting in British cities, it has been found advisable in certain instances to whitewash the kerbs on either side of public thoroughfares so as to make it easier to discern the roadways at night.

At Norwich a pneumatic painting-machine carried on a steam wagon has been successfully employed for doing this work. The lime solution is forced through a hose under air-pressure and directed at the kerb. A nozzle especially designed so as to prevent the spreading of the wash beyond certain limits is used. With this equipment the work can be done at a rate of about three miles an hour.

Soldier and Poet.

Lieutenant Herbert Asquith, the author of a little volume of poems being published, is a son of the Premier. "There are only eight poems in the little volume," says Mr. Jackson, of Sidgwick and Jackson, the publishers, "and several of them were written in Flanders, where the author was wounded on service. The manuscript was delivered to us from Downing Street a fortnight ago, and is being rushed out before Christmas. Lieutenant Asquith is now home on leave. It is the first volume he has published, but he has been an occasional contributor to The Spectator under the pseudonym of 'Subaltern.'"

They Remember Byron.

There is at least one Englishman for whom Greek affection has never wavered—Lord Byron. Not only is he commemorated in Greece by statues and street names, but his portrait is to be found everywhere in the most unlikely places. Mr. W. Miller, in his "Greek Life in Town and Country," tells how he came upon a portrait of the poet in a provincial restaurant. The moment he took notice of it "the proprietor, a stout, prosaic-looking man, whom no one would have suspected of sentiment, stepped towards the picture, clasped his hands in pathetic gesture, and, with a far-away look in his eyes, stood for a time in rapt admiration of the great Philhellene."

National Emblems.

On the origin of the adoption of the thistle as the emblem of Scotland history is almost completely silent, but tradition is as glib as ever. According to one story, the Danes were stealing barefooted through the darkness towards the Scottish camp (in spite of their rule which regarded a midnight attack upon an enemy as unwarrantable), when one of the soldiers suddenly trod upon a thistle. Involuntarily he uttered a cry of pain, and the Scotsmen, being aroused, leaped to their feet, hurled themselves upon the Danes, and inflicted fearful slaughter upon their foes.

The origin of the "wearing of the leek" by Wales is still a matter of archaeological disputation. Welsh ecclesiastical tradition ascribes it to St. David, who caused the Britons under King Cadwaladr to distinguish themselves by wearing a leek in their bonnets when they fought against the Saxons. Shakespeare, however, ascribes he origin to an incident in the Battle of Crecy.

Tallest Privy Councillor.

Mr. John Xavier Merriman, statesman, orator, economist, farmer, surveyor, and last Premier of the Cape Colony before the South African War, was born in Somersetshire and went to South Africa at the age of eight. He is the tallest Privy Councillor in the Empire.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

When you make a dress for your daughter you know not only the fabric that goes into it but the labor; this is worth a great deal when we consider that girls, too, are very much "on the go" up to the age of 12 years, and when we remember that ready-made dresses are seldom properly finished unless bought at a specialty shop where prices are prohibitive—and even then the material may not be up to the standard of that which you would buy for home dressmaking.

The dress illustrated answers the question HOW to make a trim, smart little dress on simple lines, but with that "something catchy" to its style. The closing outline is well worthy of notice; the shoulders are shaped with a tuck in each front, turned toward the armhole. The long waist body is gathered to a skirt which has eight plaits in each half, an arrangement that gives the panel front to the model. A large bow tie at the neck marks the closing outline all the more as the distinguishing feature. Large fancy buttons are used and long or short sleeves employed. The collar, cuffs and belt are of contrasting goods.

Gingham, linen, repp, ratine, novelty checks are suitable materials for de[illegible]

The pattern of dress, No. 7,830, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. To make in size 8 will require 3¼ yards of 36 inch material, ⅛ yard of contrasting goods in same width.

You may obtain the pattern by sending [illegible] to the office of this publication

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

RUSSIANS PIERCE HINDENBURG'S LINE

The British Fight Their Way Into Pozieres

Fleet of German Destroyers Is Driven Off

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFUL EVERYWHERE

BRITISH DRIVE IS STILL GOING ON

Kuropatkin's Armies Have Battered Their Way Through German Line Below Riga--Further South the Austrian Resistance is Shattered, the Russians Dominating Both Banks of the Lipa River---British Hold Large Portion of Pozieres and Fighting is Continuing With Advantage to Allies.

GERMAN DESTROYERS FLED FROM BRITISH

PETROGRAD, July 24. — Russian armies have blasted and battered their way through the German line below Riga and further south have shattered temporarily the Austrian resistance to a further Russian advance toward northeastern Galicia and Hungary. Violent German counter-attacks northeast of Kovel have been repulsed. To-day a violent artillery duel was in progress between the forces of Generals Kuropatkin and Von Hindenburg. That the Czar's troops have been able successfully to pierce Von Hindenbury's line, considered the strongest to which the Russians are opposed, was hailed here as one of the striking achievements of the war. To the south Russian troops now dominate both banks of the Lipa from the styr to near Mirkow, and in some parts of the line have thrust forward eight or ten miles beyond the river. Brody is menaced with an enveloping movement. Southern Russian forces control many of the approaches to Jablonitza Pass, and have forced the retirement of the Austrians to the crests of the hills beyond. To emphasize Russian successes, came the full report to-day of more advances by Grand Duke Nicholas' army in the Caucasus. The Turks are in full retreat along the full line toward Erzingan.

The British Gain Important Advantage

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 24.—Amid a blast of artillery fire hurled from big guns, the British forces have advanced still further in their thrust around Posieres, Gen. Sir Douglas Haig reported to-day. The fighting is continuing with the advantage with the British. The gains made are near the high road to Posieres. "We secured important advantages in spite of the enemy's stubborn defense," he stated. "A large portion of the village is now ours. We took two guns and sixty more prisoners." General Haig said that repeated German counter-attacks made yesterday between High Wood and Guillemont had been without success, and that the British artillery and machine guns had inflicted heavy casualties. Last night was one of comparative calm.

German Destroyers Are Driven Off

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 24.—The British sea patrol squadron drove off a German raiding destroyer fleet Saturday night according to an Admiralty statement to-day. British patrol vessels, characterized as "light forces," sighted three enemy destroyers Saturday at midnight near the North Hinder Lightship. The squadron retired before the British cruisers were able to inflict any damage on them. Subsequently six enemy destroyers approached and were engaged by the British sea forces in a running fight off Shouwen bank. The German ships were repeatedly hit but succeeded in reaching the Belgian coast. "One of our vessels was hit once," the statement concluded, "and two of our men were slightly wounded."

Aerial Activity On the French Front

Examiner Special:

PARIS, July 24.—Extraordinary aerial activity on both sides of the French-German battle line was reported in an official communique to-day. Luneville was the object of a German air raid. A French aerial raider on Sunday dropped eight bombs on Conflans station, and a number of others on buildings at Dieuze and Vigneulles. Aviator Chaput brought down on Sunday his eighth German aeroplane in a combat near Fresnes. One other German machine was destroyed near Vaux on the same day. On the right bank of the Meuse the French forces captured 30 prisoners. During the last ten days in this section eight hundred prisoners have been taken. North of the Aisne a trench was cleared. In the Somme region bad weather is interfering with the operations.

BODY OF RAY GUERIN IS FOUND IN LITTLE LAKE

Was Floating Near Central Pier About Half a Mile From Where Accident Occurred---Canoeists Discovered the Body

FUNERAL TO-DAY

The body of Ray Guerin, the twelve-year-old son of Pte. Adelard ('Teddy') Guerin, 101 Simcoe Street, who was drowned in the Otonabee river on Friday evening, was recovered yesterday afternoon about 3.30. The body of the unfortunate lad was found floating near the central pier, but a short distance off the cemetery point, and half a mile from the spot where he was drowned.

A number of lads who were out boating on the lake were the first to espy the corpse of the drowned lad, and after calling for aid the body was conveyed to McDonald's Point, where it rested until the arrival of the ambulance. Messrs. Lane & Eano took charge of the bdy and it was taken to their undertaking parlors.

Judging by the badly decomposed condition of the unfortunate's body, it is evident that the body must have floated around a great deal since the time of the accident. It had been carried below the C.P.R. bridge by the current, and from the C. P. R. bridge around McDonald's Point, and as far as the spot where it was picked up.

The experiment which was tried to locate the body, viz., placing in the waters a loaf of bread containing mercury, and letting it drift with the current, proved its accuracy, as the body of the drowned lad was found but a short distance from where the loaf floated.

A number of searching parties from the city had spent the morning patrollin the river above the bridge in the hope that the lad's body was lying at the bottom near where it sank, but the swift current had done its work and carried the body farther down.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from Lane and Eano's undertaking establishment and proceeded to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

THE WEATHER

Some very warm weather has been experienced during the past week ,in fact every day since the 12th, when a high temperature figure of 93 degrees in the shade was set. While that figure has not been exceeded, it has been equalled on three days since, namely Saturday, Sunday and to-day. On Friday it was up to 90 degrees.—W.P

WHO WILL HELP?

The wife and family of a soldier, now on service at the front, needs some few things in the way of house furnishings. The story need not be related here, but the need is great. Things that have been used will do nicely. There is a plenty available if people will make it known. What is needed just now is:—

Three beds, complete, that is with springs and mattresses.
Six chairs.
Two tables. One, say, 5 x 3 feet, another smaller.
A chest of drawers, or some such thing to hold things.
Couple of pots and a tea kettle.

If people who have these things to spare will 'phone 261, the Patriotic Fund Office, the matters will be sent for. And thanked for. For they will help mightily. Who will 'phone first? Do it now.

GUNNER GILPIN OF PETERBOROUGH IS A PRISONER IN GERMANY

Word Received to This Effect---Major Ackerman Instructing the Snipers at Barriefield Camp---235th and 240th Battalions Will Go Into Camp When They Reach the 500 Mark---To-day's Military News.

That No. 302184, Gunner Harold Gilpin, a Peterborough boy who went overseas with the 38rd Battery, is now a prisoner in Germany, is the information that has reached the Examiner to-day. The news came to Mrs. LeBar, 306 Aylmer street, in a letter, and any local friends who wish to secure any additional information may obtain further details by calling at that address.

'Kingston Whig: Capt. James, quartermaster, and Capt. Clarke, medical officers, 235th Battalion, at Cobourg, were in camp on Friday morning. It is being arranged to have a little camp built outside of the town of Cobourg as an advertising stunt and popularity measure for the 235th. Here the battalion will be located until brought up to strength, which in consideration of the good methods in use, should not be very long. There are at present about 200 men in the battalion, but more are coming in steadily and in a few weeks the unit should be ready for Barriefield.

The officers of this battalion are firmly convinced of the value of advertising and they frankly admit that it is by full use of the newspapers they have been able to spread the name of the battalion far and wide and thus bring many men into the unit who would not otherwise be in khaki. The district used is Durham and Northumberland.

The 240th Battalion, which is being recruited in Perth and Lanark districts, has not yet launched on the big campaign. Most of the time since the authority came through for this unit has been devoted to the construction of the foundation for a good battalion.

Now that everything is ready the whole attention of the officers will be turned to recruiting work and with a good organization behind them they should find little trouble to make another 1,000 men see their duty and the need for enlisted men.

, Kingston, July 22.—The special training of the men for this great war has taken a firm hold on Barriefield camp, and almost every man is a specialist in some one or other branch of the service. There is the physical training and bayonet fighting expert, who puts all of his trust in cold steel and the possibility of building up a high standard of Canadian manhood. There are machine gun men who are confident that the machine gun is the only thing that is bad enough for a German, and he has the greatest confidence in fianlly plugging the Kaiser with this effective weapon. Again the bombers and grenade men impress on the soldiers that every person must be able to pitch bombs as accurate as narrow trench fighting demands. When this is accomplished, the Canadians can go through to Berlin and nothing can stop them.

The snipers have not been receiving their share of attention, and that branch of the work is to be attended to. Major Ackerman,, who was overseas with the 2nd Battalion and has for the last three weeks been at Valcartier on this work, has arrived and the training of expert marksmen for the popular sport of "getting" Huns via the lone bullet route will be started.

The major has had constructed a rifle rest worked on the ball and socket principle, which may be set in any position. This invention will be tried out to determine its value. There will be sections of twenty-five to each battalion chosen to be trained in sniping work. These men will be as expert in rifle handling as can be secured from that battalion. They will receive special instruction on the ranges and by lectures as to the demands on these men after they reach the front. After Major Ackerman leaves the work will be continued, and should have a beneficial effect on the musketry standard of the camp.

Members of the C.E.F. of good character who suffer from minor physical disabilities are not to be discharged. Arrangements are at present under way for all such men to form a special service battalion, and in case of any men answering these conditions the matter is to be reported to the D.A.A. and Q.M.G. for his action.

The following verses were written by Pioneer Everett Castle, Peterborough boy with the 80th Battalion draft to 75th Battalion, C.E.F., 11th Can. Inf. Brigade, now at Longmoor target ranges for musketry course:

One day a little drop of rain
Came dashing from the sky;
It lit upon a little hill
And caused the mud to fly.

Now later on a war broke out,
And to this place there came,
Sam Hughes 'army from Canada
To enjoy this mud and rain.

Just here a problem sprang to view
For this place has no name,
Because you know before the war
There was nothing here but rain.

And when the rain refused to cease,
The War Office saw no change;
They quickly hit upon a plan
To call it, Longmoor Range.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford returned from Borden Camp to-day, where he spent Sunday visiting his son, Lieut. Dunsford. Mr. Dunsford brought back with him a copy of "Khaki Life," a weekly publication, published at Camp Borden. It is a newsy sheet of the activities at the camp, and a very creditable production.

Mr. Dunsford is greatly impressed with the Camp. He says it is wonderful and everybody is settling down to camp life with satisfaction. While it is hot it cools off greatly at night, and is a drier air than in Peterborough, which made Mr. Dunsford feel that in coming home he was getting into a warmer belt than he was leaving.

BOWMANVILLE, July 3.—Lieut.-Col. S. B. Scobell, O.C. 235th Battalion, having received permission to open a camp here during recruiting for his battalion, is going under canvas to-morrow about 200 strong, the

Patriotic Fund Needs the Entire Amount Subscribed

PTE. ARTHUR PRITCHARD—A Peterborough member of the 8th C.M.R., who is a prisoner in Germany.

Financial Statement Shows That It Requires $8000 a Month to Take Care of the 739 Peterborough County Families Who Are Being Assisted.

A DEFICIT EXPECTED

The statement of the finances of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund was presented at the quarterly meeting, that should have been held on Tuesday evening last. The attendance was not large enough to take up the transaction of business, and the meeting was adjourned until Thursday evening of this week, at the patriotic office, and at eight o'clock. In the meantime the figures are presented. It will be seen that the entire amount as subscribed will be required, and that a deficit of over two thousand dollars will need to be met, if anticipated calls continue to augment with the enlistments.

It may be said that the enlistment of married men has reached in point of number away beyond what was ever expected. So much so that the demand on the resources is severely taxed to meet the schedule set out by the committee. This schedule of allowances is very carefully considered and the average per family is quite the lowest in the district, showing that due economy has been exercised. The last number registered is 730. This is also reflected in the lists all over the province.

It is urgently requested that subscriptions be paid in promptly, as the sum to the credit of the city and county, (even with the increased grant from the county) is only about enough to meet the monthly calls. Payment will relieve the trustees from some anxiety and assure that the money required will be ready from month to month.

CAPTURED IN POLAND

Special to The Examiner:

Paris, July 24.—Sub.Lieut. Marchall of the aerial service, was taken prisoner at Chelm, Russian Poland, after an eight hundred mile flight from Nancy, France. He dropped a proclamation on Berlin, stating that he could bombard Berlin and kill women and children, but chose not to do so. He had to descend 60 miles from the Russian lines.

Public Invited To Attend Meetings

Library Institute Meetings Open Here To-morrow Morning

Do not forget to attend the meetings of the Library Institute, which will be held in the Public Library Lecture Hall, to-morrow.

In the morning the time will be devoted to the registration of the delegates and to the organizing of the various committees.

At 1.30 p.m. the real business of the Institute will start and the public are most cordially invited to attend and gain some insight into library methods.

At the evening session an opportunity will be afforded of hearing the address by the new Inspector of Public Librarkes, Mr. Carson, and also one from Dr. Hardy, the well-known Secretary of the Ontario Library Association.

At 5 p.m., through the kindness of several Peterborough citizens the delegates to the Institute will be given a motor-car drive around the city.

BAND CONCERT IN KING EDWARD PARK

The band of the Salvation Army will give a concert in King Edward Park to-morrow (Tuesday) night for the benefit of the residents of that part of the city.

AUSTRALIAN ARMY DUE TO KITCHENER

LACKING A MARTIAL PAST BRITISH POSSESSION SENT EFFICIENT FIGHTER TO EUROPE.

Melbourne, Australia, July 21.—The callowest schoolboy cadet in khaki going through drill in an Australian town and the maturest business man hurrying in sweater and old trousers to rifle club practice after hours in a suburban area of Melbourne or Sydney, are living memorials of Kitchener of Khartoum. If the great soldier had done nothing else than establish the defense system of the commonwealth—the compulsory training feature of which has received much attention not only in Great Britain but in the United States as it deserves to receive—he would have placed the British Empire in his debt.

What he brought about in an essentially democratic country like Australia, with a huge territory and extensive coast lines and without a military past, such as other parts f the world possess, is a lesson to Americans, which none can fail to read.

Lord Kitchener came to Australia and New Zealand in 1909-10. The first port at which he touched was Darwin, far up on the admittedly vulnerable northern side of the continent, and thence he came to Thursday Island, Brisbane, and Sydney. It did not take him long to find out all the military resources, weaknesses and possibilities of the nation, and it was he who subsequently formulated the schemes by which the Antipodean dominions have raised and trained their armies for the great struggle now going on. In a speech at Sydney, in Jan., 1910, in response to one by the then Minister of Defense, Joseph Cook, Lord Kitchener said:

"It is on the navy that you must rely in the first instance to frustrate any designs of an enemy upon the isolated portions of your territory, and keep open safe communication with other parts of the world and the wide spread empire, and to protect the ever increasing commercial interest of this great country."

How prophetic these words were was demonstrated in the early stages of the war, when only the big cruiser Australia—whose guns were heavier than those of the Scharnhorst or Gneisenau—saved the Australian and New Zealand ports from a visitation by Admiral von Spee's squadron. Lord Kitchener had added in equally trenchant language: "It is however essential that it should be safe from attack, so that the navy may be always ready to go against any enemy, without any serious apprehension of the security of their dockyards and magazines. Complete security of this sort can only be obtained by efficient fixed defences supported by a mobile and efficient land force."

The part he played in Australian defence has just been set forth by Mr. Cook in this eulogy

"His connection with Australia and our new army is an old story now. It was at my suggestion—it would be more accurate to say, at my strong solicitation—that the then Prime Minister (Mr. Deakin) called for him to come to Australia. In the speech I made when introducing the Defence Bill of 1909—the bill which embodied the broad outlines of the present defence organization—I find the following reference to the matter:

" 'Then we have invited one of the best soldiers of the Empire—perhaps the Empire's most celebrated organizer—I allude to Lord Kitchener—to visit us and advise us as to the lines on which we ought to proceed in reference to all matters making for the organization and efficiency of our new army.'

"That was on Sept. 21, 1909. I met him on the following New Year's Day in Brisbane, and then followed a most busy and informative six weeks, during which I accompanied him through his tour of most of the States. We arranged with him for the appointment of Colonel Kirkpatrick as Inspector General of the new army, and also for General Bridges to be the commandant of the new Duntroon College. Our present defence scheme thus took shape, its development being handed over to the present Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, who succeeded me.

"In many respects the visit of Lord Kitchener was to me a complete surprise. One found that behind that grim taciturnity was a personality of very rare charm and cultivation. As I have already said, he was a great, many-sided man, with a wide outlook on life generally.

"He was, moreover, a great Australian, if I may so put it. He was a keen admirer of the Australian soldier. I remember his saying to me, when we were watching the Victorian troops swing home after the last Saturday morning manoeuvres at Seymour, 'Mr. Cook, the more I see of this material the better I like it, and I should like nothing better than to train and develop it.' I replied, 'Why not come and do it? We will do you well.' He was constantly impressing on me also that we should develop our army on Australian lines, and not be a mere copyist of any other country. We had certain qualities of our own which we should preserve at all cost.

"His wonderfully prescient judgment and advice have been completely borne out by our Anzacs. I repeat, that he knew and loved the Australian soldier."

BISHOPS IN BATTLE

What was the last occasion on which churchmen fought in battle? I do not mean as volunteers, as in the case of George Walker at Londonderry and the Boyne, but as part of the regular forces. According to Scott, "Tales of a Grandfather," chapter xxiv., the Scotch at Flodden (1513) left on the field two bishops and two mitred abbots. Also is it the case that churchmen went into battle armed only with a mace, in order to avoid the text, "He that taketh the sword shall perish with the sword?" At the Battle of Bouvines (1214), "the English on the right were broken by a fierce onset of the Bishop of Beauvais, who charged mace in hand, and struck the Earl of Salisbury to the ground" (J. R. Green, "Short History of the English People," ed. 1889, p. 126). If the following is to be understood literally, it would seem that if mediæval bishops did not take the sword, they had no scruple about taking the lance. Mr. Green, in his account of the peasant revolt in 1381, says, "The warlike Bishop of Norwich fell, lance in hand, on Litster's camp, and scattered the peasants of Norfolk at the first shock." What badge or crest, if any, did churchmen wear in battle in order to distinguish them from lay warriors?"

JAPAN'S PROSPERITY

Shipbuilding Trade Increases by Leaps and Bounds

Hugh Byas, an International News correspondent, writes from Tokyo: The war is revolutionising Japan's shipbuilding industry. Not even the German navy, in those strenuous years which preceded the war, made more rapid strides than the shipyards of Japan are making under the double stimulus of Government subsidies and the absorption of Europe's productivity in war. Japanese shipbuilding is entirely an artificial growth. In 1896 the Shipbuilding and Navigation Bounty Laws were passed. In 1898 the first large steamer (Hitachi Maru, 6,000 tons) was launched.

In 1912 the first two dreadnoughts were ordered. But owing to the backwardness of engineering and the small production of iron in the country, growth was slow, and the steamship companies, in spite of the bounty on home construction, found it cheaper and better to buy second-hand ships from England. In 1913 only seven steamers, totalling 17,183 tons, were built in Japan.

The number of ships to be launched during 1916 increased to 40 and the gross tonnage amounted to 160,000. There were on order at the end of January, 1916, an additional 41 steamers aggregating 284,900 tons—that is, there were then building and on order 81 steamships of an inclusive tonnage of 384,900. An increase of over 100 per cent. is thus shown. At the beginning of the war three Japanese dockyards were capable of handling big ships. Five are now constructing ships pu to 5,000 tons. Another complete dockyard is to be erected at Yokohoma under the egis of the Tokyo Kisen Kaisha which is extending itself greatly in the trans-Pacific trade. The Tokyo Kisen Kaisha plans to place six first class passenger ships on the trans-Pacific service vacated by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

RUSSIA'S FOOD SUPPLY

Organizing to Distribute Vast Quantities to Big Cities

The Czar has appointed a special commission to relieve the distress among the poorer classes in the large cities and industrial centres. With the aid of experts furnished by the Department of the Interior and the railway ministry the commission is to organize the distribution of food on an efficient basis. The commission has sweeping powers and may cause the arrest of all speculators cornering supplies to drive the prices up still further. All foodstuffs in the hands of speculators are to be confiscated and paid for at the market value.

Five members of the commission in the southern and Siberian provinces ascertained the exact amount of grain and the number of cattle that can be requisitioned and brought to large cities and thickly populated parts of the Empire. For the transportation of the supplies a special railroad service is to be organized. Over three hundred freight trains are to run to Moscow, Petrograd, Kieff, and other cities daily from Odessa and Siberia. For the distribution of the foodstuffs special bureaus are established in all cities and larger towns. The heads of these bureaus will be directly responsible to the Ministry of the Interior for the equal distribution of all grain, meats, etc., at the prices fixed by the Government. All sugar factories and canning establishments are brought under the control of the Government. The sugar manufacturers have been requested to give estimates of their possible maximum production and to place all of their stocks on hand at the disposal of the Government.

Mr. Bonar Law excels in indoor pastimes. He is the best chess player in the House of Commons, and he also is a first-rate bridge player and billiard player.

CALL AUSTRALIAN PREMIER ANOTHER ABRAHAM LINCOLN

LONDON, July 24.—Seldom in the recent history of English speaking peoples and perhaps never in the memory of Britain, has any politician almost unknown to the general public made so swift a conquest of the imagination and the enthusiasm of the masses as William Morris Hughes, the Prime Minister of Australia. Only the sudden achievement of William J. Bryan after his "Crown of Thorns" and "Cross of Gold" speech before the Chicago convention twenty years ago gives a parallel in America.

Last year Mr. Hughes was known to the United Kingdom as a colonial Premier, one of a list of overseas statesmen or politicians, with Borden, Fisher, Laurier and Ward, men whose names are familiar to Englishmen, whose personalities are merely vague shadows in the public mind. These colonial leaders always were treated with formal respect when they visited the Mother Country. A few public dinners and receptions, perhaps a knighthood, a decoration and a university degree were given them. But outside the official world a general who had conducted one of England's "little wars" or an explorer who had written some new names across the map was more of a personage.

Now the story of Hughes is the story of the most interesting civilian of the year in England. The self-made Yankee-like Welshman, the self-schooled workingman, protectionist, labour unionist, socialist, is now leaving the old country after a visit of four months, and is leaving a popular following comparable only to that commanded by another self-made Welsh politician, Lloyd George. The only reason Hughes has not made more public speeches, attended more banquets arranged to do him honour, given more newspaper interviews, received the freedom of more cities, addressed more Chambers of Commerce and accepted degrees from more universities, has been that his time was crowded to the utmost with such functions, and that his voice and his frail body succumbed at an early stage of the ordeal, and compelled him to retire for some weeks to a sanitorium.

A BRYANESQUE SPEECHMAKER.

The oratical output of the Australian Prime Minister has compared favourably with the efforts of an American Presidential candidate of the most heroic stuff. The number of addresses, large and small which the newspapers have reported stretch well past a hundred. At Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh, and other great provincial cities such crowds have welcomed his arrival as few public men in civil life have seen since the famous electioneering tours of Gladstone during his most popular years. He has made speeches before every type of public and private organization from municipal bodies through the various strata of scholastic and charitable societies. In the same week he has responded to the bestowal of the freedom of a conservative municipality (handed to him in a gold casket), greeted societies of Welshmen, received a degree from a university, stirred to enthusiasm a meeting of dock labourers on the Thames and gained kid gloved applause from a committee of peeresses engaged in war work.

The Hughes platform, roughly put, has been this: "War to the hilt against the Germans, both on the battlefield and in the field of trade. Commercial union within the British Empire, and closer union with a share for the colonies of making decisions on imperial questions that concern them."

The reason a colonial statesman could become a leader almost over night in the mother country was that there were currents of thought and agitations which were waiting for leadership. They wanted only a spokesman. They had advocates in the newspapers, but not among the weighty men in Parliament or in public life outside Westminster. While the war has enormously changed and focussed the work of the government, and rallied and brought together much of the latent power in a slow-moving people, it has not changed the tone of statesmanship, nor the conservatism with which the heavy guns of the coalition Cabinet cling to what they deem the high tradition of British public life. They have denounced the present enemies of the country, but have denounced them with dignity and with care to avoid what they would consider exaggeration. Many burning patriots accuse the government of handling vital matters too delicately. The up-to-date newspapers read by millions, notably the Northcliffe press, assert that mysterious influences work to shield German interests in Great Britain. "Ginger" groups have been formed by members of both parties in Parliament, but those groups have had no weightier leadership than that of Sir Edward Carson and Winston Churchill, both of whom are popularly rated as brilliant but unstable guides.

"GINGERING" POLICIES.

Mr. Hughes came to England by invitation of the government to confer on war matters. Australia and Canada have furnished fighting forces so large and so good that the Cabinet felt that they should have a larger voice in the direction of affairs than the old machinery gave them. Hughes did not regard himself as in any way an outsider nor a 'colonial.' In his first speech he took the position of a member of the family. This is the British Empire; my people are a part of it. I am one of you, with all the rights and privileges of a member of the firm. This was the tone of his first speech, and the same tone has permeated all of them. He advocated policies and he denounced policies. He scattered admonition and advice with a liberal hand. While he did not directly attack the government, he was soon acclaimed as the chief "gingerer." He asserted that he had driven German trade from Australia, and he proposed a plan for keeping the key industry of smelting, which is of equal importance to Australian mining industry, and the British consumer, in the hands of British companies.

Naturally the people who think as Mr. Hughes thinks crowded around him. The newspapers which are for "ginger" and the protectionist journals took him up and played him for all he was worth. When the commercial conference of the Entente Powers held in Paris was being arranged the Hughes press insisted that the Australian should go as a British delgate, and he was sent. Now that he is about to return home enthusiasts declare that the government should ask him to remain in England as a sort of free lance adviser. "No bloomin' fear!" the Cockney would say.

Mr. Hughes' campaign has not proceeded without exciting criticism and antagonism, although uttered in very considerable accents. This has come from two sources, those who dissent from the measures which Hughes proclaimed, and a certain few irritated that a colonial statesman should offer advice so freely to the mother country. One indictment was for 'approaching great and complex questions loosely and grandiloquently." Hints have been dropped that he was neglecting his own work in Australia.

"ANOTHER ABRAHAM LINCOLN"

"The Australian Abraham Lincoln" as Mr. Hughes has been called, whose life spans only fifty-two years, and who has risen in thirty-two years from the status of a humble emigrant to sit around the council table as a Privy Councillor, is anything but a strong man physically. He is thin, and pale, with a face resembling Robert Louis Stevenson's, but with the fire and energy which often glow in a frail body. His career has been a hard working one. An old Australian friend in Londo remembers his keeping a little umbrella mending shop in Sydney, and always with a book before him—some work on economics or philosophy, something in the line of Henry George or Herbert Spencer. His first noteworthy political enterprise was the organization of the unskilled workers on the Sydney docks. He advocated compulsory military service as early as 1901, and made it a plank of the Labour Party platform. As the head of the great State which has most nearly approached socialism his views on that system are interesting. His belief is that the growth of private monopolies narrows the issue to "co-operation for the benefit of the few versus co-operation for the benefit of the many."

The Hughes orations are more after the American than the British model. Compared with the classic, Oxford nurtured and precise diction of an Asquith; his style is as a Welsh chapel exhorter's to the Church of England ritual. It was because much of the country was in a mood for some prophet who would cut loose from the ritualistic atmosphere, and let himself go, that Mr. Hughes has been welcomed and acclaimed. He may be a portent of the leadership the nation will demand after the war.

"I like 'Bill' Hughes because he takes the big view," says 'Ben' Tillett, a labour leader. Certainly he has given the United Kingdom a fresh and stirring view. Books of his life and books of his speeches are in all the shop windows; postcard portraits are displayed with those of royalty, of generals and admirals and popular actresses. His name has been sprinkled through the pages of the newspapers the last month more profusely than any other except Kitchener's, is position may prove permanent, or the sober second thought of the people may write down the 'Big View' where the most sober and non-political of commercial journals has written it, as a "jumble of fallacies." But while the bushranger-umbrella mender-Prime Minister embarks for his colony, with his university parchments and his golden caskets in his modest trunk, the remarkable part he has played in making the old country sit up, seems worth recording.

COMPLIMENTS TO HUNS

Can Reader Guess What Nation is Mentioned Slightingly?

There is a nation that spits upon international law, upon treaties, upon pledges and agreements. It mistakes for terrifying strength ferocity and a blind, useless maiming and killing of harmless men, women and children; children seem to be its favorite subjects for Zeppelin slaughters. On land and sea, from under the sea and from the air, it kills non-combatants as unchalantly as an Apache of the old days would scalp a baby or dash out its brains against a doorpost. The madness for destruction which it can satisfy only in part on the monuments of Belgian and French art it feeds fat upon helpless, innocent human beings. The will to power scorns all the "sentimentalities" of honor. Wherever it can it makes a breach in the walls that the nations have slowly built against the old savageries of war. It murders right and left.—New York Times.

Like many other successful institutions, the Canadian National Exhibition was in financial straits many times early in its career. On one occasion one of the Directors gave his personal note for $10,000 before the gates could be opened. Now it pays an annual surplus to the City of Toronto.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Death of Dan Patch and Owner Savage a Great Loss

World's Champion Pacer Was 20 Years Old, and Held Many Records —His Owner Died the Day Following That of the Famous Horse —Mr. M. W. Savage Was a Multi-Millionaire.

In the death last week of the world's greatest pacer, Dan Patch, 1.55 1-4, and his owner, Mr. W. Savage, the light harness horse sport suffered the greatest loss in recent years. Curiously, too, both horse and owner died from the same cause (heart failure) and within 24 hours of one another.

Dan Patch died at the farm of his owner, Mr. M. W. Savage, which is situated at Savage, near Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Savage himself, who had been confined to a hospital in Minneapolis for a week, expired on the following day.

The career of the great pacer is without parallel in light harness history. Dan Patch was undoubtedly the most widely known and universally popular speed marvel that the turf has thus far seen. He never lost a race, and after he had retired from contest against his kind to contest against the scythe-bearer, he ascended step by step —or rather leap by leap—to an altitude which no previous performer had ever reached.

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER.

The splendor of his performances and the renown which accrued from them carried his name to every nook and corner of the U.S. and Canada, and made it familiar also to horsemen of all trans-Atlantic countries where harness sport is a feature. For ten years he was before the public and during that period he travelled more thousands of miles, appeared in more different towns and cities, and paced more sensational speed exhibitions, than any other horse ever known.

All who were ever fortunate enough to witness the champion 'side-wheeler' in action could never forget him. He moved like a piece of well oiled machinery, was true at heart, kind, game and as steady as the Rock of Gibraltar. Although he went in hopples he seldom made a break and he did his work as if he enjoyed it.

The immense sum which Mr. Savage paid for Dan Patch ($60,000) he returned to his owner many times. Since his retirement his name had been accorded among those of the greatest sires of extreme pacing speed. He was founding a family worthy of his fame, and at the close of 1915 he was credited with twenty-one 2.10 pacers; which is the record number to date, by any sire, living or dead.

DAN WAS 20 YEARS OLD.

Dan was foaled in 1896 at Oxford, Ind., his breeder being D. A. Messner, of that place. His sire was the celebrated "iron horse," Joe Patchen 2.01 1-4, in his day the champion pacing stallion. His dam was Zelica, by Wilkesberry, 2.30, and his granddam Abdallah Bell by Pacing Abdallah, 2906.

The records of the World's Champion Pacers, show that he first lowered the world's record, 1.59 1-4, which Star Pointer established in 1897, to 1.59, flat, at Brighton Beach, in 1903. This was in August, and the following October, at Mephis, he startled the world by pacing in 1.56 1-4. The next year he put in a mile in 1:56 flat, also at Memphis.

It was in 1905 that he crowned the edifice of his performances by a heat in 1.55 1-4 at Lexington, in October All these miles were paced behind a runner. At the close of 1905 records so made were barred so the mile in 1.55, under these conditions, which Dan paced at Hamline, Minn., in 1906, was never officially recognised.

HOLDS MANY RECORDS.

It would require a large volume to recite the history of Dan's turf career. He still retains the championship at a mile, at 1.55 1-4; at a half mile—56 seconds; at two miles—4.17; to wagon—1.57 1-4; and over half mile track—2.01.

The number of track records that Dan holds, the number of two minute miles that he paced, the number of people before whom he appeared, and the amount of money that he earned far exceed those to the credit of any other harness performer.

Marion Willis Savage was born on a farm in Ohio, March 26, 1859, and he had only turned his 57th year. Going west while young he located in Iowa and endeavored to carve out his destiny there as a farmer.

QUIT THE FARM.

Trial convinced him that he was made for other fields of labor and in the early eighties he removed to Minneapolis and began in a very small way to manufacture and market a stock food which he had compounded. From this insignificant beginning grew one of the great business enterprises of the Northwest—the International Stock Food Co., recently merged into the M. F. Savage Factories, Inc.

Aside from the immense plant in Minneapolis, the headquarters of his enterprises, has had created a number of extensive branches in various cities of the U.S. and Canada, and his various interests are capitalised at $15,000,000, according to the latest authentic figures available. His estate will run well up into the millions and it was the work of his own hands and brains.

Mr. Savage was a past master of the art of publicity, and much of his success was due to the scope and the effectiveness of his advertising. He was a "self-made man" in every respect; but his "making" was largely due to his perception of the power of printers ink, effectively employed.

The first famous horses that he purchased were Roy Wilkes, p, 2.06 1-2, and Online, p, 2.04. The death of Online was closely followed by his purchase of Dan Patch. Previously he had purchased Directum, 2.05 1-4 then the champion four year old trotter. Later on he acquired Aroin, 2.07 3-4.

When Minor Heir, 1.58 1-2, appeared, he paid $40,00 for him, after he had shown his calibre. When Creoceus, 2.02 1-4, the champion trotting stallion, came into the market, Mr. Savage purchased him. The pacer, George Gano, 2.03 3-4, after his wonderful campaign of 1909, was also added to his stable.

At Savage, Minn., he maintained one of the largest breeding and training establishments in America on which he had erected a covered half mile track.

ATTACHED TO HIS HORSE.

It was upon and around Dan Patch, however, that Mr. Savage's enthusiasm and interest as a horse lover centred and remained fixed. It is doubtful if any owner of a great horse ever more deeply loved and more intensely appreciated him than did M. W. Savage Dan Patch.

Did the death of the latter hasten that of the former? No one, perhaps, can be sure—but considering what happened, it is altogether likely that in his weakened condition the news of the "passing" of his beloved favorite was a shock to the struggling heart of his owner, which precipitated the so unexpected end of his life.

Could anything more fittingly be said of them than the familiar words: "They were united in life and in death they were not divided."

RATS IN TRENCH.

Killed by Electricity — How French Clean Rodents Out.

Numerous have been the methods employed by the soldiers in the French trenches to kill the rats which constitute a veritable plague in the western war zone; but perhaps none has been so interesting—and so effective — as the electric methods. A trough is excavated along a rat-run adjoining the trenches, and over this are placed three wires running parallel to each other. A constant supply of current is maintained in the wires, which are spaced only a few inches apart. The rats, in crossing the trough, come in contact with the wires, resulting in immediate death. It is reported that hundreds of rats are killed each week by this method.

Toronto's Mayor Disgusted With Camp Borden Which He Terms a Sahara Desert

Mayor Church of Toronto, gave the following statement to the press yesterday regarding conditions at Camp Borden:

"Camp Borden is a second Newmarket Canal. No modern Valcartiers were wanted in Ontario. If one-quarter of the money sunk in Camp Borden had been spent on Niagara and other district camps, better results would have been obtained. The selection of the site of the camp, and the massing of such a great army there before the place was ready, was nothing short of an outrage. They left Niagara, one of the finest military camps in the world, the natural site for over one hundred years, to go to such a 'Sahara Desert.' I am surprised at Sir Robert Borden being a party to allowing his name to be misused to perpetrate such a state of affairs on so splendid a body of civilians, who have enlisted to enter this fight against the Hun.

"I have had hundreds of letters and complaints from the parents of those at the said camp, and on July 12th was waited on by a deputation of the men, many of whom said that the officers had been urged to stop the complaints, and 'boost' the place. Notwithstanding what the Militia Department and some of the officers say, the place has given recruiting the biggest black eye it has had since the war started. There should be an investigation made as to who is responsible for the whole matter.

"I do not blame the officers or headquarters for carrying out orders. Ottawa, not them, is to blame. Headquarters cannot do impossibilities. They have already done splendid work to eliminate the intolerable state of affairs. The camp is a source of great weakness in this district to the Government; it may have been a mine to real estatemen, Halifax and Quebec, and other contractors, and the railways, but it has hurt recruiting more than anything else. I am surprised that our M.P.'s have stood for it or tolerated such a condition. The men who have enlisted are only civilians who have given up their positions in this fight to save the country. Another thing, long route marches in this hot weather should be cut out in July and August. They are being cut out somewhat in England for more advanced training at the front. Twelve to 18-mile route marches are practically now unknown at the front. I hope that a thorough investigation into the Camp Borden matter from first to last will be made by Parliament. The relatives of the boys at Camp Borden can't afford to pay the cost of such an expensive trip, and their relatives might as well be in England, for all they can see of them.

"I have refrained during the past month from mentioning the hundreds of complaints and protests I have received about this matter, but something should be done to see that recruiting is not further interfered with here by such mistakes. Am glad to see that after all the complaints Ottawa will act, and intends to move 14 battalions overseas. They should go further, and move 12 back to Niagara and London, and close up the place. The relatives here of the soldiers are a unit regarding the complaints, regardless of the boosting of the camp in certain quarters. The camp is solely to please the vanity of certain militia people. There will be a strong protest made on August 21st, against the waste of money in these big camp features, at the annual meeting of the union of Canadian municipalities. The municipalities of Canada have been loyally helping the Government since the war started and feel the money might have been better expended on the various existing military divisions in the country."

CANADIANS HOLD TOUGHEST PART OF YPRES LINE

ALSO MANY NEW THINGS—LIGHT HEARTED ACCOUNT OF TRENCH LIFE.

St. John, N.B., July 24.—"I dare say you remember hearing of a certain individual—a tough guy he was—who lived in the toughest street in the town, and the further down the street one went the tougher it got, and he lived in the last house. Well, that is us at the present time."

So writes a New Brunswick boy who is now fighting in France with one of the units from this province.

"We live in the last house on the toughest piece of the line, and that is saying a good deal because it is all tough; but for the pure essence of toughness this is the place.

"There is not such another place in the world, and there doesn't need to be—one is enough. Here war is continuous, day and night. Sometimes it is just a spluttering sort of a row and then someone gets mad and the air fairly howls for mercy.

LIKE TWO TIRED BULL DOGS.

"It's a good deal like two thoroughly tired bulldogs who fight like mad until the are tied, and then growl while they are restin.

This vivid bit of description is applied to that portion of the Ypres salient which is now being held by the Canadians.

"Here the trenches are so close together that there is practically but one parapet. In some places they are far enough apart to allow one setting of barbed wire to do for both—very economical so far as wire is concerned but extravagant on nerves and other essentials to a comfortable existence.

"We cannot fire on their front trenches and they cannot fire on ours. Taking errors of the gun and atmospheric conditions into consideration, fully half the shells would fall into the trenches of the people who were firing, and that would not help matters much.

MANY INVENTIONS MADE.

"But that is not much of a limitation. Since the war began many old things have been resurrected and many new ones invented, and there is something for every occasion and situation.

"In the olden days (you can look it up) before artillery had passed the slingshot stage, they used to make up a little package of explosives, stick a fuse into each package, light it and throw it no the other fellow. They called them grenades, and now we have gone back to the grenades or 'bombs' as they call them nowadays, and they have become a very necessary weapon of offence and defence in trench warfare.

"I may not be right, but I think the bomb was resurrected by the man in the trenches. Anyway I know that when we first arrived on the scene, affairs consisting of old jam tins filled with nails or anything else available into which a piece of gun cotton or other explosive was inserted, a fuse attached, and then lighted by a match was being used to hurl at the Germans in the opposite trench with best wishes for success.

MATCH A BIT TOO MODERN.

"The match was a little bit too modern. It was not reliable on windy or wet nights, and besides at night the flare from the match advertised the act and sent Frits to his dugout. So the next step was to use tinder lights, the same as they did years ago, only our tinders had a fancy wick and were in nickel-plated cases.

"The distance that a man could throw one of these of course was limited; and to overcome distances, various home-made devices were invented to propel them farther.

"The bomb proved a success, and various official patterns, factory made, soon put the jam tin on the refuse heap again. It was a case of the survival of the fittest and of the improved patterns, two succeeded, with one of the two capturing four-fifths of the business.

"It is a dinky little handful of death and destruction that would delight the heart of the most ardent Nihilist. You pull out a pin and throw it, and it commences to do business right away. By the time it arrives it has just got around to the business end and bursts into about forty pieces, each one with a kick to kill a horse.

TRENCH MORTAR FORMIDABLE.

"So much for the bomb; let us go back to the miniature gun which is used to give it speed.

"It had possibilities and was developed bit by bit until it achieved the dignity of a trench mortar, and is now a most formidable weapon. It used to be a piece of gas pipe propped up with a forked stick and fired with a hot poker. Then the gun makers and the inventors took hold of it, and I wish that I could tell you of the new guns, but of course I cannot except to say that the one pound jam tin has developed into something well over a hundred pounds in weight.

"Trench mortars are a recognised branch of the service, and have trained officers and gun crews; but it is a risky calling and the bunch is known as the Suicide Club. Companies are trained also in bomb throwing, have trained officers and each has a standing as a unit. They are known as the Nihilists. These two weapons the the standbys in places like ours, while the regular artillery play in the back yards and the high-ways and the by-ways.

ALL KNOWLEDGE ADAPTED

"It is curious how everything that man ever knew or found out gets adapted to the service of war. I should not be surprised to see someone in full chain or metal armour some day. We do use a steel helmet, which does not improve the looks, but saves a lot of lives.

"Smoke bombs are very common; they emit great clouds of smoke which hug the ground and roll along with the wind. They are harmless as a weapon but they effectually obscure any proposed movement. Stink bombs, containing the distilled essence of all known undesirable smells, are not unknown by any means; while aeroplanes drop steel darts, which probably is an advanced form of the old time archery.

"The old time castle has given way to a semi-subterranean sand bag affair and the castle moat to most horrible tangles of barbed wire.

RAILWAYS RUN ALL ABOUT.

"Railways run about the country, regardless of curves and gradients, and likewise of the feelings of the inhabitants. In the place where I was the other day a French woman was showing me what the war had done to her farm, and pointing to the railway running through her back yard said, 'That is no good, the first day my chickens go play in the sand. Puff, puff, she come along—no more chickens.'

"'But perhaps someone will pay for them.' I am afraid that there will be a lot of things to pay for after the war.

"Up in our little residential district already referred to, one goes along with his head bowed low, and the talk never gets above a whisper; and Frits is under the same restraint. Ordinary conversation could be heard plainly from one trench to the other. Whatever we would say to each other scarcely would be complimentary, so we do not start a wordy warfare but stick to the appointed kind.

GERMANS GLAD OF CAPTURE.

"I often wonder how Frits likes this war, now that he has got it; whether it comes up to his expectations or not; whether 'Der Tag' still is his dream or whether he is beginning to wonder. Most of the prisoners taken say that they are glad that they are out of it at last, and more than one has said: 'Now I shall see my wife and children again.'

"The Hun will outdo himself in frightfulness when in his last throes, you may depend on that. If there are any chemical or mechanical horrors that he can think of, he will be sure to trot them out. He is making a speciality just at present with 'tear shells.' When they burst they fill the air with a gas that sets the waterworks going in good style and would make one blind but for the protection that everyone has.

"It is strange that horses do not seem to be affected by these shells or by the gas. I know of but one horse apparently succumbing to gas. His driver took the harness off and left him in the woods for dead. The next day the vet. went down to hold an autopsy but the horse had come to life again, and had gone back to his own camp.

"It is a good thing. The poor devils have enough to put up with as it is. Gas, tear shells and liquid flame are more or less chestnuts to us. It is a beastly nuisance being prepared for them all the time, but that is about the worst of it."

HUNS MUST MARRY

"Marry or pay up," is the motto of Germany to-day. A society has started operations called "The Society for Population Increase." It is going to drive the young Germans into matrimony by taxing bachelors to such an extent that they will have to pay out as much as married men with families. Professor Julius Wolf, one of Germany's leading economists, started the society. The Kaiser is delighted with the idea, and so is the King of Bavaria. It will probably mean more babies to be turned into military machines as soon as they grow up. "Motherhood premiums" are to be supplied to induce large and early families; and the society is going to advocate shorter periods of training for young men in business or professions, so that they may quickly earn sufficient to take a wife—and as soon as that happens they'll just be forced to marry whether they like it or not.

Pioneer as General

Brigadier-General Sir Newton Moore, the officer commanding 10,000 Australian soldiers in England, has had an interesting career. As Surveyor-General of the State of Western Australia he was the first white man on the famous Coolgardie gold field, and drove the first stake into the plain where, ten years later, the big city of Calgoorlie quickly sprang up.

CANADA WASTES BREAD

Lessons of Thrift Must be Taught, But How?

A Canadian woman writes: Two pictures come to my mind. One that was published in the daily papers showing blockade conditions as they exist in Berlin: A scene in the street market where bread is sold under short rations by the German Government, each purchaser being compelled to produce his bread ticket before he can buy. The other is a mental picture, deep in mind's eye. I looked from the balcony of a friend's apartment the other day into the alley below. Here were strewn great chunks of stale bread, the refuse from someone's garbage tin. How typical this waste of bread. What are we to do that we may educate these naturally wasteful individuals? There is no excuse for the waste of a crumb of bread. The thrifty housewife knows a thousand ways that stale bread may be utilized. She who knows no more of domestic economies than that she will permit the throwing out of stale bread, must be taught the principles of domestic economy.

FORMER LOCAL MAN DROWNED AT KENORA

A double drowning occurred in Kenora yesterday in which a former resident of this city, Mr. Herman O. Lee, lost his life in an attempt to save the life of Catharine Horon. The accident occurred on a lake seven miles from Kenora. Miss Horan had gone beyond her depth and in response to her cry for help, Lee plunged into the water caught hold of the drowning girl and was making towards shore with her when both sank.

The unfortunate young man was a son of Mr. Robert Lee, formerly of this city and of the old firm of Lee and Thompson, stationers. The deceased was about thirty years of age, had been in the west for some years and was manager of the Kenora branch of the Bank of Ottawa.

Mr. Lee was an excellent swimmer, but it is thought that swimming with the weight of his clothes and his attempt to save Miss Horan was too great a task for him.

His parents reside at 16 Maitland Place, Toronto.

Mr. Lee was a cousin of Mrs. Ed. Manning of this city, and also of Mr. G. Harry Thompson and the Misses Thompson, 165 Smith street.

Though the Canadian National Exhibition only dates back to 1879, the first Exhibition, from which the C.N.E. grew, was established in Toronto in 1846.

Limestone in the soil answers the double purpose of correcting soil acidity and of supplying an essential element of plant food.

"The Shorthorn World," edited by J. R. S. Johnstone, is a new publication, the first number having just seen the light. It will appear twice a month, with 32 pages in each issue. To all breeders of the "red, white and roan" it should be a welcome visitor. It is published in Chicago.

Chintzes - Linens - Shadow Cloths for All-over Upholstering

The furniture of the future for the living room is of the over-stuffed type. A few odd pieces of this judiciously distributed about such a room impart an "atmosphere" that no other furniture can. We will undertake to recover any suitable pieces that you have, entrusting the work to expert and artistic upholsterers, and selecting for the purpose some rare patterns in Chintzes, Linens and Shadow Cloths.

These are the new coverings, and we have a very extensive line for choosing. Our charges for this work are moderate. The results will be highly satisfactory---that we guarantee.

Fuse Report Has Passed Over Some Points of Vital Interest

Clarity Is Lacking, But Excuses Are Plentiful---Allison, the Scapegoat, Is But Gently Chided

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Telegram comments as follows on the Meredith-Duff report:

OTTAWA, Ont., July 22.—The Meredith-Duff report might be described as harmless and inoffensive. It recalls the fact that, during the investigation, Sir William Meredith stated that the ultimate verdict would come from the people. Perhaps both commissioners had that in mind while the products of their labours was being revised into a fit shape for presentation to the Government.

At any rate, it presents some of the facts of the case accompanied by a mild criticism that is apologised for by subsequent statements that everybody from the Minister of Militia to the office boy is of unimpeachable integrity, with the possible exception of Hon. Col. J. Wesley Allison, "some of whose statements are difficult to believe." In other words, it provides halos for the Minister and his Shell Committee. Besides that, Col. Carnegie was overworked, and perhaps did not have a good head for business, and it slaps Col. Allison gently on the wrist as it admonishes "naughty, naughty!" Where do bad little boys who tell untruths go to?" One cannot fail to sympathize with the economic colonel whose suffering under such punishment must be terrific.

Chapter of Errors.

The story of that graze fuse contract is after all the crux of the entire investigation. That story as set out in the report is a remarkable chapter of errors and a coincidence. The report states that the correspondence with the War Office for the five million shells for which the fuses were required closed with three cables, one from the War Office and two to the War Office.

The cable from the War Office distinctly states: "Fuse for shrapnel must be 22 seconds, but for H. E. graze fuses,' and in the face of this, Col. Carnegie went on and let contracts for the entire five million for time fuses. That was error number one, and, according to the report, it so flustered Col. Carnegie that it led to error number two. He, it appears, felt that he had done an injustice to the American Ammunition Co. when he gave them a contract for two and a half million time fuses, when that contract should have read one and two-third million graze fuses, and the balance time fuses.

No Help For Canadians.

Also, the commission is of the opinion that Col. Carnegie was anxious to have munitions made in Canada. But it makes no mention of the fact that though $3,000,000 advances were paid to the American Fuse Co., not one dollar was offered to firms willing to undertake the manufacture of fuses in Canada. And yet you find in another part of the report a finding that Canada was in a position to manufacture graze fuses at the time the order for $3 fuses at $4 was sent across the line.

What Was $25,000 For?

This is only one of the strange omissions in the report. A similar strange silence is noticed regarding the $25,00 paid to Allison by Yokum in the early spring of 1915. What did Yoakum expect to buy from Allison with that $25,000?

That is a question that has been asked wherever men talked fuse contracts. Did the Cankee promoter give the honorary colonel that $25,000 simply because he liked his looks? It seems unfortunate that the commission did not think this question worthy of some little consideration.

Misleading Title.

The report has been issued under the title of "Royal Commission on Shell Contracts." This is misleading on the start. The commission shows by its report that it touched shell contracts very lightly. It cleared up the vexed point as to whether the Shell Committee were contractors or agents. It assures them that they were agents. Consequently, though the report neglects to mention it, the committee did not commit any great act of patriotism when at the request of D. A. Thomas (now Baron Rhondda), it handed over its millions of accumulated profits to the War Office. The correspondence between Thomas and the Shell Committee, in which he assured the committee that their prices were too high, and that he did not like their method of letting contracts, also received scant attention. The simple statement that Lord Rhondda's view was that competition should have been invited, disposed of it. And yet that correspondence appeared to show various things in a new light. Further comment on it might have proved instructive.

An Admission.

In regard to the encouragement given to Canadian manufacturers, both by the Shell Committee and the fuse commission, it is interesting to note that Sir Wm. Meredith is much more polite than Mr. Lloyd Harris in the report than he was in the witness box. His statements as to "see Allison," and the "pressure higher up," do not receive much consideration, but the joint report is forced to make it plain that Messrs. Russell and Harris could and did demonstrate that even in Canada fuses can be made.

Unreasonable.

Much more emphasis, however, appears to be laid on the fact that Col. Carnegie "made considerable efforts to bring about the manufacture of time fuses in Canada, and it was owing to his persuasion that the War Office was induced to consent to the Shell Committee placing the experimental order for the manufacture of 20,000 fuses in Canada." Isn't that the veriest rot to feed to a self-respecting people? Here is an alleged expert asking a Canadian firm to put in hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of machinery to manufacture 20,000 fuses, with no guarantee of future orders.

Considerable Effort?

And to make it worse, two of Canada's most eminent jurists calmly assume that Canadians will take this as evidence that Col. Carnegie made considerable effort to have fuses made in Canada. Nor do the jurists make any great effort to explain why the Shell Committee failed to live up to its agreement to hold a million or a million and a half of the fuses till Russell and Harris put in a propposition. The report find that it was not because they did not see Allison and lets it go at that.

But it is hardly necessary to go into all the details of the investigation. There is an excuse for everybody and everything except the Minister's friend, Allison. It appears that the commission gradually had become nearly exhausted by the time the hon. colonel was reached. Part of his story went down with the rest. No doubts are expressed as to his explanation of where the money went to. They believed that business deals accounted for the sums he turned over to Hon. Col. McBain and others, and that, out of pure goodness of heart, he turned over to his piece, Miss Edwards, the sum of $105,000. But it is difficult for even these innocent judges to think that, with his partner Yoakum in a deal that yielded $450,000, the colonel did not know he was going to get a cent. Even the most childlike faith has its limitations.

Difficult to Understand.

The report on the whole is not a great work. As a literary effort it is hardly worthy of its eminent authors. It is so involved that some of the paragraphs require several readings to permit the lay mind to grasp their meaning. The comment is interspersed through the review of the evidence in a way that suggests that the review was made first and the comment carved to fit the remaining space. It lacks punch. It suggests that Justice Duff is more effective as an orator than a writer. His pungent criticism and terse comment gave rise to hope that the report would be at least a clear synopsis of the evidence, no matter what the findings might be. But style and clarity appears to have been sacrificed to unanimity.

A Jumble of Words.

The net result is neither the cold sarcasm of the Chief Justice nor the sharp incisiveness of the minor commissioner. It is a jumble of words that mean little to clear up a matter that is bound to play a large part in Canadian politics. The Tories are jubilant because everybody except Allison is declared more upright and patriotic than even the most loyal partisans believed them to be. The Grits pointed out that there is much election "meat sticking" out between the lines.

It is a report that has aggravated rather than settled a vexed question. It will furnish much oratory during the next session of Parliament. After that, the electors will tell just what they think of not only the fuse contracts, but the whole shell muddle.

MARKET SITUATION FOR THE WEEK

Freight Rates on Flour Have Increased—Strawberries Are Beginning to Peter Out

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer:

One of the significant events of the past week is that farmers in certain parts of Ontario have started cutting their winter wheat crop. This is early, as it is seldom harvesting operations begin until August. Wheat headed out early in some parts and for the past month or six weeks there has been ideal growing and ripening weather. The yield per acre is reported fully as good as last year, although the acreage is slightly under. Conditions at the present time seem to head toward another good year for the farmers. Grocers are able to read the handwriting on the wall and know what this means to them.

Flour, under the influence of an advancing wheat market and a good export demand, has shown a still firmer tendency, although prices have not advanced. An increase of 15 cents per hundred pounds in ocean freight rates has sent the export price of flour up a corresponding amount. Farmers are beginning to feed some bran to their milch cows to help out the diminishing grass ration and this has created a firmness in this feed by reason of the demand. Shorts, too, are being fed to porkers to get them into shape for the fall. This has stiffened the price of that feed.

Demand for Fish.

Consumption of hams and other cooked meats has been somewhat heavy during the week and the price for the former has advanced one cent a pound all around. The reason assigned is the continued hot weather, with people in the picnic mood and the housewife having the desire to eliminate as many cooking fires as possible. The demand for fish has not been as heavy during the past week. In Quebec there has been a noticeable shifting of source of demand for this commodity from cities and towns to summer resorts. This and next month are the popular vacation periods and there is always an exodus from the cities.

In fruit, strawberries are beginning to peter out and the price has remained firm. Raspberries and blacksaps have put in an appearance, as they usually do, and save the situation. Blueberries have also come to the rescue and are on the market for the first of the season. The quality of the latter is not quite what it is expected later to be.

PETERBOROUGH NURSE RECEIVED THE PARCEL

Pleasing Experience of Nursing Sister Mowry Who Is Now In France

Just to show how small a world we live in after all, we just wish to cite an experience that happened to Nursing Sister Bertha Mowry, now in hospital work in France. Miss Mowry was receiving her regular draft of supplies a short while ago, given promiscuously from stock, and on opening up her parcel was delighted to see the name of Miss Marion Clarke of Peterborough, R. R. No. 3, as having been the sender of the parcel. It is surprising that in the multiplicity of parcels sent and the great number of nurses to receive them that a parcel not specially directed should be sent by a Peterborough young lady, and be received by a Peterborough nursing sister. The little episode brought back quite vividly to the nursing sister all the pleasant recollections of her Canadian home.

FALL WHEAT IS RIPENING

Standing Field Crops in Peterborough County Look Exceptionally Good

The hot dry weather of the past two weeks has had the effect of producing a rapid growth. The standing field crops throughout the county of Peterborough are shooting upwards at a rapid rate. The fall wheat is beginning to turn a deep golden colour and will soon be ready for the reaper. The crop is later maturing this year owing to the late spring. The first cutting of fall wheat is recorded around the twelfth of July. This year's crop looks as though it will be well up to last year's standard. The same might be said about other field crops. The straw promises to be a good length, while the business end of the stock looks equally good. Farmers say that the weather is a little too hot and sultry for good hay weather. The crop, which is exceptionally heavy, does not cure very easily as a result much of the hay will find its way into the barn in a soft, damp condition.

Rich Hay Crop On Cockburn Farm

Mr. Geo. Cockburn of Smith Township, whose farm is on the middle line, is harvesting a superabundant crop of hay. In a field immediately south of his house the haycocks were so numerous they were almost touching one another. Half of the quantity would make a good, average crop. Mr. Cockburn is said to have one of the best farms in Smith. It is the old Davidson farm and, apparently, it is still in the hands of an efficient farmer.

$10,000,000 Worth Of Overlands Sold In Three Days

TORONTO, July 20, 1916. — Ten million dollars worth of Overland automobiles sold in three days! That's a new record for Canadian business, whether in the motor car business or any other industry, but that is what was achieved by Willy's Overland Limited during the first Annual Convention held in the Thousand Island House at Alexandria Bay, July 17 to 20 inclusive.

There were contracts to show for it, actual signed contracts, bearing the signatures of 150 of the best business men in the Dominion.

The 150 Overland dealers present at this convention were guests of Willy's Overland Limited for the three convention days. This was the largest convention of Canadian automobile dealers ever held.

These men represent nearly every district from Victoria, B.C. to St. Johns, N.B. From the former point came Thos. Plimley and with him was A. S. French of Vancouver, each of them travelling 3,000 miles.

During one of the opening discussions T. A. Russell fully explained all of the new models for the coming season, telling the complete specifications of the new model 75B and as Mr. Russell told of the new 31 1-2 h.p. motor to be used in this model considerable enthusiasm was shown by the dealers.

To assist Mr. Russell in the explanations of this model one of these cars was taken with the party to Alexandria Bay.

The convention adopted as the slogan for the coming year, "Ten Thousand Willys Knight and Overland Automobiles for 1917, not 9,999." A goal that will be attained judging from the enthusiasm that was shown throughout the entire gathering.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS THE DETENTION OF A TILSONBURG MAN

Ernest W. Jackson Suffers Loss of Liberty Without Apparent Reason

Toronto, July 24.—The latest adventure of Ernest W. Jackson, the Tillsonburg bank clerk, who was ordered back to Canada from Hong Kong last month ended to-day in the Toronto police court. This is the third time within three months that this young man has suffered the loss of his liberty because of some mysterious purpose of the British authorities. The excitement began when Mr. Jackson was hauled from the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Japan and locked up in the Chinese section of the Hong Kong police headquarters.

HAD NO PASSPORTS.

Mr. Jackson left Canada in May last on a trip to the Orient, intending to complete his education by travel and to secure lecture material as to entomological, social and economic conditions in the Far East. Since the beginning of the war the British authorities at Hong Kong insist that all foreigners be armed with consular passports, and Mr. Jackson, a Canadian-born British subject, had overlooked this regulation for which omission he was jailed and deported at his own expense.

An American citizen, who, like Mr Jackson, had omitted to secure a passport before beginning the journey, was released immediately upon the request of the American consul.

AGAIN DETAINED.

Upon his return to Victoria, B.C. Jackson was again detained, examined and discharged. Eventually arriving at Toronto to resume his duties as a bank clerk, Mr. Jackson was again mysteriously decoyed to police head quarters, held in durance, investigated and finally discharged by the magistrate who could see no evidence why this young Canadian should not be allowed to enjoy his personal liberty

Mr. Jackson is a member of the Canadian India League, an association formed in this city many months ago by several of the leading Canadian commercial and financial men, who for both national and imperial reasons believe that it is desirable that an interchange of knowledge between the two most important members of the British Empire will result in the expansion of Canadian-Indian commerce and a firmer establishment of imperial unity.

Officers of the association have announced that full inquiries will be made into the mystery of Mr. Jackson's treatment, especially so in view of the fact that Mr. Jackson's mission would have undoubtedly assisted in the furtherance of imperialism.

OSTEOPATH WILL NOT DIE.

Dr. Wilfrid Harris, Shot by Dr. Atwood, Will Survive Wounds.

BOSTON, July 24.—Dr. Wilfrid E. Harris, the Canadian osteopath, was much improved in the opinion of the attending physicians, and hope was strengthened that he would survive the wounds inflicted by Dr. Alderidge D. Atwood.

The police are continuing their efforts to establish a connection between the shooting of Dr. Harris and the death by poisoning a few hours before of Dr. Celia P. Adams. Atwood says that Harris prevented his marriage to Miss Adams, and that he attacked the other physician when he learned that his fiancee was dead, supposedly a suicide.

So far as known, the police have made little progress, and they anxiously await the time when the condition of Dr. Harris will permit him to tell his side of the story. Atwood is in jail awaiting a hearing on July 28.

He Got An Illustration.—John was in disgrace. Mother had found him out in a lie, and despite his pleadings father was to be told. When afther appeared the cane was duly produced, and John was commanded to the presence of his irate parent. "John," he said in a distressed voice, "John, did you tell a lie." "Yes, fa-a-ther," answered John penitently. "Do you know the meaning of a lie?" "Oh, yes," said the young hopeful, brightening up. "When you promise mother to come home early on Saturday, and you don't, that's a lie, isn't it?" Father grabbed his newspaper, and the suject dropped.

FORESEES TROOPS IN ARMOR.

English War Student Points to Lessons on Western Front.

LONDON, July 24.—There is a possibility that the character of the fighting on the western front will lead to the invention and utilization of some such weird implements of warfare as were imagined by H. G. Wells, in his "War of Worlds."

General Haig's compliment to the remnants of the brave garrison at Ovillers really means, as a student of the war points out in The Manchester Guardian; that the garrison which at Loos could not have exceeded 3,000 men held up a greatly superior British offensive for a fortnight. The prolonged resistance shows that the answer to the machine gun has not yet been found.

All experiences in the British offensive testify to the value of the machine gun and to cope with this weapon without disproportionate loss of life some special equipment is necessary. Steel helmets have been found extremely useful against shrapnel by both French and British and the Russians have used immense steel shields in certain attacks. In the Dublin street fighting one of the most successful devices was a Scotch boiler filled with men with a machine gun mounted on a motor. Thus protected the men were able to go down the narrowest streets to gain access to tenements the rebels were defending.

The utility of furnishing soldiers with protection such as breastplates or shields or greaves as the recent fighting on the western front has largely consisted of is being urged in several quarters. It is predicted that future wars will see two kinds of infantry, heavy armed hoplites with shield and body armor, who will be used in storming, and light infantry for rapid manoeuvre in the open.

"We can imagine quite a small army of this kind with heavy armed infantry and a light infantry mounted on aeroplanes, for preference, beating ten or a dozen times its numbers of conventionally armed soldiers, says The Manchester Guardian's student of the war.

X-RAY ASSISTS DENTIST.

Special Apparatus Aids In Locating Infested Areas.

A compact, easily operated X-ray apparatus, designed especially for dental work, is now employed by dentists in determining whether or not root canals have been properly filled, and in locating infected areas, unerupted or impacted teeth, pyorrhea, etc.

The thoroughly reliable information which this equipment makes available for the dentist often enables him to avoid serious mistakes in treating teeth. Formerly the use of the X-ray for dental work involved buying bulk and expensive apparatus and called for special skill on the part of the operator.

A feature of the new outfit is the compactness and simplicity. The special X-ray tube employed is of lead glass having a window of sodium glass through which the rays emerge and pass through a lead-glass extension that carries an aluminum filter. This extension is placed against the patient's face and enables the operator to tell accurately the direction of the rays in relation to the part being radiographed.—Popular Mechanics.

THE ALLIES ARE USING 500,000 SHELLS A DAY

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY, July 21.—Artillery officers, as the result of calculations, declare that along the main front of our attack since June 27 we have been raining on the enemy approximately 500,000 shells per day. On this basis we have used up in 20 days 10,000,000 projectiles of all sorts, exclusive of bombs, rifle and machine gun fire. It is a staggering figure and while it may only be treated as purely approximate, it is illustrative of the need to go on supplying our troops with munitions without any thought of slackening.

TO INVESTIGATE THE TWO EASTERN MISHAPS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 24.—Premier Asquith to-day introduced in the Commons a bill for the investigation of the Mesopotamian and Dardanelles campaigns. It was in answer to numerous criticisms which have been evoked since the abandonment of the Gallipoli offensive and the lack of support tendered the British at Kut-El-Amara.

Casement Can't Appeal To Lords

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 24.—The Attorney-General to-day refused a certificate which would enable Roger Casement, convicted in Irish revolt, degraded from his knighthood and sentenced to death, to appeal direct to the House of Lords.

Verdun---An Abandoned Town

The defence of Verdun is the story of the character and morale of an heroic army which, though taken in its least expected quarter, could not be blasted out of its stubborn determination to resist, even though for weeks the Germans have employed the production of their industries and their human resources almost without interruption, having always a system of transport and communication which has never failed since the first attack.

The city of Verdun to-day is one of the most depressing places in the war zone. The Germans, having failed to realize their aspirations in breaking the French line of defence, outside the town, turned their attention towards the complete destruction of the city, itself. With Teutonic thoroughness shells poured in at the rate of 400 to 800 daily, taking one quarter of the town after another.

The streets are utterly deserted by any human being, save an occasional soldier hurrying on an urgent message, the scene being relieved only by lonely dogs skulking through the alleys, and the silence broken by the terrific detonations of high explosive shells which arrived about every two minutes, with the accuracy and sound of an express train. Their landing is announced by a detonation like the explosion of a land mine, with clouds of dust and debris leaping into the air like an eruption from a volcano. Five and six-storey buildings simply melted into piles of debris, while clouds of dust rose hundreds of feet.

It is always a difficult matter to ascertain the enemy's losses but from all sources questioned they seem to have lost from 175,000 to 200,000 men.

The most extraordinary feature of the entire defence at Verdun was the capacity of the French to adapt themselves to the situation in the matter of transport. We are told that the Germans had twelve lines of rail feeding this point. The French met this rail shortage by motor transport.

From the prisoners it has been ascertained that the news of the Verdun failure is beginning to spread along the German front, resulting in a great depression in the Germa lines.

If this becomes general in Germany the moral effect will be tremendous.

CANADIAN OVERSEAS.

Parcels Duty Free While Men in England

Relatives and friends of the men of the 93rd Battalion and any other units in England may send parcels, duty free, to the men while they remain in Great Britain, by forwarding them in care of the Canadian War Contingent Association, Army P.O., London, Eng. This association has been authorized as a central organization for the distribution of parcels from Canada. Those interested should cut out this address for future reference.

TEMPERATURE WAS NINETY-THREE DEGREES

Where is the man who said there wasn't going to be any summer? For three successive days this city and country has sweltered under a maximum temperature of ninety-three degrees. Saturday, Sunday, and to-day were as hot as the 12th of July, when nearly three thousand Orangemen held a big parade despite a noon-day heat of ninety-three degrees. To-morrow may be as warm, if not warmer, after which a cool spell is anticipated.

DUEL IN FRANCE LOST ART.

Frenchmen Too Busy Fighting Germans to Fight Each Other.

PARIS, July 24.—The duel is one of the ancient institutions of France that has fallen into neglect during the war. The last sensational encounter on the "field of honour"—a bloodless one—took place after the election of the Chamber of Deputies in 1914, not long before hostilities broke out. It was between Joseph Caillaux, former Minister of Finance, and his unsuccessful opponent, Louis d'Aillieres. Caillaux fired into the air and d'Aillieres fired into the ground.

Since that meeting M. d'Aillieres has been grievously wounded on another "field of honour." Acting as intermediary officer between the firing line and the command in the rear, he was hit by a fragment of a shell that maimed him probably for life.

It is attributed to the fact that so many Frenchmen like M. d'Aillieres have shed their blood on the battlefield that the duel has been abandoned, and there is a well-defined sentiment that it has come to an end for good and all.

Some credit the "sacred union" of parties and classes with this reform, while there are certain proofs that it is due to popular deprecation of personal conflicts between Frenchmen while "the Germans are still at Noyon." The "sacred union' has not prevented disputes and provocations.

Two men contesting for a favourable place from which to witness a review of troops on the Esplanade des Invalides came to blows and one of them tossed his card to the other.

"If you are so eager to fight,' cried a bystander, "why don't you do as those boys did,' pointing to some armless and legless soldiers lined up before the troops to be decorated.

Two young men in a popular cafe exchanged sarcasms, followed by insults, blows, and an exchange of cards.

"To Verdun with them!" cried the spectators. "Put them out!"

The manager threw both of them into the street, where the idlers jeered them until in common defense they made up their quarrel and walked off together.

WARM WEATHER AND THE COMPLEXION.

During the warm months extra precautions are necessary in order to preserve the texture and beauty of the skin. For dry winds, hot sunshine and salt water all play havoc with the complexion.

It is hardly possible to go about with a protection in the form of a veil wrapped about one's face, for this is too warm for comfort, and disagreeable and dangerous to the eyes, besides. But there are certain precautions which can be taken to relieve the burning sensation which comes from exposure to the sun. When you have been out in the hot summer air you will find, of course, that your skin has become red and dry from this reckless exposure. Don't come in from out of doors, where you have been enjoying a motor trip or a game of tennis and wash the dust and dirt from your skin with soap and water. This only increases the burning sensation and the dryness of the skin. First rub on a quantity of cold cream and rub thoroughly with a soft cloth. After the irritation has been somewhat lessened the face should then be thoroughly washed and cleansed. Fill a basin two-thirds full of fresh soft water. Should the water be hard, soften it with a teaspoonful of borax to every basin. Dip the face in the water, and afterward the hands. Soap the hands well and rub with a gentle motion over the face. Dip the face a second time into the water in the basin, rinse thoroughly and dry with a thick, soft towel. After the facial bath apply some simple lotion.

The use of a good cleansing cream before the facial bath and a suitable lotion afterward has a really wonderful effect in improving the complexion.

George Street Ratepayers Squirm Under Taxes For Pavement the Autoists Love

Other Citizens Have Little Queries to Advance and Will No Doubt Receive An Illuminating Answer George Street Men Figured on Too Low a Cost.

The first sidewalk debentures to mature will be two years hence. There were twenty year debentures and provided for the first concrete walks laid in the city. With their passing ratepayers, especially in the heart of the city, will be relieved of taxes to that extent, and in succeeding years other sidewalk debentures will be paid off as they become due. This is a case of the first being first and the last last. In most instances the sidewalk rate is not a heavy one, but for all that any disappearance of items from the tax bills will be quite welcome.

Some ratepayers have puzzled their brains in an attempt to explain what seemed to them a discrepancy in sewer rates. For example a citizen with two houses on equal frontage observed that the rate into one lot was considerably in excess of the other. He expected that the amounts for sewers charged against the two properties should be identical. On enquiry it was found that when the sewer was laid a connection was provided into the one property, but at the time there was no house on the other lot and no connection was put in. Later when the second house was built he paid for the connection in a lump sum, depositing $25 and receiving a small rebate by reason of the fact that the $25 was more than necessary to pay for the connection. As a result of these circumstances he is paying through his taxes for the connection to the first house, but there is no charge under this head for the second. In short he paid in a lump sum for the second connection. In scanning his tax bills he forgot these facts which would have been quite evident to him had he recalled the conditions under which the two sewer connections were constructed.

George Street Pavement.

Ratepayers in the north ward, including residents on George street who have the pleasure of a modern street pavement in front of their residences have been much perturbed by the pavement tax. And from all appearances they have aggravated themselves by proceeding to establish comparisons of the tax rate with which they figured it should be without first determining the correctness of their figures.

Some of these citizens have been comparing tax sheets, and by uncertain methods have arrived at what they consider should be their share of the cost of the pavement. And without exception they have concluded that they were being overcharged.

In the first place they made the mistake of estimating the cost of the pavement at $1.85 a square yard. City Engineer Parsons points out that from Edinburgh to Smith street a bitulithic pavement was laid at $2.24 a square yard, the contractor's price; and from McDonnell to Edinburgh it was a granolithic pavement at $1.94 cents. Thus, the George street north ratepayers have provided a much better quality of pavement for the automobilists, and naturally are paying 31 cents more per cubic yard than are their neighbours to the south of them.

Another mistake they made in their estimates was the neglect to include the contractor's price, an item of 13 p.c. of the cost for interest and sinking fund, and from 8 to 10 per cent. for debenture loss. There is besides engineering and other items which brought the total up to 38.7 cents per foot of frontage for ten years.

These figures were obtained from the City Engineer for the reason that quite a number of ratepayers expressed their concerns about the tax charge and some even proposed a public meeting for an explanation.

Without attempting a criticism of the very human tendency to stand from under, to squirm as it were when the financial thumb screws are given an additional twist, it may be suggested that the wisest and most correct plan is to interview the City Clerk or Engineer if you have an misgivings about items on your tax bill. After that has been done there may be a valid excuse for complaining, or there may not. And again, the time to investigate civic matters is when they first appear. The average ratepayer is unconcerned with pavements, outfall sewers and other improvements until there comes a tug at his money bag, and then it is too late, in fact much too late. If silence is an evidence of consent, the pavement policy was greeted unanimously, and it may be taken for granted that ratepayers were then aware of the expenditure entailed. It would appear, however, that only now are facts being brought home to them. George street is well paved, and the first payments are falling due. But anyone could have learned the individual property cost long ago without waiting until the tax bills informed them.

WOMEN POLICE MAKE GOOD.

In England They Are Engaged in Large Numbers At Munition Plants.

LONDON, July 24.—Women police are making good according to the chief officer of the Women's Police Force. They are employed in munition factories very largely to search the ingoing and outgoing women workers for contraband, keep order in trains, to inspect passports and to patrol the lanes and yards. They get $10 weekly with railway fares, sergeants receive $11, and inspectors $12. The chief officer says school teachers are particularly wanted for the force as their training fits them admirably for police duties which require good temper, patience and tact with firmness.

The girls in the factories appear to be very fond of the women police and the Government are asking for more to be appointed at various munition works throughout the country.

PLEADED GUILTY TO DESERTION CHARGE

Member of 93rd Battalion is Sent Down to Kingston Under Military Escort

"Never kicked up a row in my life," was the modest eulogy paid by a local man to his own fair person when he was charged before Magistrate Dumble this morning with being drunk and disorderly whilst on the prohibited list. His panegyric on his own conduct was not efficacious, however, and he was requested to donate ten simoleons to the police treasury.

For supplying the forbidden element to the same blacklister and thus hindering the law in its attempt to make weak men sober, another man was fined twenty-five dollars, or in default of payment thirty days in jail.

The sun has shone hot and strong and saloon doors have looked inviting to a George street resident for over a week, and he appeared on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. To give him a chance to sober up and incidentally to give them a week's peace at home, he was remanded for one week.

A local youth who had been sworn in for the 93rd Battalion, pleaded guilty to a charge of desertion. His French leave of absence has been of nine weeks' duration already. He was ordered to be delivered into the hands of the proper military authorities, and a sergeant from Barriefield was on hand to escort him back to his khaki surroundings.

For committing a breach against the traffic by-law a stage driver was assessed two dollars.

PUBLIC INSPECTION OF PUMPING STATION TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The Utilities Commission have arranged for a public inspection tomorrow afternoon from four to six o'clock of the pumping station and equipment. Invitations have been sent to the members of the Council, Board of Education, Board of Health, officers of the Trades and Labour Council, and to other citizens, inviting them to be present, but it is understood that the Commissioners extend a cordial invitation to all citizens who are sufficiently interested to make the trip.

The Commissioners have completed the installation of the auxiliary steam unit, a chlorinating system, and other improvements, and it is their desire that the citizens should be aware of the work that has been done, and the extent of the equipment that has been provided. Automobile transportation will be furnished from the end of the street car line to the pumping station, and it is honed that many will avail themselves of this opportunity of acquainting themselves with what has been done by the Utilities Commission.

MR. WALTER STOCKER AMONG THE SPEAKERS

Collingwood, July 24.—The annual meeting of the Poster Advertising Association of Canada concluded with the president, Mr. H. A. Williams of Montreal, presiding. Between 40 and 50 delegates were present, representing 115 Canadian towns and cities, scattered from Sydney on the east to Vancouver on the west. The secretary reported 139 members with an increase of 15 over the preceding year. Mr. E. L. Ruddy of Toronto, chairman of the Law Committee, Mr. Walter Stocker of Peterboro, and Mr. J. B. Leslie of Berlin, spoke on purely technical matters, while Mr. G. Warren Bruce, of Montreal, told the gathering why he entered the poster field.

balance of the men and officers being distributed throughout the united counties for recruiting purposes. A model camp is in process of erection and will include electric lights, shower baths and water works. A field kitchen recently donated to the battalion by the I.O.D.E., of Port Hope, has arrived and will be put into use at once. Thirty-seven recruits enlisted during the past week. A splendid patriotic meeting was addressed here to-night by F. L. Landers, editor of Labour News, Hamilton.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, July 24—Niagara Camp will likely hold ten thousand or more troops in a few days. Yesterday came an order from Ottawa cancelling all further arrangements for moving the 119th, 120th, and 123rd Battalions overseas on Wednesday, and it is announced five more battalions are coming in right away.

Some time ago it was reported that Corporal Arthur Moscrop, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion early last year, had been killed in action. Information has, however, arrived to say that the report was untrue and that Corp. Moscrop is alive and well.

Writes From Germany.

Mr. Ernest Lawrence has received a letter from his son, Pte. Harold Lawrence, who went overseas with the 8th C.M.R. and is now a prisoner in Germany. The letter in part is as follows:

Dulmer, June 15.

Dear Father,—Just a line to let you know that I am getting along fine, but am sorry to say that I am a prisoner of war. Well father we couldn't help being taken prisoner. There were only 200 of us left out of 1,150 after an eight hour bombardment, and we were taken prisoner. The rest are dead or wounded. I don't know where Teabo is. Father, send me a parcel at once please as I am in need of them bad and also a little money. Send it in Canadian bills. Don't send anything but stuff to eat and smoke as they send up clothing from England. When sending any smoke send cigarettes, no tobacco. The time looks short out here. By our rations I don't think it will be long before the finish. I certainly wish I was out of this country. Belgium, Flanders and France were bad enough, but this has it beat badly. There are very few Canadians in this camp, mostly Russians and French, with English soldiers and sailors, captured on June 2nd. There is lots more to tell you, but I can't.

THREE MYSTERIES AT WINDSOR IN A WEEK

WINDSOR, ONT., July 24.—The police are searching for the owners of a man's and woman's clothing found early Friday morning on the Michigan Central Slip dock in Sandwich West. The theory is that there has be a double drowning or suicide. The woman's clothing consisted of a black skirt, white waist with sailor effect, and blue collar, and a well-worn pair of low shoes. The male attire found was a bathing suit.

This is the third mystery the authorities have failed to unravel within a week. Last Saturday a man was found in Sandwich with a bullet through his right temple. He was buried without being identified. Earl Jenkins, six-year-old boy, is believed to have been drowned while bathing at the Government dock. His clothes were found, but there is no trace of the body, although the water has been dragged for several days.

Talcott Williams Says, England Would Then Extend Her Possessions.

Dr. Talcott Williams, Dean of the School of Journalism at Columbia, who was born in Turkey and who is in close touch with affairs in the Oriental countries, recently gave a summary of the Moslem situation as it affects and is affected by the European war.

"If the Allies win the final victory in the great war," said Dr. Williams, "it is an open secret that Great Britain will expect to round out her possession of Egypt, her foothold at Aden, the recent annexation of Oman, and her control of the Persian Golf asserted in 1911, by acquiring Arabia and stretching her dominion across from the mouth of the Shat-el-Arab to the northern end of the Sinaian Peninsula.

"This would secure English domination in the East, give her complete control of the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf and the railroad outlet to India at Koweit on the Persion Gulf, as well as of the Suez Canal. Maps already outlined in conferences of representatives of the allied powers look to this redistribution of territory.

"For security in this plan it is essential that any Ottoman territory in Arabia should be under Arab rule and that claims of the House of Othman, in the person of the Sultan of Turkey, to the Saliphate should be met by an orthodox Caliph at Mecca.

"The Caliphate of the Sultan of Turkey is denied by the Moslems of Persia, and the Moslems of Morocco look upon their Sultan as the representative of Mohammed on earth, but the great mass of Moslems in India and throughout the world would accept the Saliphate of the Turkish Sultan.

"The Caliphate is not a hereditary office. According to Moslem law the Saliph is selected by the great body of believers and must possess these requisites: To be a descendant of Mohammed in the female line through his daughter, Fatima; to rule the sacred places at Mecca and Medina; to possess the relics of the prophet, which are at Constantinople; and to be recognized by the great schools of the law, among which the Azhar at Cairo is first.

"The Sherif of Mecca possesses all these qualifications except two, namely, that he is not an independent sovereign ruling the holy places, and he has not the prophet's relics, but a large number of doctors of Arab law have asserted that the prophet's relics are forgeries, and authentic records of the prophet would probably be found at Mecca if they were necessary to complete the title.

"Nothing could be more useful to English policy in the East than an orthodox Caliph ruling independently at Mecca, of Arab birth and lineage, restoring the old headship of the Arabian peninsula at a point he could not be reached by European intrigue, his one port of Jiddah (Yedda) under English control.

"Such a Caliph would be a centre for the seething discontent of the Arab Moslems over the entire area south of the Taurus Mountains. He would calm the Indian Moslem ambitions, and he would even be useful to the United States, whose Sulu Mohammedan subjects send pilgrims to the great shrine at Mecca.

"Alone and unaided, the Arab population of Mecca and Medina could nor possibly resist the Turkish troops. It has taken them nearly a month to defeat the small Turkish garrison in Mecca, whose cantonment is commanded from all directions. But arms furnished them through Yedda will give the Arabs ample force to meet any advance of Turks from the north, since the railroad has been destroyed. No march will be possible along this route south until next fall, and by that time the English forces ought to have made such an advance perilous by an attack in flank from Egypt.

"Like so much else, the rising of Mecca depends wholly on the issue of the great war. If the Allies win, the orthodox Moslem world will find itself with a new Caliph exercising his spiritual powers at Mecca for the first time since the first of the Ommiadas Moawiyah left Mecca. 1,261 years ago, to reign at Ramascus as Caliph.

"If the Teutonic league wins, or is able to prevent the division of the Ottoman Empire, the Caliphate will remain on the Bosphorus.

"Until a final decision is reached in the great conflict, the rising at Mecca is to be regarded simply as an episode."

PRIDE IN LABOUR.

Let us teach our children to earn what they get—to give useful service in such measure as in their tender years they may give, without hardship. By which is meant not odious child labour—binding children down to steady work—but the little errands—the little helpful things, aside from the usual duties of home life—the useful, although not irksome, deeds that boys and girls may do, without crowding the time that rightfully belongs to them for play. For these things let them be reasonably compensated, so that they early may learn the value of earning their own way—of being self-supporting, when they advance in years.

It requires tact and good judgment to separate little kindnesses and little thoughtfulness on the part of children, those acts for which they should not be paid, but which they should be taught to do as a second nature habit, from the unusual service for which parents or outsiders properly may remunerate the little ones. The cardinal purpose should be to let children grow naturally and logically into the habit of being self-reliant, of having a worthy pride in sustaining themselves, as they come to maturity. If all children had instilled into them habits of industry and were imbued with the price that would disdain to accept charity so long as it can be avoided—the pride that impels men and women to do the best they can even though adversity may impose disagreeable conditions upon them—but who insist upon earning their own way—if there were more of this pride there would be fewer chronic idlers.

But sufficient unto the keen desire for work should be the opportunity to get work. It is undeniable that many a deserving man, industrious by nature, too proud to accept charity so long as he can avoid it, is compelled to be the recipient of aid because he cannot secure work at during a livelihood. Every man should want to work. And there should be work for every man who wants it.

LIFE'S JOURNEY.

For every life there is a summit. Happy are they who gain it and sad the lot of those who faint and fall in the struggle. Short or long to the top, it can only be scaled by persistent climbing. There must be ambition to do and dare, or the prize will not be secured.

Have you in the vigor of youth begun the journey? Already are you tired and weary? Are you resting by the way in slothful indulgence, hoping for wings or sails to bear you aloft without effort? Long before manhood's prime you will miss the top and go down hill. Arouse for another effort. At the base is the thorn, at the summit he crown. There is no escape from he one or the other in the life journey. Which will you have, wealth or poverty, comfort or squalor. Decide in the dew of the morning.

At high noon stand out a man on the peak of endeavour wearing your own crown.

"Both, Sir!"—"Look here," said the sergeant a very raw recruit, "to-morrow the Colonel is coming to inspect you, and I hope you will answer the questions promptly." "I will do my best, sir," said Muggins. "Now," said the sergeant, "the first question 'he will ask you, 'How old are you, my man?' you will reply, 'Twenty-five.' He will thei say, 'How long have you been in the service?' you will say, 'Three months, sir.' He will then say, 'Are your clothing and rations in every way satisfactory to you?' You wil lsay, 'Both sir.'" Muggins kept repeating this for the remainder of the day, till he had it perfect for the morrow. The Colonel arrived, and Muggins was duly called out. "How long have you been in the service, my man?" was the Colonel's first question. "Twenty-five years, sir," promptly replied Muggins. The Colonel opened his eyes very wide. "How old are you, then, my man?" "Three months, sir." The Colonel foamed with rage, and yelled, "Are you a fool, my man, or am I?" "Both, sir."

ELEPHANT RUNS AMUCK FROM DUFFERIN PARK

TORONTO, July 24.—Bob, the 35-year-old "baby" elephant of Coop and Lent's circus, which left the city, got tired of amusing wonderful audiences, and on Saturday night set off to enjoy, on his own behalf, the delights of Toronto's great white ways. Bob left his stable at 7 o'clock, and would have been all right had an interfering policeman not objected to his walking on the sidewalk on Dufferin street, and endeavoured to shoo him off. The interference ended in the policeman being shooed off, and Bob getting real cross.

To show his objection to the attention he had received he walked up the steep banks onto the lawn and, unheeding the warnings to keep off the grass, trampled down the flower beds that lay in his path.

Walked Over Lawns.

At Lindsay avenue he aspied a brand new fence, recently erected by Mr. Peter Hall,, who owns a nearby barn. The body of Mr. Peter Hall was placed between Bob and the fence, but Bom won out, and the fence was placed hors de combat. Bob then investigated the contents of the barn, and the contents suffered from the effects of Bob's pussy-footing.

By this time a huge crowd had assembled, consisting mostly of small children, who thoroughly enjoyed the impromptu circus, being unaware of the danger of attack from the infuriated animal.

Started Down Town.

Arriving at the intersection of Lindsay and Gladstone avenues, Bob espied the car line, and his elephantine instinct proved correct. He realised that it showed him the way down town. Bob has paraded the streets so often that he knows which side of the road to keep. He kept to the right, and was therefore trailed by several eastbound cars. Motormen rang their bells, but Bob kept going, considering it a part of the show. When he reached the College apartments he discovered that some boy had delivered some luscious fruit on the steps of one of the flats, and Bob paraded the be-flowered courtway, much to the chagrin of the perturbed janitor, who saw his year's work as a gardener going for nought.

Got Into Passageway.

Bob then returned to his trip down down, but only got as far as Rusholme road, when the twigs on the young trees proved too inviting, and he made a detour north. For some reason or other he endeavoured to visit a person at the end of a four-foot back passage way, and incidentally got jammed. The keeper then appeared upon the scene and called to his men that Bob was cornered, but not so Bob. He succeeded in backing out, after giving the occupants of the houses a severe fright. After regaining the street he charged his keeper, knocking him down and almost tramping on him.

Followed Another Home.

Going back to College street, he again took up his task of holding up vehicular traffic, as well as the street cars. Reaching the intersection of Dovercourt and College he came to a halt, and stood cross-ways on the T. S. R. intersection, where he defied all comers, and scared a crowd of people into the nearby stores. After a considerable interval the papa elephant of the show came along to entice Bob home, and succeeded. Bob was last seen placidly walking back to Dufferin Park holding papa's tail, which is the elephantine method of holding hands.

HAD SENSATIONAL END

Revelation in British Court Shocked Regina Claimant.

LONDON, July 21.—A sensational end came to the action brought by Homer Warren Laird, whose father was formerly mayor of Regina, and Mr. Yates of Regina against the British-European Trust concerning the purchase of a brewery in Regina. Laird was legally represented, but Yates conducted his own case. When Yates was cross-examined he admitted that as solicitor in England he was convicted of fraud and frogery of wills and perjury, receiving a life sentence. Upon this Laird's counsel said this revelation came as a complete surprise to his client who did not wish to be associated, even in the conduct of a lawsuit, with such a man, and accordingly withdrew from the case. A formal verdict for the defendants was returned.

THE FRENCH TROOPS CAPTURE A GERMAN BATTERY

KILLS MAN IN SIGHT OF MANY; ESCAPES

John Tiba Shot to Death by Stranger on Steps of His Home at Bayonne.

NEW YORK, July 24.—In sight of half a hundred children an unknown man met John Tiba, forty-five years old, of No. 534 avenue A, Bayonne, N.J., as he was descending the steps from the porch of his home, exchanged a few angry words, pulled out a revolver and in rapid succession shot Tiba three times in the head. Tiba died five minutes after the shooting.

The stranger darted down Twenty-second street, followed by a screaming throng. Newark Bay is within half a block of the place where the shooting occurred, and the boys told the police they had seen the man jump into the water. Twenty men set out in boats to find him, but discovered no trace. A search of the houses along the path the man had taken in his flight also proved unavailing up to a late hour last night. The Bayonne authorities notified the Jersey City police to be on watch for the slayer.

Women of the neighbourhood told the police that Mrs. Tiba had had a row with a woman living around the corner yesterday afternoon. They did not know her name. The police are proceeding on the theory that this woman's husband picked a quarrel with Tiba. They were unable, however, to learn the woman's name from Mrs. Tiba.

ASQUITH'S RECORD PREMIERSHIP.

It is curious that Mr. Asquith should after all, have been prime minister longer at a stretch—as he now has—than anyone since 1832, because at one point of his political career the lean years, if one may so call them, of his political life were out of all proportion to the fat years. At the age of fifty-three, for instance, life was, so to speak, owing him a lot of arrears. Mr. Asquith was fifty-three in 1905, and in that year, though he had been in parliament very nearly twenty years, he had had only three years in office. In 1905 Liberal prospects were bright but in 1902, when Mr. Asquith had turned fifty, they were never so dark, and it looked as though he and Mr. Haldane, and even Sir Edward Grey, who was a much younger man, were going to have much the same experience as Fox and Burke and Sheridan, whose sojourns in office are counted by months rather than years. Sir Edward Grey openly lamented about this time that the best years of his life were going without bringing him a chance.

Not only is Mr. Asquith's single stretch longer than that of any other modern prime minister, but he is getting near the top of the list for length of years of office with or without any breaks. Mr. Gladstone was prime minister for about fourteen years in all, and Lord Salisbury for about thirteen, but Lord Beacons field had only about seven years and Lord John Russell about six. Lord Palmerston's ascendancy was roughly from 1855 to 1865, in which period he had two terms as prime minister, one lasting three, and the other six years. It took Sir Robert Peel to gt and leave a name as one of the greatest of prime ministers.

World's Crops Better Than Last Five Year Average

ROME, July 25.—The latest report of the International Institute of Agriculture indicates that the world's crops this year will be less abundant than last, but that harvest prospects are better than the average in the five-year period, 1900-1905.

The estimate of the total wheat crop this year for the seven most important countries is 396,510,000 quintals (a quintal equals 220.46 pounds), or 76,734,000 quintals less than last year. For the United States the wheat total is estimated at 207,000,000 quintals, or 25 per cent. less than last year; for India 87,000,000 quintals, or 15 per cent. under last year. Estimates for Germany and Austro-Hungary were not obtainable.

INHERITS FORTUNE BY THREE HOUR MARGIN

Daughter Gets Estates of Father and Stepmother, Who Died on Same Day.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Through the death of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Perrine, at Holmdel, N.J., last Sunday, Mr. Perrines daughter, Mrs. William Gordon, of Clifton Heights, Pa., will inherit an estate estimated at from $80,000 to $100,000.

Mr. Perrine, proprietor of the Holmdel Inn, and his wife each made a will, leaving all their property to each other. Mr. Perrine in his will stipulated that his daughter should receive $100. Mrs. Perrine, it is said, owned property in her own right worth about $30,000, besides diamonds and other personal effects valued at several thousand dollars. Upon her death, which occurred three hours before the death of her husband, this property, under the terms of the will, passed to her husband. Mrs. Gordon, as sole heir of her father, will receive both estates.

Mr. Perrine's estate is estimated at $50,000. He also had antiques, which he had been collecting for years, valued at several thousand dollars.

Mr. Perrine's daughter was born of his first marriage and her husband was a brother of his second wife.

Joseph McDermott, County Clerk of Monmouth county, was named as executor of Mr. Perrine's estate.

Wonderful German Maze Of Trenches Captured By French In Big Drive

Paris, July 25.—One of the most remarkable series of fortifications uncovered on the western front since the struggle in the Labyrinth, near Ecurie, in Arteres, more than a year ago is engaging the attention of General Foch south of the Somme. The comparative ease with which the artillery has broken down the outlying mase of defences and the infantry occupied a broad stretch of the underground works, is the most eloquent commentary on the efficacy of the new French artillery fire.

Just west of the village of Vermandovillers on a height which rises some 50 feet or more above the village is an extensive wood whin has been in German possession for 18 months. The woods, star shaped, and lying partly on the side of the hill, provided cover, under which the Germans have labored unceasingly to build an elaborate system of trenches, dugouts, bomb-proof shelters, armored machine gun positions, and all the elements of a field fort.

Not less than 90 different trench lines ran through the wood and beneath them, in some cases, where two series of underground shelters where the occupants were confident they would be able to lie in peace while the most deadly of bombardments rained shells over their heads.

AT POINT OF GERMAN SALIENT

It was this maze which the French attacked on Thursday, when they resumed their smashing blows from Hardecourt all along the battle line. It represents the point of the German salient on the south of the Somme front, around which the French line bends into the deep wedge which has its apex a mile from Peronne. Obtining a footing in the position the French yesterday not only clung tenaciously to their captured ground but in desperate fighting, which however was only local in character, are extending and still further consolidating their gains.

The Germans here as in the Barleux and Soyecourt regions, where their positions were remarkably well fortified, are offering stronger resistance to attack than elsewhere on the line.

It now develops that Thursday's effort was due several days ago but that the artillery preparation was delayed by heavy weather. The French commanders report that the preliminary bambardment was so effective that the losses of the attackers were comparatively light.

Contrary to expectations, the Germans have made no attempt to follow up the smashing blow delivered against the northern Verdun defences a week ago. The French counter-attacks, according to the official accounts, are gradually winning back the ground gained by the Germans at heavy cost in the vicinity of Thiaumont and Fleury.

This inactivity on the part of the Crown Prince is interpreted by French military opinion as evidence that the Germans are finding increased difficulty in concentrating troops at any one point on the front. The French officers say that each fresh assault on Verdun is requiring longer and longer time to prepare. They assert that the Germans took no less than 18 days in preparation for the attack on July 12th.

COLONIAL TROOPS ACTIVE.

French Colonial troops played a conspicuous part in the latest offensive. Immediately before the offensive Lieutenant-Col. L—— told his men they would have to measure arms with a powerful and well equipped enemy, but, he said, "I have seen you at work and know that I can count on you. Good luck! Forward!"

Not long afterwards his men, in an impetuous assault captured three lines of German trenches, twelve machine guns and more than five hundred prisoners.

Another exploit took place near Estrees. An infantry column encountered a subterranean fort, strongly defended by a machine gun section. Led by its chiefs, it attacked the works with such ferocity that the machine gunners were surrounded and put out of action without being able to give the slightest resistance. Only one Frenchman was wounded during the assault.

Not far from Belloy-en-Santerre near the Amiens-Peronne road, an officer of the Colonial troops was wounded in the head by a ball from a machine gun. Almost blinded by the blood he turned toward his men, and said simply, "Avenge me!" With these words his troops, with courage and dash, went at their adversaries with the bayonet, and the result of their work, says an eye-witness, was horrible.

Among the prisoners taken in the vicinity of the Somme were Wurtembergers, Saxons, Bavarians and Prussians. For the most part they were very young, averaging 17 to 20 years. The captives included the entire company of a regiment which took an active part in the capture of Fort Vaux. One of the prisoners admitted his regiment had been brought hastily from Verdun on July 12th and put immediately in the first line to replace Bavarian Landstrum troops.

CALL THE GERMAN CROPS POOR.

Experts said to have Admitted Official Statements are Colored.

Amsterdam, July 24.—From a very reliable source I learn that the Prussian Agricultural Minister's optimistic view of the German harvest prospects is not in the least shared by the great majority of agricultural authorities, who admit that the official statements are highly colored and exaggerated. Great difficulty will be found in gathering the meagre damaged crops, owing to the lack of expert male labor, female labor being less useful than usual owin gto the lack of expert male labor, fe of the crops.

There is an immense loss of potatoes, which are lying in the swampy ground rotting. If there is no spell of warm weather immediately the harvest will be much below last year's. "Then nothing can save Germany," was the expression freely used.

The Berliner Tageblatt says that at a recent conference at Darmstadt with regard to the food situation, Adolph T. von Batocki, president of the German Food Regulation Board, frankly admitted that there was a shortage of food stuffs, especially in the towns, which it was impossible to overcome, and that he did not believe that the present supply of potatoes would permit of the raising of the maximum allowance from 2½ to 3 pounds per week per head, as had been proposed.

Mr. H. M. Ryckman, Port Rowan, Ont., writes: "Last year I was out in Saskatchewan. The water was very bad and I was taken with diarrhoea. In a few days I was in such bad shape I had to stop work. I got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and had only taken a few doses when it was stopped, and I was soon able to go back to work again."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past seventy years, and has had such great success in curing all bowel complaints that many firms have undertaken to provide a substitute for it, even going so far as to use a similar name.

Do not be led into taking a substitute for "Dr. Fowler's" but insist on getting what you ask for.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JIM GAY

A Story of a Reformed Card Sharp

By ELEANOR MARSH

A man rode up to a settler's cabin in the far west, threw himself from his horse and asked for something to eat. The settler was not at home, but his wife received the stranger, and her daughter, a child of twelve, looked up at the man with a pair of big black eyes wonderingly.

The mother was evidently troubled at his coming, but children are not aware of the differences in persons, and the daughter, who seldom saw any one except her parents, did not seem ill disposed toward him. On the contrary, his arrival was something out of the common in her life. The man was young, not over twenty-one, and not bad looking, but there was something in his appearance to make the elder woman shudder. She set out some bread and meat for him. It was not very tempting, and he asked if it was the best she could do.

"Mother," said the girl, "you have forgotten that you made pies yesterday."

The mother cast a quick reproving glance at her daughter and, going to a cupboard, took out a pie and placed it on the table before the stranger.

"Wouldn't you like a cup of coffee?" asked the child.

"Reckon I would," replied the man.

The woman frowned, but her back was turned toward the man, and he did not see her face. Besides, his attention was fixed on the child, who was instrumental in bringing forth what there was in the larder. He was fighting his way through the world. His hand was against every man, and every man's hand was against him. He was touched by the only kindness he had received in a long while.

The woman made the stranger a cup of coffee, and, having eaten and drunk, he said:

"I've had a square meal, thanks to you, sissy. Now I'm going to have a sleep. In case you hear or see any one coming, little girl, wake me at once."

"If you're sleepy," said the child, "why do you want to be wakened?"

"See here, younker; if some men come along they're probably hunting for me, and the sooner you awaken me the better it will be for me."

"Why are they hunting you?"

"To hang me."

The girl paled, but asked no further questions. The man stretched himself on a bunk fixed to the wall in the living, dining and bedroom in one, while the woman went to the other room, the kitchen, and washed the dishes. The stranger must have been long without sleep, for no sooner had he stretched himself on the bunk than he fell into a deep slumber.

There is something so inoffensive, so powerless, about a sleeper as always to attract sympathy. In this case sleep seemed to relax the man's features so that the animosity against mankind so marked upon it when he was awake disappeared. Twenty-one is the very beginning of manhood, and the youngster, his face being in repose, was singularly handsome. Perhaps the girl was old enough to feel drawn to one of the opposite sex. At any rate, she looked upon him sympathetically out of her great black eyes and presently got a blanket and threw it over him. Then, remembering what he had said to her, she went outside and scanned the country roundabout. Far in the distance she saw several men on horseback galloping toward the cabin.

The sleeper was conscious of hearing voices.

"Mother, some men are coming. I'm going to wake him up."

"Do no such thing. He's a desperado, quite likely a horse thief. Let him alone, and they'll get him."

"I won't; they'll hang him."

Then the man felt himself shaken. He started up.

"They're coming," said the girl.

The man sprang to the door, shaded his eyes with his hand against the sun, caught the child in his arms, kissed her, vaulted on to his horse and dashed away.

Not long after his departure a posse rode up to the house.

"Anybody been here?" asked one of them.

"Who are you looking for?" asked the woman.

"Jim Gay, the card sharp. He took $500 last night from a greenhorn in Silver City."

"Well," replied the woman, "a young fellow has just been here and lit out. Reckon if you go that a-way (pointing) you'll be on his track."

The men rode on, leaving the mother and daughter together, the latter receiving a scolding for protecting the stranger. The father came in later, and when told that Jim Gay, the card sharp, had been there and had been saved from capture by his daughter he gave her another scolding.

"Who is the fellow anyway?" asked his wife.

"I never saw him, but they say he's the slickest man at cards in the territory. He doesn't take much interest in doing a sucker. He rather runs to men who pride themselves on being up to all the dodges in the profession. But he's skinned so many of them that they won't tackle him any more."

"Papa," said the girl, "is it wicked to play cards? You play cards sometimes, don't you?"

No response was made to the question. The father's besetting sin was the gambling table.

* * * * * * * *

During five years following this episode the country round about the settler's cabin was filling up, but with that rough element which seeks new countries. Silver was what attracted the crowd, and many were growing rich from the mines. Scarborough, the settler, was in a position to avail himself of opportunities; but, being subject to a passion for gambling, whenever he got a good thing he gambled it away. In vain his wife pleaded with him to keep away from the gaming tables. It is singular how credulous are those who are afflicted with this passion. And yet is not the passion so strong that they are swept away by it, knowing that the chances are all against them?

Meanwhile the little girl who had saved the card sharp was growing to be a woman. She was a serious character, for she lived in a country where she saw a great deal to indicate to her that the world is not a bed of roses. Then, too, she experienced trouble at home. Her father was a bright man, but they say "death loves a shining mark," and it is hard to find a person with a superior intellect who is not handicapped by some glaring defect. Just as soon as Scarborough made a deal by which he pocketed a handsome profit he would go to a gambling den and lose it, and that, too, to men who were his inferiors.

One evening Scarborough, who had just sold a piece of property for $3,000, was being relieved of it by a gang of sharpers. While he was playing a young man of clerical cut and wearing a white cravat entered the den and, taking position in the center of the room, began to speak against the gambling passion. The proprietor looked at him as though uncertain whether to stop him or let him proceed. Seeing that no one in the room paid any attention to the speaker, he chose the latter course.

While the young clergyman was inveighing against the sin of gambling a girl of seventeen entered and, moving straight to Scarborough, put her arms about his neck and begged him to come away.

"Mother says that you will lose all the money received for the sale of the property," she pleaded.

"I've lost it already, but I'll get it back again, and more too."

"Oh, father!"

"Just you go home and tell your mother not to worry. I'll come out all right."

When the girl entered the gambling house the clergyman ceased his remarks on the sin of gambling and fixed his eyes upon her intently. He heard what she said to her father, and when he refused to go away with her the clergyman went over to the table where her father was playing and looked over the game.

"Gents," he said presently, "would you mind a man of the church taking a hand in this game?"

There was a burst of laughter and much chaffing of the clergyman at having preached against gambling and then going back on all he had said. But the men at the table, except Scarborough, were all card sharps and thought what a fine thing it would be to fleece a parson. He was admitted to the game with a welcome and, taking $100 from his wallet, invested the amount in chips.

Never at that board had such hands been held as by the parson. If the best hand against him was a full of nines he held a full of tens. When he dealt the cards it seemed that he was enabled to give the others such hands as would draw them out, and he always topped them. The chips all came his way, and before long he had a pile before him that filled the others with envy. Then he said:

"Gents, no more playin' for chips. Cash these and let the game go on for hard money."

Since he was winner, there could be no objection to this, and the game proceeded on a money basis. When the parson had won more than $2,500 he suggested a jack pot. The betting was opened with a pair of queens. The parson bet so high that he drove all the rest out except one man. When he was called and showed his hand he was found to hold four kings and an ace. He won $500 on that hand alone. Turning to Scarborough, he said:

"How much money did you bring in here?"

"Thirty-two hundred dollars."

The parson counted out the amount, pushed it toward him, deducted the hundred dollars he had begun the game with and left the balance on the table.

"You're a fine parson, you are," said the man who had lost the jackpot. "Who are you, anyway?"

"I'm Jim Gay, who used to be known in these parts for the slickest card shifter of all professionals.

"One day, when a posse was after me, I got into the cabin where this man and this girl were livin'. The girl was a child then, but against her mother's wishes she warned me of the coming of the committee and enabled me to show a clean pair of heels. Somehow I couldn't get her kindness out of my head, and it worked on me till it reformed me. I concluded to get an education to preach, so that I could spend the rest of my life exposing men who fleece and are fleeced. Do you remember me, little girl?"

"Yes, I do."

The three of them took the regained funds to Scarborough's cabin. It was invested in a silver mine and made the family comfortable. The father never gambled again, and Mabel Scarborough, as Gay's wife, is now assisting him in his crusade against gambling.

BUDDHA'S TOOTH.

Relic is One of the Treasures of the Temple at Kandy.

At all times of the year in Kandy, Ceylon, may be seen followers of Buddha making their way to the great Mahigawa Temple, the "Palace of the Sacred Tooth," in order to lay offerings and flowers at the shrine of the founder of their religion. Entering the temple, they pass into a small room, some 12ft. square, in which is kept the famous tooth of Buddha. The chamber is lighted by two lamps which have not been allowed to go out for years. The walls are splendidly decorated, and the vessel—called the Karundua—containing the tooth, stands on a massive silver table amidst a gorgeous array of jewels and other valuable gifts. The Karundua is draped with muslin, beneath which is a silver dome, studded with gems, and under this is a dome of gold, beautifully carved and literally encrusted with precious stones. Two similar coverings lie below them, and beneath these is a small case of gold, in which, on leaves of a gold lotus, reposes the tooth itself. This relic, carefully guarded, is seldom seen by others than priests. So much in reverence is the tooth held that to lay an offering to Buddha on the table bearing it is an ambition which every Buddhist would not fail to gratify if circumstances permitted.

War Nicknames.

War nicknames are a curious study. Probably there never was a war which did not give rise to some comic or offensive designation for the enemy. "Picts" (painted people) and "Lombards" (longbeards) remain as isolated monuments of the Roman soldier's play of fancy. The French in the early centuries called us "tails," for some rather mysterious reason. On more obvious grounds we have been known since the days of Joan of Arc as "godlams," the only epithet to which our gallant Allies have remained faithful throughout the centuries. We on our side have chiefly exercised our wit on the supposed passion of all Frenchmen for frogs. The nature of a war, indeed, can generally be traced in war nicknames. There is nothing opprobrious in "Ruski," and something positively caressing in "fuzzy-wuzzy," the English nickname for the brave but misguided Soudanese. "Guppy" suggests good-natured contempt. The Boer "rooinek" and "Brodrick" are familiar, but not insulting.

Keeps Smiling.

Smith-Dorriens' characteristic cheerfulness was invaluable to the morale of our troops in the dark days at the beginning of our campaign in France. "Smith-Dorrien's smiling," our men used to say, "so that things can't be so bad." It is not generally known that Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien has four brothers also serving their country—two in the army and two in the navy. One brother reverses the order of the family names. Someone asked Sir Horace the reason of this, and he replied, "I suppose the family was not quite sure in which order the names came so rang the changes on them so that at least one branch might be correct."

Canadian Northern.

It is the boast of the new Canadian Northern railway that it has already put 600 towns on the Canadian map.

Bookworm Diplomat.

Sir Francis Elliott, who has been acting as a sort of go-between for Lord Kitchener and Constantine of Greece, has had a pretty hard time since the war began. Queen Sophia has been particularly rude to him on several occasions, and to Lady Elliott too. He is, of course, a relative of the young Earl of Minto, and is, in private life, a bit of a bookworm. For some long time he was stationed in Bulgaria, but has been at Athens as our Minister for several years, and has a very charming house in that dustiest of cities.

There is no surer safeguard against the temptations that come to young men and women than a love for home. It has brought back and held many a wanderer in a safe place. It is something not only to love home but to know that you love it—and to know that you are happier at home than in any other spot on earth.

The idea seems to exist among us that to be polite to each other in the family circle is foolish and like putting on airs. We must rid ourselves of this notion and act on the principle that whatever helps to make our intercourse pleasanter outside the family circle should be brought into use there. We should avail ourselves of any and everything that can be used to advantage in our daily intercourse. It is no exhibition of airiness to say "thank you" or if "you please." These little courtesies are indications of refinement, and costing nothing, they help to make the wheels of life move more smoothly. It is not in elaborate attempts at politeness that true gentility consists. It is in the simple, honest expression of the genuine feelings of the heart which is interested in the welfare of others.

Where is the stream of life so dark and opportunities that the sunshine of a happy face failing on the turbid tide will not waken an answering gleam? Why, these joyful, good-tempered people don't know half the good they do.

Bread and cheese and kisses are better than sumptuously laden tables with no expression of love.

Vatican Again Considered as Means of Restoring Peace in Europe; Belief in the Sacredness of Life the Cause of Trouble in India

Germany Seeks the Pope as the Mediator for Peace

Believes Benedict XV. Would Be More Favorable to Her Designs and More Acceptable to Italy Than President of United States.

(Special Dispatch.)
ROME, Saturday.

That Germany is getting ready for peace and intends to use the good offices of the Pope alone for this purpose is the conviction in Catholic circles in Rome and is the subject of active discussion in the Italian press. The whole Vatican-Quirinal question is assuming a new phase, which is regarded throughout Europe as of the very highest importance for the immediate future of the Catholic Church and the Papacy.

Germany's expectation of an early peace at last furnishes, in the opinion of many newspapers in the countries of the Allies, the key to the Verdun mystery, the utterly unaccountable insistence of the German authorities in consenting to the continued sacrifice of men and military material on an enormous scale for an apparently futile military gain. Verdun is hoped by the Germans to be one of the "pledges" in their hands when their representatives meet those of the Allies across the conference table and set forth the gains which each side has made at the other's expense since the war began and endeavor, on a basis of exchange, to reach an agreement regarding the conditions on which all the belligerents will be willing to end the conflict.

The Frankfurter Zeitung has given the authority of its semi-official standing to a confirmation of the cabled announcement that Germany expects that peace can be brought about on the basis of the "pledges" held by each side among the combatants. Of late, indeed, the word "pledges" is being technically used to indicate the species of peace settlement, which the Central Empires consider as the probable conclusion of the war.

Eliminate American President.

The fact that the United States has ahead the prospect of a long contentious dispute with Mexico, many erroneous statements regarding which, for interested purposes, have been circulated in the foreign press, is considered as completely eliminating the President of the United States as the chief figure in bringing about the conclusion of the European war. Pope Benedict, it is expected, will utilize the services of the leading neutral Powers, and most conspicuously of the United States and of Spain, in carrying out the peace mediation proposals, but to the Pope alone is expected to be intrusted by Germany the negotiations on behalf of her and of her allies in seeking an end of the war.

Many significant facts are considered as confirmatory of this view. If the Pope is to be accepted as the spokesman for the Teutonic Powers in suing for peace it is obvious that Italy must be conciliated in advance. The retirement from power of Signor Salandra and the entry into the office of Premier of Signor Boselli was an incident which recently aroused much curiosity and speculation, but its real object becomes intelligible in the opinion of European onlookers in connection with the action of Germany in the matter of peace.

The fact that, for the first time since the Italian civil government established itself in Rome and the Pope became a "prisoner" in the Vatican, a representative of the Catholic party, however unofficial, should become a member of the government of Italy is of such extreme significance that only imminent events of the most important kind could be considered as justifying it, in view of the attitude and sentiments regarding the Roman question of the bulk of the Italian population.

It is believed that instructions must have gone forth in Germany not only to avoid all criticism of Italy on the part of influential persons or newspapers but also to tender to that country the hand of friendship. Flattering advances of the most unexpected kind have recently been made in Germany toward the former member of the Triple Alliance now at war with Austria, and the Italian press has shown marked consideration for the advances which have been made.

As a further preparation of the ground and a sweeping away of all obstacles, the official press of Austria has been relieving Germany from the onus of having started the war by taking the burden on their own country's shoulders. The Austro-Hungarian newspapers, returning without any apparent motive to the question of the origin of the war, affirm with one accord that Germany had not wanted war. The Pester Lloyd, the official organ of Budapest, says:—

Exonerates Germany.

"The war would certainly have been avoided if Sir Edward Grey's proposal of a conference of the Powers had been accepted, but the nation which refused to agree to the conference was not Germany, but Austria-Hungary, which saw its most vital interests at stake."

The newspaper adds that Sir Edward Grey's only error in this matter now is in making the responsibility for the failure of the conference fall upon Germany.

The Fremdenblatt, the official organ of Vienna, says that Sir Edward Grey's proposed conference "could not be accepted, as it would have meant the ruin of Austria. Austria, in other words, had absolutely to subjugate Serbia and, in order to succeed in this purpose, was ready to go to any extreme."

This remarkable unanimity of leading Austro-Hungarian newspapers in taking responsibility from the back of Germany and placing it on their own country is believed to be part of Germany's method of making a bid for generous treatment, of indicating that fidelity to treaty agreements brought her chivalrously into the war, not for her own profit, but for the sake of others; that she alone is to be regarded as the principal in the negotiations for peace on the side of the Teuton allies, and that Austria accepts the same subordinate rôle in diplomatic matters as she has consented to already in military enterprises.

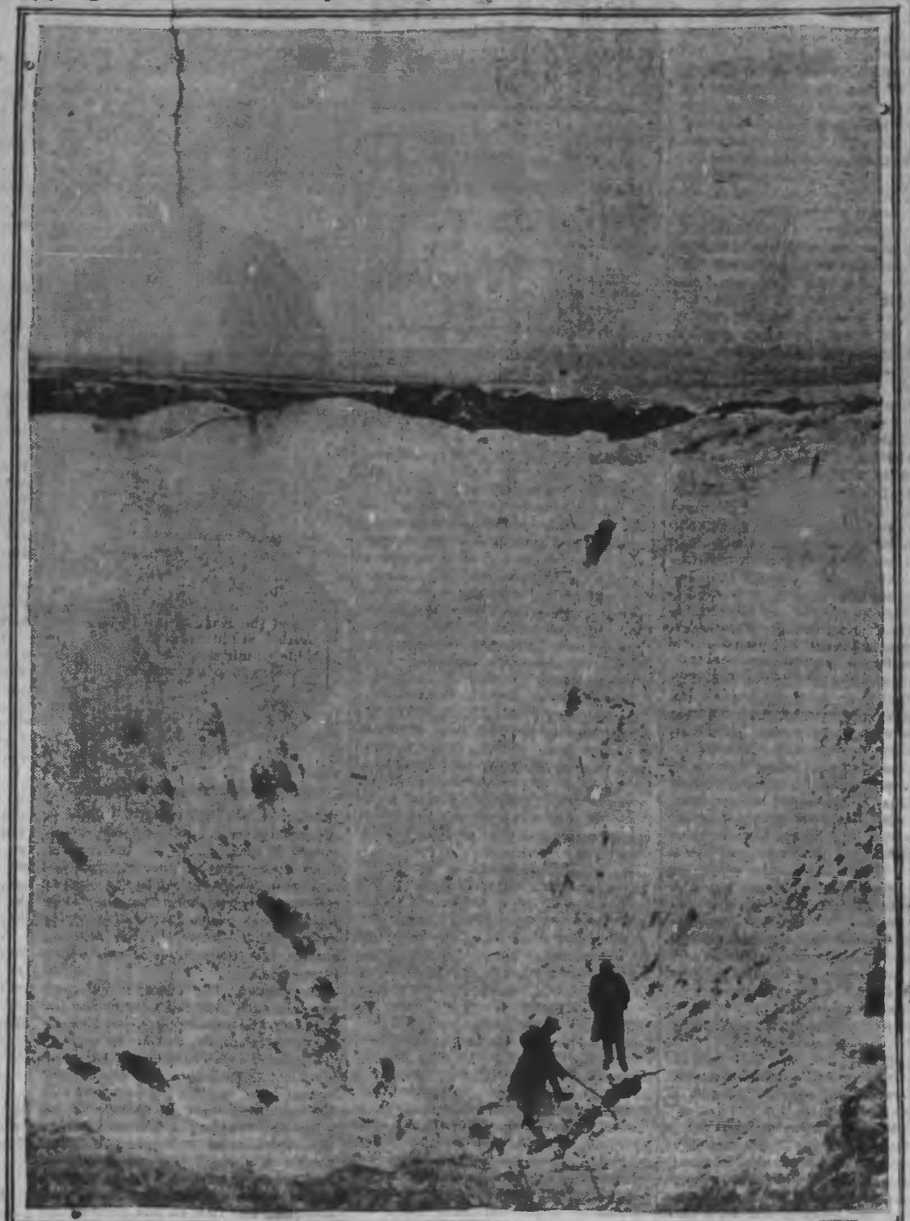
The Italian newspapers, however, are not willing that these statements should be allowed to pass without some comment or rectification. Thus the Tribuna says:—

"Let Berlin, Vienna and Budapest settle this matter among themselves as to which of them is responsible for refusing the proposed conference, but in view of their present confession let there be no more vain pretentions regarding attack by Russia and England on Germany. For our part, while we take due note of the Austro-Hungarian confession, we are not at all disposed to admit that the responsibility of the Danube Empire cancels the responsibility of Berlin. Even the man in the moon must know by this time that Austria was not in a condition to assume such a responsibility without the positive aid of Germany. This fact is abundantly proved in many ways, and, above all, by the events of a military character."

That the mediation of the United States would be acceptable at present neither to Germany and her allies nor to the Entente Powers is the conclusion reached in consequence of opinions expressed in the various European countries now at war.

The Italian press generally, however, discusses in calm fashion the manoeuvres of Germany in her preparations for the desired peace conference. On the one hand they publish, in no unsympathetic fashion, the statements of writers like Marchese Crispolti and Monsignor Benigi, both accepted as spokesmen for Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State, setting forth the grounds on which the Vatican demands a right to take a leading part in the peace conference which is to end the war. And on the other hand they show consideration for the tenders of friendly sentiments which are being made toward Italy by prominent Germans.

Sapping Made Difficult by Chalky Character of Earth on Western Front



FROM LONDON DAILY MAIL. TWO FRENCH SOLDIERS IN THE PIT OF A GREAT CHALK CRATER

In the chalk region of the western firing line huge craters are formed by heavy explosions acting on the friable formation of the ground. The above photograph was obtained by a French official photographer. The geologic character of the district affects very seriously the question of sapping. In some cases water has been struck at the depth of seven feet or eight feet, so that deep operations have naturally been curtailed.

Hindoo Strike Based on Killing of Pariah Dogs

Conflict of Eastern and Western Thought Forcibly Illustrated by Efforts of Authorities in Bombay to Observe Ordinary Sanitary Precautions.

(Special Dispatch.)
BOMBAY, Saturday.

Bombay has been the scene of a curious incident during the last few days, illustrating how Eastern and Western thought occasionally come into conflict in India. There has been a "strike" of Hindoo merchants and shop workers against the destruction of pariah dogs. The sacredness of life is, of course, an article of the Hindoo creed—if creed it can be called—and the Jains in particular hold to this tenet with great sacredness. They carry their views on this question to such extremes that the wealthier of their community buy decrepit oxen, and rather than allow them to be killed place them in "pinjrapoles"—"homes of rest" they might euphemistically be called—where the poor beasts come to a natural if painful end.

In famine times, when fodder is scarce, Jains of the more rigid sort also go to the markets and buy up large numbers of cattle which the poverty stricken farmers are compelled to get rid of. At enormous expense they thus prevent the animals falling, as they would in the natural course of events, into the hands of the slaughterman. Some of the community even go so far as to tie a bandage over the mouth so that in breathing they shall not accidentally inhale, swallow and kill some microscopic fly.

With such beliefs and practices in vogue it can be understood that the disposal of pariah dogs is no easy matter. These unpleasant beasts are to be found everywhere in India. Even in a modern city like Bombay there are thousands. Owing to the peculiar views of the Hindoos there has always been great reluctance to kill them, however disease laden and unsightly they may be.

For nearly a century their destruction has been legally authorized, but the regulation has been very spasmodically and sporadically enforced, even if the animals went mad and bit other dogs and human beings, infecting them with rabies. In recent years the growth of Western ideas of sanitation and hygiene has stimulated public opinion to such an extent that the government a few years ago, after an inquiry into the pariah dog danger, compromised with Hindoo views by permitting the "pinjrapole" authorities to collect dogs liable to destruction by reason of disease and keep them in enclosures until they got better or died. This was well as far as it went, but it did not go far.

The efforts of dog protectors were of little use in keeping down the number of pariahs, and five years ago these and the dreaded disease of rabies were found to be increasing. The police thereupon began the systematic destruction of homeless and diseased dogs. Their methods, for want of better, were distinctly unpleasant and decidedly not humane, and pending the adoption of better ones little that was effective was done. Ultimately the municipality quietly began the lethal chamber system, which, of course, is painless, swift and sure. That was about six months ago.

All would have gone well no doubt, but unfortunately the executive health officer of Bombay, perhaps thinking religious prejudices against dog killing had died down, mentioned in his monthly bulletin the number of dogs that had been officially killed. This showed a total of 629 for January and 447 for April, with approximating figures for the intervening months.

This wholesale destruction at once aroused a section of the Hindu community, and on the representations of a handbill published by a mysterious individual who has not yet been traced a large number of servants in the cloth market and share market went on strike and as a consequence business was temporarily brought to a standstill. There can be no doubt that the movement had the general sympathy of the Hindu merchants.

India, however, has not been in touch with British constitutionalism all these years for nothing, and a meeting of Hindu merchants decided that the action of the malcontents was absolutely irregular and that the proper thing to do was to petition government in constitutional fashion. Not a few of the speakers severely blamed the native pinjrapole authorities for their remissness, and all were agreed in deciding that the strike must end forthwith. The market employes have now written a letter humbly praying for forgiveness, and there for a time the matter ends. Pending inquiry into the whole question by the Municipal Commissioner dogs are not to be caught in Hindu districts.

Although Hindu feelings are very strong on the matter the trouble is likely to be smoothed over. This is the land of "Kuch parwa nahin" ("It does not matter"), and things probably will drift along more or less as usual if the dog murder business is kept quiet. The affair is, however, an interesting exemplification of the fact that "East is East and West is West" and of the difficulty of assimilating the customs and thoughts of the one with the other.

German Newspapers Urge That Strenuous Submarine Warfare Be Now Renewed

(Special Dispatch.)
BERLIN, Saturday.

A careful survey of the German press, especially of the conservative and national liberal journals, cannot fail to show that an influential portion of German public opinion is bringing enormous pressure to bear on the government and the Kaiser for an early resumption of submarine warfare.

A number of nationalist Deputies are lecturing all over Germany in that strain, while Count Reventlow, in the Tageszeitung, openly hints that unless Germany lays aside all considerations of humanity and resumes wholesale torpedoing she cannot win the war and, above all, cannot defeat England. Germans in favor of the resumption of U-boat piracy—their number is increasing, as well as their influence and their hold over the general public—argue first that Germany has not really pledged herself to abandon submarine warfare for good.' The concession made to the United States in the May note, they argue, was in reality conditional, though the condition was denied at the time. Germany explicitly said, in answer to President Wilson, that she 'hoped the United States would obtain from the Allies the lifting of the blockade,' but in case the United States did not care to, or could not achieve anything in that direction, the imperial government reserved full liberty of action.

Sale of Cocaine to Soldiers Is Now Prohibited by British Law

(Special Dispatch.)
LONDON, Saturday.

London's comparatively new vice, cocaine, which until a few years ago was credited with being an American habit, has spread so far as to call for warning and interference in the public interest.

By a recent regulation it is an offence under the Defence of the Realm act to sell or supply cocaine to soldiers or sailors unless it is included in the prescription of a certified medical man. It is expected that further drastic action will be taken to check the habit among civilians. So long as possession of cocaine is not an offence the existing regulations will always be difficult to enforce effectively.

Some weeks ago an individual who was arrested with twelve small packets of cocaine in his possession had to be released because he could not be proved to have sold any. But vendors there are in considerable number who profit by the growing demand, and as cocaine is scheduled under the Poisons act they are to be found outside the ranks of ordinary chemists.

The reputable pharmacist is now wary of the customer who goes from house collecting a little cocaine here and a little there for "toothache." Cocaine smuggling is profitable. One wholesaler in the trade who was caught in Paris—Crequet by name—had made $1,500 a month by it.

An Insidious Drug.

Cocaine is more insidious even than morphia. Its first effect is to produce a feeling of boundless exaltation, energy and confidence. A few minutes after taking cocaine a man feels that he could conquer the world. The reaction comes within half an hour and drives the cocaine victim to the extremes of melancholy and irritability. According to an army authority, "If a soldier takes to cocaine he is useless for the army from that very day."

For this reason two persons were found guilty of supplying cocaine to the Canadians at Folkestone and were sent to prison for six months with hard labor. During the hearing of these charges it was stated that forty cocaine takers were in the military hospital.

People more Particular

THE demand for package goods grows greater every year.

Why?

Because the world is ever growing more and more particular about foods.

Packages keep the goods in wholesome, sanitary condition. They keep out dust, flies, moisture and odors, preventing deterioration.

They preserve flavor, freshness and strength, insuring value for the money.

BRITISH IN RUSSIA.

Tremendous Ovations for Unit of Armoured Cars.

Officers and men of the British unit in Russia have had conferred upon them by the Tsar the Order and Medal of St. Ann for "meritorious work." This unit consists of a large number of powerful armoured cars and a complete equipment with hundreds of officers and men. Many of its members have fought in Belgium, France, Gallipoli, and in German South-West Africa, and they represent South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Ireland, while a number come from the constituency (North Huntingdon) of Commander Locker-Lampson, M.P., who is in command. The unit left England in November last, but, the ice having formed in the White Sea, they were unable to proceed to Archangel, and thereupon steamed to Alexandrovsk, which remains an open port all the year round. The transports with the armored cars were anchored in the harbor of Alexandrovsk, while the officers and men landed and prepared to spend the winter in the Arctic. The winter months were very hard, with intense cold, the glass being nearly always below zero, and with but a couple of hours light daily, but the men, despite the hardships and frostbite, were cheery and in good spirits. The school buildings at Alexandrovsk —a centre of education in Lapland— were utilized as barracks, and here day by day the British were drilling and training in order to keep themselves fit for the work ahead of them. As soon as the ice melted all rejoined their ships and proceeded to Archangel, where they had a tremendous welcome and civic reception. The unit were feted all the way to Moscow, and had another enthusiastic reception there. They were cheered and pelted with flowers by thousands of people, and following a public luncheon, Commander Locker-Lampson and other members of the unit were presented with mementoes by the Grand Duchess Elizabeth. So they progressed to the battlefront, always through cheering crowds at the wayside stations, where flowers and cigarettes were thrown into the railway carriages.

ABOUT GARNISHING

Some of the Sprigs That Make Food Attractive.

THEY APPEAL TO THE EYE.

There Are Two Sorts of Trimming, One For Flavor and One For Decoration—Garnishing Often Turns a Despised Dish Into a Favorite.

With spring spleeniness upon us, it is well for housewives to bait appetites. Very often a dish may be delicious to taste, but unattractive to the eye, and the eye judges it before the palate does. So make it attractive to the eye if you would have it a successful dish.

There are two sorts of garnishes—those that add flavor as well as decoration and those that are only decorative and do not add flavor. Mushrooms, for instance, served with a ragout of meat, add to both appearance and taste. A bright green leaf under half a muskmelon adds only to appearance. This second class of garnishes need not be served when they are used on the serving dish.

Parsley is perhaps the most useful garnish. In sprigs with cold meat, minced with soup and vegetables and salads, it is always fresh in color and tempting in taste.

Mushrooms are useful because, canned, they always can be kept on hand. And so can peas. A mound of canned peas served in the middle of an Irish stew makes it far daintier than a mound of plain boiled potatoes. Potatoes, however, can be used for garnishing. Scoop raw potatoes with a round scoop and boil them. Serve them with melted butter and parsley for a garnish, or force soft, mashed potatoes through a stiff paper cone and brown in the oven, or fry brown small rounds of potatoes, or use French fried potatoes, and potato garnish is suitable with cold meat.

Green and red peppers, too, can be used to garnish vegetables, meats and salads. An egg salad is much improved if it is dotted with bits of red pepper. Minced green pepper or shredded green pepper adds both taste and looks to potato and cabbage salad.

Beets and carrots can be cut in rings or stars, cooked tender very carefully, and then used to garnish substantial meat dishes.

Barberries are one of the purely ornamental garnishes. Holly, too, can be used in season, and bits of evergreen can often be called on to help make a simple dish attractive.

Remember that the garnishing of a dish will often change it from something not liked to a favorite with the family.

Inducements to Matrimony.

There prevails in some parts of Brittany a curious marriage custom. On certain fete days the marriageable girls appear in red petticoats, with white or yellow borders around them. The number of borders denotes the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band denotes 100 francs per annum; each yellow band represents 1,000 francs a year.

Volcano Made by Man.

At Brule, France, is the most remarkable volcano made by man. Originally it was a mass of coal, millions of tons. One day about a century ago the coal caught fire, and it has never ceased burning. The summit of the smoldering mass has a genuine crater.

Paradoxical.

"There was a funny thing about that counterfeit note charge."

"What was it?"

"The grand jury found a true bill in the case."

The grandest of all human sentiments—what is that? It is that man should forget his anger before he lies down to sleep.

EXPERTS IN HOMES

What Does Household "Efficiency" Mean to You?

MOSTLY INDIVIDUAL VIEWPOINT

Is it Running a Home Well or Inexpensively or Easily, or Is It, Rather, the Mental Attitude Women Maintain Toward Their Special Work?

What is your idea of household efficiency? To every woman the phrase means something different.

Perfect efficiency cannot be entirely a matter of book accounts, of time and labor saving devices—in fact, of physical work. Efficiency is as much a matter of mental attitude as anything else. Does this seem absurd to you on first thoughts? Think it over a little further, and the more you think into it the less absurd it will seem.

It has often been said that every single thing in the universe has first been built in mind before it has taken visible shape. The buildings have been planned in architects' minds; the streets have been all thought out by contractors; books, painting, music—all have had birth in mind first. So it is with every one of our successes, it is said. The success is thought of long before it actually arrives.

Now let us go back to this question of household efficiency being a mental attitude first and foremost. You may bring up in argument that a housewife may think efficiently as much as she likes, but if she has had no practice in running her home along the most approved lines she cannot very well put her thoughts into demonstration. You may say in proof that the girl who has spent her time in a business office cannot be as practical a housewife as the girl trained in domestic science no matter how efficient a mind the former may have.

Your theory, if you follow this line of reasoning, as so many women do, has some good points, but, on the whole, is without backbone. As a matter of fact, the business girl very often makes a much better housewife than the girl trained in all the homely arts. The business girl brings business methods to bear on the running of her home. She has an efficient mind and she uses it. For instance, she is quick to detect that many steps are lost in going from icebox to stove or from sink to china closet, and she seeks a remedy at once, whereas the home girl takes such things as a few extra steps here and there quite as a matter of course, and would never think of trying to change things.

The woman of another type looks on housekeeping as the most stupid thing, to be hurried through and got rid of as quickly as possible. Still another type is fond of one particular branch of housework and neglects the rest of the work for its sake.

Now, how can such women run a well organized home? They may have all the practical knowledge on earth, but their attitude toward housekeeping is so very wrong that their homes will never be efficiently managed until they change their attitudes. When they have learned to look on housekeeping as an all engrossing, scientific study which requires all concentration and interest they will begin to show efficient results, not before.

out with lace and pink rosebuds. The model is so simple that any clever girl can make one for herself and any number for Easter brides.

Styles in Sleeves.

All the new tight bodices have long tight sleeves, but on the picture blouses there are sleeves which recall the leg-o'-mutton outline and also sleeves finished off with voluminous frills of fine lace or embroidered tulle. For morning blouses the simple bishop sleeve holds its own bravely. For washing blouses this is the best of all sleeves. It is as practical as it is becoming.

SUNBURN

Don't Be a Drudge

Housework with its ceaseless, humdrum duties often causes a woman to "go to seed," to become listless and indifferent to both her personal appearance and what is going on around her. She fails to make her work agreeable, to keep her mind freshened and alert. The successful girl or woman in the business world realizes the importance of keeping her mind brightened and of doing her work in such a way that it will come easier. The result is each day is met with the right thought, the work is done systematically, and the worker herself becomes more capable, better fitted to meet the unexpected demands that every little while come up.

"We are not all fitted for housework," we say apologetically. That is why so many of us are failures at it. There is of course some truth in this. Indeed, we are not all fitted for housework, but every woman knows that when she assumes the management of a home she, and she alone, is responsible for the success or failure of the work in that home.

We hear a lot about the "drudgery" of housework, but if women would only study up on it housework would not seem as distasteful as many women seem to think it is. In these days of labor saving devices it seems incredible that women will worry along in the old way of doing things. Tell a woman whose shoulders have become bent from broom sweeping that a carpet sweeper will do the work better and easier and you will not be thanked for your trouble. She will cling to the broom, meanwhile bemoaning the fact that her work is "never done." The old fashioned cook and her coal stove have been lauded sky high, but the delicious meals prepared these days in the fireless cooker have the old time cook and her coal fire beaten a dozen different ways.

The woman who has become a household drudge has only herself to blame. No man likes to see his wife in that role. Any woman who can read can make her housework easier and do it better. Take, for instance, the splendid household articles published each day in many papers. Cooking, sewing, caring for babies, the general work of the house, are handled so that every one may learn.

The banker, lawyer—in fact, every professional and business man—reads up on his particular work. Why cannot women see the logic of reading up on their household needs? The wife, the mother in her home, has been intrusted with a greater work than the most successful lawyer or banker.

Don't go to seed. Fill your mind with happy thoughts. Stop being a drudge. Even if silver threads are showing in the gold or the darkness of your hair, do it up as prettily as possible. Go out and lose yourself in the gay crowds occasionally. Forget all about yourself. The walk will bring roses into your cheeks, and when you reach home you'll have a fine appetite for supper. Just try it and see!

Making Bad Worse.

Out on Egypt's sands the Territorials were camped. The captain of the company was all that a captain should not be. He was short and stout and round of shoulder.

Needless to say, among his men he was known as "Humpy." One night, on returning to camp the sentry let him go by unchallenged, and so roused his military wrath.

"What the blue Alsatian mountains do you mean?" he snapped. "Why didn't you demand the countersign?"

The sentry trembled with fear so badly that his wits got shaken badly. "Bedad, sir," he stammered, "I thought you was a c-c-c-amel."

A PRINCESS' LOT

The Grand Duchess of Luxemburg Is Closely Guarded.

REPORTED TO BE ENGAGED.

Barely Twenty-one Years Old, the Youngest Ruler in Europe, Marie Adelaide Is Practically a Prisoner In Her Own Palace.

It is reported that the young Grand Duchess of Luxemburg will marry soon, but the name of the fortunate bridegroom to be is withheld.

Marie Adelaide is one of the most pathetic as well as one of the most romantic figures in the world today. This pretty young girl barely twenty-one years old, was adored by her prosperous little country before the war broke out. Today she is practically a prisoner in her own palace. Unable to get out without a military escort and forced to look from her prison windows upon a people starving, terrified and forced to live upon charity, she has striven bravely to assert her rights and those of her people in the face of the overwhelming power of the German empire, but the struggle is naturally a hopeless one.

To complete her misery great pressure has been brought to bear upon her to marry a German prince, but this she has refused to do, as she bitterly resents the German invasion of her country. For more than a year the kaiser's agents have worked hard to persuade the youngest ruler in Europe to become the bride of a German prince, the object being to insure the future control of Luxemburg. So strong did this pressure become that the spirited young duchess revolted against it and, stamping her foot on the floor of her palace, exclaimed:

"I really must be left alone. If I cannot find peace in my own palace I shall soon be forced to seek it in a convent."

The grand duchess is the oldest of six sisters. Her family is a branch of the house of Orange, which rules in Holland. When Wilhelmina became queen of Holland she could not succeed to Luxemburg because of the Salic law. A cousin of Wilhelmina's became Grand Duke of Luxemburg. When he died in 1912, leaving only girl children, the Luxemburg parliament passed a new law making his daughters eligible to the throne.

Colors For Middle Age.

It is safe to say that few women of middle age can wear brown successfully. When the hair is turning white or gray it is particularly unbecoming, as the gray and brown do not harmonize in the least. Brown seems to bring out all the unbecoming yellow qualities in gray hair. Dark blue, on the other hand, lends it a bluish white tinge that is soft and particularly lovely. If your face is sallow never wear green. If, however, your hair is turning gray, but your skin is white and clear, with a soft pink flush in the cheeks, take to green kindly, as it will be most becoming. Lavender and purple are really beautiful on most middle aged women, while black and gray are equally successful. White, however, seldom looks well unless the skin is almost flawless.

VARIOUS INITIALS.

Hints About Marking Child's Garments So They Won't Mix.

One can buy in the various stores initials by the yard, worked in red or blue outline stitch on narrow strips of linen tape, three-eighths or a half inch wide.

These letters are used for marking plain underclothing, etc. They are of great use to the mother with a large family, who has neither money nor time to spare on embroidery and who finds it necessary to have some distinguishing mark on the clothing, especially when there are two children the same size.

The letters are cut off from the strip when needed and overcast on the inside of the garment, any place where it will be invisible when worn.

When this system is used even stockings are easily paired. Sew each child's initial at the top of the stocking on the inside; then put a cross stitch in red under the letter on each stocking of the first pair. Use a blue cross stitch on the second, yellow on the third, etc.

Street and Motor Coats.

The ripple coat for spring is made in both cloth and silk. Belts are placed at the normal waist line, at slightly higher than normal or a few inches below the point. Some are short waisted in the front and long waisted in the back. Both styles are liked.

Many coats have high collars and button up to the throat. They are made so that they can be worn open or closed. Oblong sailor collars, draped collars, ruche effect collars, cape collars and simple notched collars are approved. The cape collar is made detachable, being fastened with clasps or with buttons.

Sleeves are dressy, both in cut and by means of fancy cuffs. Motor coats are in plain colors, stripes, checks, plaids and mixtures.

Your New Veil.

If you would preserve that new novelty veil of yours and get from it the greatest possible wear do not fold it when putting it away. Instead take a piece of cardboard, around which you may roll it without creases, cover it with tissue paper and keep it in the box with your hat, and it will always be in the best condition and ready for wear.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The careful housekeeper wants to wear an apron much of the time, because the rest periods between her hours for work are often very short, therefore she manages to have one that is not really a heavy work apron, yet is serviceable enough in its design to fully protect the dress worn underneath. Such style of apron is illustrated in No. 7,858.

The worthiness of this model can better be appreciated when one has made and worn it. All the style that it needs is given with the capelike treatment of the shoulder part, which answers for a sleeve, and the braid trimming or banding which finishes the neck, sleeve edges, belt and pocket, which favors either side of the three gored skirt section.

Chambray, figured percale and the like will be desirable for this utility garment, which fastens at the back with buttons to the waistline. The fitted belt is a detail of interest. Stripes and checks combined with plain material may be considered also for this model, as well as gingham and linen.

The pattern of apron No. 7,858 is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 3¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 4¼ yards of braid.

You may obtain the pattern by sending to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

BRITISH HOLD GREATER PART OF POZIERES

German Counter Attacks Are Frustrated

General Haig Reports More Ground and Prisoners Taken

"The Greater Part of Pozieres is Now Ours" Says the Statement From the British Commander-in-Chief--Russian, Italian and French Troops All Make Gains on Their Various Fronts--General Sakharoff Scores a Russian Success.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 25.—"The greater part of Pozieres is now ours," reported General Haig in an official statement to-day. The British commander-in-chief declared that nowhere had the Teutons reached the British trenches. German counter-attacks at several points north of Pozieres were all frustrated. The British gained some additional ground, and captured two machine guns and more prisoners.

BERLIN, July 25.—French assaults south of Estrees "temporarily gained ground," the War Office statement said to-day. An admission that the Russians had succeeded in penetrating the Teuton first lines south of Berestecko, was also made in the War Office report.

To Hold Conference About Deutchsland

Special to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, July 25.—The stay or departure of the German sub-sea freighter, Deutschland, may be determined to-morrow night in a conference here between her proprietor and German Ambassador Von Bernstorff. Despite the mass of misinformation surrounding her venture, it leaked out to-day that Bernstorff, Consul Luderitz, and others plan to meet here. Unless the Deutschland's sister ship, Bremen, is reported same in the meantime, the subject of their session it is assumed will be on a matter of either indefinitely interning the Deutschland or making a bold run for home, taking chances with the Allied patrol off the capes. The Deutschland promoters stood ready to shoot out at a moment's notice. The Deutschland tug Timmins had steam up, the patch was clear, and all that was necessary was for the Timmins to pull a switch and make a run. The German super-submarine Bremen, sister ship to the Deutschland, will put in at Boston. The Bremen had positive orders before leaving Garmany not to risk running into the fleet of Allied warships off the Virginia capes. This was made known to the United Press to-day by a high official of the Eastern Forwarding Co., who declined to permit the use of his name.

Another Advance By French Troops

Special to the Examiner.

PARIS, July 26.—Another advance of French troops was reported in to-day's official statement. They carried "strongly fortified blockhouses" south of Estrees, and ejected the Germans from trenches they occupied nearby. Counter-attacks elsewhere along the French front by the Germans were repulsed. North of Vermandavillers the Germans were thrown out of some trenches they had occupied. On the left bank of the Meuse a German grenade attack against Hill 304 was checked by machine gun fire. In Alsace the Germans made an unsuccessful attack following extensive artillery preparation north of Altkirch. The communique also revealed French air squadron raids on Pierrepont and Longuyon railroad stations and Mangiesse Bivouac.

Italians Storm a Long Entrenchment

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ROME, July 25.—Italian troops stormed and captured another long Austrian entrenchment near Caserazebin, according to a War Office statement to-day. Between the peaks of Mount Chiesa and Campigoletto the Italian forces crossed three lines of Austrian wire entanglements and succeeded in establishing their lines just below the crest of those heights.

General Sakharoff Breaks Foe's Line

Examiner Speci.1.

PETROGRAD, July 26.—Further advance of General Sakharoff's Russian forces was announced to-day. The Russian commander reported his troops had penetrated enemy entanglements on the River Stonevka.

From the Caucasus theatre of war the Grand Duke Nicholas reported that his advancing Russians had reached a point about ten miles from Erzingan, the Turks retreating in disorder.

The Irish Question Endangers Cabinet

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 25.—The Coalition Cabinet was endangered to-day by the Irish question. David Lloyd George offered to resign in view of the failure of the Cabinet to acquiesce in his proposals to the Irish Nationalists, and Premier Asquith was understood to be ready also to step down if Lloyd George retired.

A threat to submit the question to a vote of the people in a general election was freely made during the Commons debate. The only faint hope of averting such a break lay to-day in the chance that the Irish Nationalists would consent to further negotiations. Some London pewspapers taking a gloomy view of the crisis to-day expressed the belief, however, that if a break came and a general election were called, it would result in the support of the Cabinet's course, the Nationalists having lost the confidence of many Irishmen through their willingness to treat in a compromise plan. Evidencing the crucial nature of the situation, Premier Asquith to-day conferred with A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, Conservative Leader Bonar Law, Minister of War Lloyd George, and Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, and later had an audience with the King.

INSPECTOR VISITED THE BUTCHER SHOPS

Sanitary Inspector Cooper paid a visit on Saturday night to all the butcher shops of the city. It was during the busy hours of the evening, at a time when customary retailing conditions were in full practice. The inspector stated that he was well received by the proprietors and that he found the stores, the refrigerators and meat, all in a satisfactory condition.

He recently visited the slaughter houses, and will make a combined report of his inspection trips in the near future.

Is the Tobacco Fund Necessary?

Read this card, received by Mr. W. R. Morris, Secretary of the Peterborough Club, today:

Thanks ever so much for the cigarettes. They are always most acceptable. I have just given a few packets away to a dozen or more wounded (English) soldiers who are seated in the ambulances with only rough dressings on their wounds. These chaps need cigarettes. As long as they are alive they will smoke.

I could say a whole lot that would be interesting, but I am not allowed to. But as I write this the great advance is not something everyone is looking for, but it's actually happening. Every chap will do his bit, too.

Sincerely yours,
W. COTTRELL.

A QUICK RESPONSE TO APPEAL FOR SOLDIER'S FAMILY

Quantity of Furniture Has Already Been Received For This Meritorious Object, But More is Still Required

WHO WILL OFFER HELP?

See here. It pays to advertise. And this despite the reluctance of about forty merchants, along the east side of George street who do not use the papers.

Advertise. Why certainly. Sure thing. Precedent, practice and good business usage all in its favour.

Last evening a call went out, sped by the kind aid of our very good friends the newspapers. The newspapers circulate real news quicker than a half-dozen of women talking on a back verandah. Ever experiment in that direction. Possibly not.

Anyway, this morning brought, in response to the call for all and sundry household equipment, to wit:—

From Mr. Beach, of the Charlotte St. Dye Works, bed, springs and a comfortable mattress. (N.B.—We pause to work in here a bit of and ad. for Beach. But he deserves it.)

From Mr. Webber Turner, a single bed, complete. Good for Webber. He needs no ad.

From Mrs. Snelgrove, of 544 George street, a spring cot, some chairs and bed clothing. Who says things are not coming our way.

Mrs. Mrs. Emmerson, 297 Park street, a table. Just what was needed. If the meals spread on this table at all equal those that it has borne, then the family will be well fed. A good serviceable table.

From Mrs. Rae, 271 Sherbrooke street, new springs for bed. (P.S.—Some other friend will send the bedstead.)

From Mrs. Dawson, 483 Donegal street, two mattresses.

In the meantime a house is being looked up. The family is now living in a shelter. This, with a cold winter coming on, is not nice. When the house is located the things will be sent for. Will send a nice, large, fat man for them.

So it pays to advertise. Sure thing. Just a reminder. Folks have forgotten that tea kettle. Any old thing that will boil water will do, for a spell. Need not be one of the new, side-opening variety. Just a standard, home used, responsible kettle. And that pot might as well come along, too.

For all of the above, things. And if asking will bring the balance, the equipment will materialize.

LIEUT. ROGERS IS A PRISONER OF WAR IN GERMAN HANDS

Letter Received From Peterborough Officer Brings Good News---For Nearly Eight Weeks the Worst Had Been Feared---Other Peterboro' Boys Write From Germany ---Local Recruiting and General Military News.

The silence concerning the fate of Lieut. Harry G. Rogers of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, who has been missing since June 2, has been broken at last, after nearly eight weeks of anxiety on the part of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, and his many friends. A post card has been received from Lieut. Rogers himself, from an hospital at Geschriebenden, Germany, saying that he is getting on well, and is being well treated. He gives great praise to the skill of the German doctors, and expects to be moved into a detention camp soon.

Lieut. Rogers, who went overseas with B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., was first reported wounded after the third battle of Ypres. No further information could be obtained from official sources for some time, and then finally Ottawa announced him as "wounded and missing." Unofficial reports, however, stated that the popular officer had been killed, and as the time passed without further word, his friends had begun to come to the conclusion that the report of his death was all too true. Naturally they are overjoyed at the good news.

Lieut. Rogers' brother, Pte. Heber Rogers, of the Machine Gun Section of the 2nd Battalion, has been a prisoner in Germany since the second battle of Ypres in April, 1915. There is a strange similarity in the two cases, as Pte. Rogers was also mourned as dead for some time before word reached home that he was wounded and in German hands.

Mrs. Joseph Reynolds, Patterson Street, has received a letter from her nephew, Driver Joe Reynolds, 4th Battery, 1st Artillery Brigade.

On Active Service, France,
July 4th, 1916

Dear Aunt Mabel,—Just a line to let you know that I am well and received your letter O.K., and was glad to hear from you, as a letter cheers one up. Always looking for a letter. Well I have come through so far all right. All the boys expect to be home for Christmas. Of course one hears all kinds of stories going around out here. That was a nice verse about Dear Herbie. It is a sad thing to have them taken away, just when they are in the prime of life, and he was such a smart little fellow; too bad. The weather out here is very wet—very few dry days, and I hope we don't have to put in another winter in it. One's feet are wet all the time, and the only way to dry your socks is to leave them on and sleep with them on one's feet. Enough to kill you. If one does come through all right, he never will be the same. They are giving Fritz all he deserves now, and, believe me, he deserves it, for the loss of life he has caused in the last two years. It is two years the 17th of next month since I left home, but I don't think it will be much longer before we all will be back. I got a letter from home the same day as I got yours, and they were all well. Well, will close for this time, as news is scarce and I can't tell you what is going on, as the Censor wouldn't let it go by. He would destroy the letter. So this is all for this time. Hoping all are well as it leaves me at present. So goodbye. With love to you and Uncle Joe. Write soon. Joe.

Mrs. Cornelius Orford has received the following letter from her husband, Pte. Cornelius Orford, who is a prisoner of war at Dulmen, Germany. He says in part:

Dear Wife,—I guess you have heard that I am a prisoner in Germany by now. I was taken on the 2nd of June at Ypres. I was lucky to get through it as lots of our boys fell. I want you to send me a parcel every week and don't forget as we got no money. I want you to send me some tinned meat or sardines, cake, cigarettes and socks. Don't send any newspapers as we are not allowed to read them. I am getting thin myself, so hurry

RUSSIANS TEAR OPEN THE ENEMY'S LINES

German Nervousness is a Marked Feature of the Struggle on the Eastern Front—Foe Loses Front Line Trenches Near Riga.

ENEMY LOSSES SEVERE

LONDON, July 24.—Russian troops have torn open the German front for a distance of 30 miles in the Riga sector for gains of 12 miles, according to a Reuter despatch received here to-day.

This sudden advance followed four days of severe fighting from the Gulf of Riga to Uxkull.

The seriousness of the situation for the forces of Field Marshall von Hindenburg is emphasized by the official announcement in Berlin that the Kaiser and his general staff have left the western front for the headquarters in the East.

Late despatches from Petrograd state a lull in the fighting has occurred to give the Russians an opportunity to establish their new positions. The Germans, it is reported, are awaiting reinforcements with which to stiffen their shattered battle-front.

While the battle along the Dvina around Riga overshadows other events along the eastern front, heavy fighting continues in Volhynia and Bukowina, especially between Kirpolung and Delatyn, the railroad junction west of Kolomea.

The Russians are attacking vigorously the Austro-Hungarian positions near the summit of the Carpathians in an effort to begin the invasion of the plains of Hungary on a large scale.

Torrential rains have flooded many of the streams in the Carpathians, and have transformed many of the roads into quagmires, adding to the natural and artificial barriers standing between the Russians and Hungriana. Announcement that the Teutons had been dislodged from another position on the Lips is made in the following official statement issued to-day in Petrograd:

GERMAN LOSSES SEVERE.

"Activity is steadily spreading over the northern area, where, besides fighting at Baranowitchi and Smorgon districts, the Germans lost trenches, near Lake Sventen as well as further north. It is clear now that the initiative was General Kuropatkin's. There is now no doubt that the Russians regained the ground all along the Riga position, where the Germans lost their laboriously constructed front trenches and, according to unofficial reports, in some sections lost far more."

PRESSING HINDENBURG HARD.

A Petrograd correspondent of the Morning News telegraphs:

On the Riga section the Germans attempted to reply to the Russian attack on their extreme left by yet another push upon Riga. At the same time Russian pressure farther south in the Dvinsk section compelled the Germans to bring up some of their heaviest artillery in the hope of stemming the tide.

German nervousness, which has been a marked feature of the struggle in this region for more than half a year past, in fact, almost ever since the Russians converted the Gulf of Riga into an inland sea closed to enemy assaults, is apparently approaching the climax. German aviators are becoming intensely active, and besides making several visits to Riga have penetrated as far as Reval.

The Russians are attacking not only on their extreme right, west of Kem-

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LIBRARY INSTITUTE OPENED HERE TO-DAY

Address of Welcome Was Delivered by Ald. Langford in the Absence of His Worship Mayor Duffus—List of Places Represented

MEETING THIS EVENING

The annual meeting of the Library Institute for the Lindsay district opened in the Peterborough Public Library this morning. Representatives were present from Orono, Port Perry, Haliburton, Lindsay, Gravenhurst, Fenelon Falls, Salina, Bowmanville, Port Carling, Whitby, Bobcaygeon, Manilla, Brooklyn, Uxbridge, Cambray, Severn, Beaverton, Millbrook, Little Britain, Claremont, Victoria Road, Oshawa, Norwood, Lakefield, Woodville and Huntsville.

Address of Welcome.

The presiding officer was Mr. Charles Derring of Huntsville, while Mrs. Jacobi of Oshawa, performed the duties of secretary.

A brief organization meeting was held this morning. The afternoon session opened with an address of welcome by Ald. William Langford, Acting Mayor, in the absence of His Worship Mayor Duffus.

Ald. Langford, in addressing the delegates, expressed the hope that the sessions would be profitable and that the visitors would have a pleasant stay in the city. His remarks were punctuated with applause.

The Lindsay district is made up of the following counties: Peterborough, Durham, Ontario, Victoria, Haliburton and Muskoka.

The meetings are held for the express purpose of discussing library methods, and the best way of overcoming the problems that arise almost daily in library work.

A most cordial invitation is extended by the Library Board to the public generally to attend the meeting this evening and to become in some measure acquainted with the progressive methods that are being adopted by the Government in extending the advantages that the Public Library movement has already so markedly procured for the reading public.

BUSINESS MEN TRIP TO RICE LAKE ON THURS.

Business men and their friends are reminded of their annual trip down the river to Harwood, which takes place Thursday afternoon, July 27th. The steamer leaves George street wharf at 1.30 and Street Railway wharf at 2.00. Scarcely any one will need a second invitation these days of extreme heat, to get away from the city and cool off in the refreshing breezes of river and lake. This trip always affords a pleasant opportunity for heart-to-heart talks on strictly business matters—and other allied topics. Id.

Twenty-Three Workmen Trapped 120 Feet Below The Surface of Lake Erie

Special to The Examiner:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 25.—At least twenty-three men are trapped in the new Cleveland waters works tunnel, 120 feet below the surface of Lake Erie, at a point five miles off shore, to-day, following a burst of gas in the tube. Whether any are alive will not be known until rescuers are able to drag them from the ten-foot concrete cylinder.

There are over 100 distinct breeds of pigeons included in the Canadian National Exhibition prize list.

There are 63 distinct varieties of canaries to be exhibited this year at the Canadian National Exhibition, 31 different breeds of rabbits and 24 cavies.

THE WEATHER

The hot spell still continues, and, if anything, is becoming worse. To-day at the noon hour the thermometer was at 95 degrees in the shade, constituting the high mark for the summer. It is seldom that we have such a long-continued heated spell as we have had lately. Last night, however, was comparatively cool, the lowest reached being 61 degrees.—W. P.

KEEP COOL.

Some newspapers, instead of recognizing the "eternal fitness of things," seem to pant for the infernal fitness of things, by writing red-hot political articles in these red-hot days. Such articles are Satanic, in effect and influence, if not in intention. One can hardly fancy deeper depravity than writing "hot stuff" on politics in these days of altitudinous mercury, when the weather answers the condition that tempted Sydney Smith to "take off his flesh and sit in his bones." The man who writes, or the man who reads, heated political articles, must have something sinister and salamandrine in his composition. This is a time when disquisitions on icebergs and glaciers suggest at least, an idea of coolness that seems to only exist in the imagination. Let us keep cool in temper and sentiment, if we can do so in no other way. However, injunctions to keep cool are likely to be as much heeded as an invitation to smile to the cheek padded with toothache.

CANADA LEADS.

Canada gets to the front in many ways. She has sent a few thousand of the best soldiers in the world to the battle front, and she leads in other ways. We Canadians are not inclined to be spectacular, but we certainly get to the front in making a display at great expositions. At all world expositions Canada has had one of the best—in many cases—the best, exhibit. At Chicago we swept the prize lists in stock, and at the Panama Exposition the Canadian exhibit was voted one of the best. Now, at the San Diego (California) Exposition, Canada is again showing the way. A lady from the south of the United States is visiting in California, and writes to a lady friend, in Peterborough, as follows:

"We have just returned this evening from the Exposition at San Diego, and I want to tell you that you and all Canadians should be proud of your exhibit there. I have never seen as wonderfully gotten up an exhibit, and the products of your wonderful country are certainly varied and great. I heard hundreds say as they passed around, that it was the best they had ever seen anywhere, and showed great taste and talent."—C. W. R.

This is very gratifying, but is not at all surprising—except to our United States cousins, who have, some of them, been slow to get over the idea that "little frozen Canada" is peopled mostly by Indians. We have a country to be proud of, and we are only in the beginning of our national development. And national progress will in the future more than ever depend upon national unity of spirit.

SUPERVISED SWIMMING.

We have had a successful propaganda in favour of supervised playgrounds—conducting play under conditions that give the fullest physical benefits of play and that lessen, if not entirely removed, the possibilities of moral contamination or deterioration that come from promiscuous mingling of sexes and ages in street play, without any restraining oversight. We have only inference and well-grounded assumption of the dangers of unsuperivised and promiscuous street play; but we have had recent sad proof of the fatal results of not having supervised swimming places. The sad death of the bright little Ray Guerin can almost directly attributable to lack of supervised swimming opportunities, if not to lack of any recognized place where bathing may be enjoyed without the policeman's club being held over the head of the swimmers.

There is now no recognized place within easy reach of the city where bathing may be practiced. In these sweltering days, we should have the fullest possible benefit of the wide cool river, whose waters flow through the city. If we cannot use it for bathing it becomes the pool of Tantalus.

At a time when a dip in the river would be refreshing and healthful, it seems that some means should be adopted to set apart authoritatively some convenient place or places, the nearer to the heart of the city the better. These hot days, a short walk becomes a long one, and we should not have far to go. Apart from the refreshing given by bathing, the question of health is involved. Cleanliness of person as well as premises is necessary to approximate the ideal sanitary condition.

There should be little expense—the cost of one funeral resulting from a death by drowning through having no conveniences for supervised bathing, would cover a good deal of it. The matter could be easily arranged if the heart of somebody in authority were put into the matter. Simple regulations prescribing the form of bathing costumes and the conduct of bathers would be all that is necessary.

The ladies, have been instrumental in providing supervised playgrounds, and it is incumbent upon the men to take the lead in promoting the swimming pools idea. If, on mature consideration, it should be found that much expense were involved, the City Council would be supported by the people in contributing to, if not wholly bearing, the expense. The safety of life of the city, the promotion of comfort and health of the city, are matters that concern every one of us, and all should bear their share of the expense of providing them.

Not only would comfort and health be promoted, but means could be provided for learning the art of swimming—a very necessary thing when so many frequent the waters of our rivers and lakes, and a prevention of many a fatal drowning casualty. An instance is known where a citizen of at least fifty years of age went out yesterday morning at seven o'clock to teach his wife to swim. Of course she would not be nearly that old, but she is of mature age, old enough to be the mother of a son in the trenches; and she feels convinced of the value of ability to swim.

At any rate the matter of providing opportunities for swimming and bathing at authorized points in the river is well worth practical attention. One cannot suggest the best way of going to work, or the proper persons to be given the work but, the aldermen as representatives of the people would seem to have some responsibility in the matter, and even they might not know the best way of beginning. Considering the importance of the matter, The Examiner invites correspondence and suggestions on the subject; and from the combined wisdom and suggestion of many, a basis of action may be arrived at.

BUSINESS MEN'S ANNUAL OUTING

The annual outing of the Peterborough Business Men will be held on Thursday afternoon to Harwood, Rice Lake. The Stoney Lake has been chartered and an enjoyable outing is promised.

Has Mania For Stealing Bicycles

There has been an epidemic of bicycle stealing around the city lately, and several bicycles have been stolen in different parts of the city, but through the efforts of the local police all have been rounded up and restored to their owners.

An incorrigible small boy has been the chief offender in the matter, and has received a severe reprimand from the local authorities.

MISS HORAN'S BODY FOUND.

Victims of Kenora Drowning to be Buried at Seaforth and Toronto.

Kenora, Ont., July 5. — After a search of several hours the body of Miss Horan, one of the victims of the double drowning yesterday at S. Island, on the Lake of the Woods, was recovered near the spot where the accident happened. The remains will be interred in Seaforth, Ont. The body of Norman Lee, who was drowned during his endeavour to save Miss Horan, will be sent to Toronto for burial.

RECTIFYING THE LEGAL MACHINERY OF CANADIAN CONFEDERATION

There is never any harm in recognizing obvious truths. In its last analysis the war which is devastating the greater part of Europe is a struggle for survival between two totally irreconcilable types of vivilization, economic and political administration, and what are possibly worse habits of thought. "This German people," says Price Collier, "have not developed into a nation." There is no denying the fact that the result of the moulding process has been a powerful nation utterly unlike any of the other nations belonging to the western world. Collier gives the explanation. "The nation is not for the people, the people are for the nation." Whether life is worth living for a people with the instinct of freedom under such considerations is a question. It would not be for Britons, Americans or Frenchmen. We all have our own characteristic follies and weaknesses, but at least they are our own follies and weaknesses; they have not been imposed upon us by a royal impostor. By the way the Germans are throwing away their lives just now they would appear to be having their doubts on the subject. The German system, itself, a fraudulent imposture, a caricature of popular, self-government (most systems of popular self-government are more or less caricatures, but the German the worst of all) does not make a strong people individually; but we are bound to recognize that it has made a powerful nation, collectively. The war has brought out both its good and its bad points. The one good thing in it is the unification of all the people of the Empire for military and economic purposes. We do not say political purposes, because the German people have nothing to do with the politics of their country.

The question arises, is it not possible to get this unification of purpose and action in the national interest without the sacrifice of personal liberty? That the people of the British Empire are capable of unification in the national interest has been abundantly demonstrated in the last two years. But—at what a price! It is said with doubtful accuracy, but with a hint of much veiled truth, that it took the Chinese some years to learn that it is possible to get roast pork without burning down the house. The present war will not have been altogether useless if it teaches us that it is possible to get the advantages of national unification without the stimulus of war. We believe that it is quite possible to develop spirit greatly without any sacrifice of local autonomy. Our federal system, with all its advantages has a tendency to weaken national feeling. The advantages are, however, too obvious and too great to be lightly sacrificed. One great disadvantage is the unnecessary diversification of provincial state laws. Granting that there are varieties of conditions and prejudices which must be considered (otherwise there would be no necessity for the federal principle) do we not carry our provincialism too far in our legislation, and by so doing weaken the national spirit? What we seem to need in our law making is interprovincial co-ordination. Without any sacrifice of provincial rights we could agree to the assimilation or unification of laws on many subjects, and the process would make for national solidification. There are about as many marriage and divorce laws in the United States as there are States in the Union. A difference is intelligible where a minority is moved by religious considerations, otherwise there is no conceivable reason for variation in the law. The practical enforcement of temperance legislation has been greatly hindered by making latitude and longtitude factors in provincial or state legislation. There is a perfectly ridiculous variety in our Acts regarding the incorporation of joint stock companies. You quote the law affecting a joint stock company to a Quebec man, and he replies: "Oh! But this is an Ontario charter." And it makes all the difference in the world whether it is a Quebec charter, an Ontario charter, a British Columbia charter, or a Dominion charter. Who is benefitted by the difference? We do suggest that there should be a unification of the law-making power, but an endeavor to arrive at a principle of interprovincial co-ordination of laws. This would be a public convenience, and would make the provinces less foreign to each other; or, in other words, would tend to the development of the national spirit.—Montreal Herald.

City's Waterworks Department Prepared For Demands of Years

The brightest spot on the Lafiefield road is the Peterborough Pumping station, this side of Nassan. Its well-arranged and nicely finished exterior bespeaks the efficiency of the plant it contains. For the Utilities Commission not only sought to provide for Peterborough a waterworks department prepared for every ordinary emergency and with a capacity sufficient for the city's demands for many years to come, but it added the pleasing touch of neat and appropriate surrundings, manifesting an appreciation of the fitness of the combination of utility and discerning decorations. In every respect, therefore the city posesses a pumping station with its auxiliary plants that the citizens may be justly proud of.

After all, facts speak more loudly and effectively than generalities. During the past fourteen years the population of the city has doubled, while the daily pumpage of water has trebled.

In 1902 the city population was 11,000. To-day it is placed at 22,000. During that time the daily pumpage of water has increased from 1,000,000 gallons to 3,000,000 gallons. And the revenue has made a corresponding satisfactory increase. In 1902 the revenue from the water works was $24,000.00. To-day, it is $50,000.00.

And considering future demands on the plant, the provision in this respect is best illustrated by the fact that the pumping capacity of 4,500,000 gallons in 1902 has jumped to 16,500,000 gallons at the present time. Truly the acts of the Utilities Commission speak in eloquent terms.

An important point is that of service, and here again the progress has been splendid. In 1902 there were 1,150 services; to-day the number is 4,270. The extent to which mains have been laid is illustrated by the increase from 18 1-2 miles, in 1902, to 42 1-2 miles, in 1916. During this time the cost of the plant has been increasing, but only from $235,000 to $625,000.

These are a few of the facts that are being presented this afternoon to the citizens who visit the pumping station. The occasion deserves to be marked by an expression of civic appreciation of the work and results the Utilities Commission has quietly accomplished.

WENT FOR DRINK AND LEFT WIFE OVER YEAR

New York, July 24.— The longest drink on record was taken by John Francis Beach. He went out of the house in November, 1914, to get the drink and did not return until April, 1916. Then he told his wife he had been to San Francisco.

Mrs. Eleanor Smith Beach, the wife, yesterday filed a separation action, alleging the drink as a cause of abandonment. She also charged her husband with being fond of other women and with spending his money for liquor and taxicabs. To make sure he would pay her alimony she had him taken to Ludlow street jail on a civil order.

Beach is a nephew of Supreme Court Justice John K. Beach, of New Haven.

MULLOY GOES TO QUEBEC.

KINGSTON, July 24.— Lieut.-Col. L. W. Mulloy, Royal Military College, who has been speaking at recruiting meetings throughout Ontario for the past year, and who is one of the leaders of a movement for national registration, has gone to Quebec City to spend ten days. He is of the opinion that Quebec Province is not opposed to registration.

A Ferocious Trolley Boy.

A very large soldier was trying to get on a very crowded tramcar, when the smallest of trolley boys interposed. "Full up; you get off." The soldier took no notice. "Do you hear? Get off." Again the order was ignored. "If you don't get off I'll put you off," ordered the minute official. "In another ten years, my lad, a kid of your spirit'll come in useful at the front," said the soldier. "You'd give the Kaiser what for, you would." The ferocious trolley boy was appeased. "Well, stand on the platform by me, but if an inspector comes you jolly well tell him you're getting off."

Do You Want Style?

There is no place in which the fashions are so promptly and correctly displayed, as in the advertising columns. The wholesale purveyors of fashionable goods keep their own buyers and artists in Paris, London, and Berlin, and pass on the information obtained to their customers, the merchants; who in turn keep their patrons properly informed through their advertisements. Even the latest fashion magazines are behind the advertising columns of the newspapers in displaying the most recent fads and fancies.

Dutch Form British Force.

Military commandants of the Western Transvaal at a recent meeting with Gen. Ritz, of South-West African fame, unanimously decided to form a brigade of three mounted regiments, two to be recruited from the Western and Eastern Transvaal respectively, and the third from the other Provinces. It is noteworthy that the general meeting was composed mostly of Dutch commandants who took part in the operations for the suppression of the rebellion and in the South-West African campaign against the Germans.

Mrs. Chamberlain.

I saw Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain in Bond street the other day doing some shopping (says a writer in The London Mail), and carrying home her own purchases, evidently, for she had both hands full. She wears the old-fashioned widow's weeds, but was looking very happy and contented.

Best Home Treatment For All Hairy Growths

(The Modern Beauty)

Every woman should have a small package of delatone handy, for its timely use will keep the skin free from beauty-marring hairy growths. To remove hair or fuzz, make a thick paste with some of the powdered delatone and water. Apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be sure you get real delatone.

BEDROOM SLIPPERS.

Various Nether Comforts That May Also Be Good Looking.

It is possible to have attractive bedroom slippers which match your negligee, or at least are in accord with it. There are endless varieties of "mules" in gay colored silk or satin, edged with silk cord and decorated with tiny rosebuds. This is the kind of work that the expert needlewoman enjoys, but besides such dainty trifles more sensible everyday ones can be bought which do not clash with one's beauty loving ideas.

Kid slippers, with low, comfortable heels, may be bought in pinks, blues and browns. Very similar to them are the felt styles, whose instep is decorated with a cut out design of the felt over a contrasting color.

White kid well covered with a Japanese embossed design are shown. Most luxurious are the slippers of bright quilted satin, whose ribbon rosettes hold a tiny rhinestone.

Made with only a toe covering, but minus the heels attached to "mules," are other models, some covered with white flannel, decorated with a satin bow; others, to be used en route to the bath, are made of checked toweling, the edges bound with corduroy and the sole being very woolly.

EASILY CAUGHT.

New Zealand Parrot Falls an Unwary Victim to the Hunter.

The New Zealand kakapo, or large parrot, with all its credit for brains, allows itself to be caught in a very simple manner. In the dusk of the early dawn the Maories, carrying tame kakapos tied to long sticks, set off to hunt. These are the call-birds used to attract by their screams the large flocks of kakapos flying overhead. While one Maori tethers the call-birds by the leg, and sets them screaming to the full extent of their lusty lungs, another cuts as many perches as there are men in the hunting party from the neighboring bush. By means of flax bands these are lashed firmly to different parts of a little hut or whare (in which the hunters secrete themselves), so as to act as perches for the unsuspecting birds. Each perch is so fixed that it can be drawn down into the whare through the roof. On the perches are placed running nooses of flax, and when all is prepared, each Maori sits quietly within the whare with his flax cord in his hand ready to pull at the right moment. The call-birds are then disturbed by means of a long stick, and presently a large flock of parrots, hearing their cries, wheel down and settle with a great chattering in the adjacent trees. One by one they fly and settle on the perches of the whare to bold converse with the call-birds, and when every perch is occupied a Maori gives the signal and the nooses are pulled. The hubbub of screaming and scolding as each perch with its captured parrot is drawn down into the whare can be best imagined. It is only equalled by the frantic excitement of the Maories as they grasp the birds by the neck, and throw them aside dead.

Trade-Marks.

The recognition of trade-marks by English law may be said to date only from the beginning of the nineteenth century, but the use of trade-marks was, of course, of far earlier date. So far back as the reign of James I. a certain clothier applied the mark of another clothier to his own inferior goods, but the reports of the lawsuit which ensued leave it doubtful whether the action was brought by the owner of the mark or by an indignant customer, in which latter case it would simply be an ordinary action for fraud.

In 1742 Lord Hardwicke declared that "every particular trader has some particular mark or stamp." At the same time his lordship refused to grant the protection of the law to the "Great Mogul" stamp on cards. He was apparently under the impression that the legal recognition of trade-marks meant the creation of a new kind of monopoly, and he made up his mind to obviate such possibility.

Lord Eldon, on the other hand, repeatedly granted injunctions to restrain one trader from fraudulently "passing off" his goods as those of another, and thus helped to lay a foundation on which the present trade-mark law has been built up in successive stages.

Using His Name.

"The agent who sold me this set of books told me he wanted to use my name with other citizens."

"He's doing that, all right. I heard him telling a gang how easy you were."

Worth Trying.

"I washed Willie's pants t'udder day, and dey shrunk so dat de po' chile kin ha'dly walk in 'um. Won'er how I gwan fix 'um?"

"Try washin' de chile. Maybe he shrink too."

Trouble Ever Present.

"Do you have any trouble when you are saying your lessons in school, Tommy?"

"Yes, sir."

"What seems to trouble you most?"

"The teacher."

Brazil Nut Trees.

The Brazil nut tree does not begin to bear fruit until it attains the age of fifty years or thereabouts and continues to produce crops intermittently. Trees known to be hundreds of years old have produced crops.

Long Time to Wait.

Here is a story concerning the late Mr. J. F. Warden and the veteran John L. Toole. The twain entered a hostelry which was a favorite resort in Belfast forty years ago, having arranged a plan of campaign before going in. J. F. ordered a bottle of champagne and asked the proprietor, who knew both gentlemen well, whether he would be satisfied to take payment when a bet which they had just made was decided. He assented readily, and the bottle was instantly uncorked, mine host cordially accepting the invitation to join in a glass. They chatted freely for a while, then prepared to depart. The proprietor hinted, before going, that he would like to know the result of the bet and what it was about.

"Oh," said Mr. Warden, "we have been examining the Albert Memorial, and my friend Mr. Toole has laid me a bet that when it falls it will be in the direction of Corporation street, and I have bet him that, instead, it will fall towards Victoria street."

Divorce by Candle.

If the Burmese husband and the Burmese wife come to the conclusion that they are not suited to each other, their procedure is simple and direct. The wife does not go to her solicitor, but to the tallow chandler. From him she obtains two little candles. These she brings home, and she and her husband sit down on the floor, placing the candles between them. One candle represents the husband, one the wife. They are lighted at the same moment, and the owner of the one that goes out first leaves the house, taking only his or her clothes, while the owner of the more enduring candle remains also the owner of the house and all that therein is.

He Knew.

The following is told by a young bride-elect who was ordering her trousseau in England before going out to New Zealand to be married. The dressmaker suggested only very warm clothes, and when the young lady demurred at this, asserting that the climate of New Zealand is a beautifully mild one, she was immediately informed:

"I assure you, madam, you are mistaken, for that, of course, is where the frozen meat comes from."

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

A SOBER ENGLAND.

Vast Improvement Has Been Achieved by Resolute War Methods.

"Fifty per cent. less public drunkenness and disorder than before the war," is one of the results of the resolute methods applied by England to the regulation of the drink problem nearly a year ago.

The Central Liquor Control Board, of which Lord d'Abernon is chairman, took over the control of Great Britain's liquor problem on May 15, 1915.

Designed to affect areas such as munition centres and seaports, it has gradually extended its scope of operations until 29,000,000 people are directly affected by its decisions. The Board possesses drastic powers, even to the point of absolutely closing saloons when it considers their existence prejudicial to the interests of national productiveness.

At present saloons may sell intoxicating liquors only between the hours of noon and 2.30 p.m. and 6.30 and 9.30 p.m. on week days, and on Sundays between 1 and 3 p.m. and 6 and 9 p.m. Limited hours are prescribed also for the sale of bottled liquors for consumption off the premises; the prohibition of selling liquor on credit and the absolute stoppage of treating in saloons, clubs, or any other places.

In addition to the diminution of drunkenness and disorder, Lord d'Abernon said one of the most satisfactory results is the increased efficiency and productiveness of workers in munition areas. Continuing, he said:

"A bright side of the picture is the gratifying readiness with which the public has shown itself willing to assist in seeing that all should conform to the drastic regulations of the last nine months. You may attribute this truly remarkable attitude to the public's belief that the restrictions are in reality war necessities and their willingness in a great crisis to subserve personal convenience to national efficiency.

"Among the public at large it is remarkable also that there is widespread and practically general approval of such provisions as that prohibiting treating.

"Regarding the restriction of hours, more divergence of opinion exists. The board has sought to confine the consumption of alcohol to those hours which conflicted least with the working day and which coincided best with ordinary meal hours.

"If you ask my general conclusion I should say that the period has been too brief for any final opinion to be expressed, but that there can be no doubt that there is ample ground for belief that a vast improvement has been achieved. The drop in public intemperance and of convictions resulting from it which occurred in each area, directly the orders were put in force, has been steadily maintained up to date. It is often said, 'Men cannot be made sober by Act of Parliament.' My belief is that under a really effective system of regulation three-fourths of the drunkenness which prevailed before the war would never exist again."

Grosvenor Square Saved.

"I shall never forget," says a British officer on leave in London, "the recapture of a certain British trench in one of the most treacherous parts of the Ypres salient a little while ago. The Germans had taken it from us at the sacrifice of hundreds of men. Our commander said we must steal that trench again or never look him in the face. For hours the heavy guns boomed and a thousand rifles cracked. Then the supreme moment arrived. Suddenly the thunder of our artillery ceased and all was quiet. Not a whisper was heard until the word came to go. You should have seen those lads from London town. In an instant they were over the parapet, and it was more like a hundred yards sprint than a bombing and bayoneting attack. The Germans came in waves of grey, and then the slaughter began. There was some deadly bayonet work, and the enemy fought to the last gasp, but down they went before they had a chance of giving relief. The trench, which was known as 'Groavenor Square,' was recaptured, and very few of the Germans remained alive."

18th-Century Prize Money.

Prize money now is a trifle compared with what fell to lucky crews in the palmy days of the eighteenth century. After the capture of the single Spanish ship Hermione in 1762 by the Active and Favorite the rear-admiral and commodore, who had not even been present, received between them £64,963 3s 9d. Of the Active's crew, Captain Sawyer got £65,053 13s 9d, three commissioned officers each £13,004 14s 1d, eight warrant officers each £4,336 3s 3d, 20 petty officers each £1,806 10s 10d, and 150 seamen and marines each £485 5s 4d—total, £251,030 12s. The Favorite's share was £208,181 4s 3d. Twenty wagons triumphantly brought the treasure from Portsmouth to London.—London Chronicle.

Kitchener and Titles.

It is a long time since a dukedom was conferred, and, in spite of rumors to the contrary, it is possible that at the close of the war there won't be any more created, for the Earl of Derby is credited with the intention to refuse one, and Lord Kitchener thought it absurd to give titles to a man who has no one to succeed him. When he accepted his Viscountcy he had matrimonial ambitions.

KEEPS CHILDREN WELL MAKES THEM ROBUST

HERE IS GOOD ADVICE FOR THE HEAD OF EVERY FAMILY.

Rapid growth, work at home and in the school-room, are sure to tax the strength of every child, and often prove the beginning of a chain of weakness that lasts through life.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT BAPTIST CHURCH FOR THE LATE GEORGE MATTHEWS

LINDSAY, July 25.—An impressive memorial service for the late George Matthews was held in the Baptist church on Sunday morning. The pastor Rev. H. Bryant, conducted the service, and chose as his text a passage of scripture which was a great favourite of deceased, namely, Proverbs, the third chapter, verses five and six: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths." The speaker said in part:

People pass through the world in two ways. There are those who pass through life thinking of God and the higher things of life, and on the other hand those who think only of the worldly life. These differences show themselves. If the judgment of God is continually in a man's heart he will endeavour to mould a strong and lasting character, and if man to-day was as pure as when God made him there would be no meaning in the words of my text, but man has fallen, hence the truth of the passage.

Speaking of the late Mr. Matthews, the pastor referred to an explanation deceased gave of his experience at the time of his conversion. He said, "I cannot explain the experience except by the Holy Spirit working within me," and after that day he realized his dependence upon God.

Any one who knew the late Mr. Matthews knew he was whole-hearted. "And I take off my hat," said the pastor, "to a man of means who is interested in God's work."

One way of acknowledging God is by truly believing that He rules the universe and uses all things to serve His purpose. Things that seem insignificant to us are of great importance in the eyes of the Maker, and all work together for a purpose and we all know that God never fails to do His part.

Throughout the sermon many kindly references were made to the upright and exemplary life of the departed and the hymns sung were also among his favourites.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE THE ICE CREAM MAKER?

It Sounds Well in Hot Weather, But After All It Means a Day's Hard Work and the Hotter the Weather the Harder the Work---Great Demand at Peterboro' Creamery This Summer.

The iceman's job as the subject of midsummer jobes is forgotten in the happy hunting ground of ancient and cheesy chestnuts. There was nothing appealing about the iceman's occupation anyway. It left nothing to the imagination as does the ice cream-maker's which, by the way, has been too long overlooked. About an ice-cream factory there is a subtle suggestion of enduring midsummer comforts, of an atmosphere deliciously cool and fragrant with the flavours of strawberry, vanilla and chocolate, which at times dimly transform through the factory haze into an evanescent rainbow ice cream brick.

In the feverish mood the heat develops one travels in thought, at least, to refreshing resorts on the Labrador coast, to the breezy uplands of the Laurentians, or to some of the popular watering places nearer home. Passing on to mere work in its most advantageous form for midsummer conditions, one finally fetches up with the ice cream-maker as a real object of envy.

At the Peterborough Creamery Mr. G. A. Gillespie has a complete ice cream plant with a weekly capacity of about 3,000 gallons. All day long the freezer freezes the prepared liquid cream, and even with that activity the local and district demand is scarcely supplied. This summer's peak heat has been so prolonged that there have been no intervening cool days to break the siege and enable the factory to gain the offensive, as it were. The Creamery has been on the defensive, and Mr. Gillespie has on occasions joined his workmen in an extra effort to freeze the maximum amount of cream. One of those days was the 12th of July, which established something of a record in Peterborough's consumption of the frozen delicacy.

However, when one covets the ice cream man's job, he is lured and misled by an imagination that sees only the pleasant side of the work, and overlooks most of the work itself. Ask Tom. Borland, or any of the other men who make the Gillespie ice cream, and they will immediately assure you that the novelty of the work soon disappears, and they have become so accustomed to the presence of the cream they rarely think of filling a cone of it for themselves. It's the same with candy men and other "delicatessen" makers. Often they are too busy to think of themselves, and finally it is all a day's work. Hence, when you get down to facts, and away from hot weather impressions, the ice cream man is despatched after the iceman.

A Splendid Plant.

The freezing plant at the Peterborough Creamery is a perfect, modern unit. It employs the principle of condensed ammonia, and is connected with the freezer and hardening refrigerators. The cream is first mixed with sugar and flavouring in a mixing machine, is passed to the freezer and is hardened in the refrigerators. In the latter, also, the bricks are made. The workmen don their hats and coats and work in a temperature a few degrees above zero. There is one phase of the work that appeals those days.

Customers of the Peterborough Creamery may be assured that their ice cream is of the freshest. The demand follows so closely upon the heels of local supply that there is no time for the ice cream to remain long in the factory. And everything about the plant is absolutely sanitary.

JAPANESE SHIP CARRIES 16 INCH GUNS; HAS SPEED

Reported to Be Bigger But Slower Than the Queen Elizabeth

TOKIO, July 25.—It is reported that guns of 16-inch calibre may be mounted on a super-Dreadnought which has been ordered by the navy department and will be laid down in the Japanese naval yard at Kure. This ship was authorized at the last session of the Diet and she will be the largest battleship in the Japanese navy. She will be called the Nagato after one of the provinces in Southern Japan.

Although the official figures have not been announced, it is said the warship will have a displacement of 32,000 tons and a speed of 24 knots. The displacement exceeds by 1,400 tons that of the Dreadnought Yamashiro which was launched at Yamosuka last November. The Yamashiro is about the same size as the United States super-Dreadnought Pennsylvania.

If the announced figures prove correct, the Nagato will be bigger than the celebrated Queen Elizabeth of the British navy, more speedy than the Yamashiro by two knots and faster than the Pennsylvania by three knots although she could be outdistanced by the Queen Elizabeth. A feature of the proposed ship will be improved equipment for defence against torpedoes.

The question of main armament seems not yet decided. It is understood that the navy favours 16-inch guns, but guns of this size have never been made in Japan, and it is likely that they would have to be imported from England. It is doubtful if England could turn them out during the war.

The department has likewise arranged for the construction of two second class cruisers, each of 8,500 tons, to be called Tenryu and Tatsuta. One will be laid down at Yokosuka and the other at Sasebo. A large type destroyer of 1,160 tons will be built at Maizuru.

The latest addition to the Japanese navy is a new and powerful submarine boat which was built in France and which recently arrived at the Zure naval station. Submerged, the boat can reach a speed of over eighteen knots. Her displacement is 600 tons, and she is the largest submarine in the Japanese navy.

The order, placed with the French navy yard in 1914, called for two boats of the same type and dimensions, but one of them was sold to France at the outbreak of the war in compliance with the special request of the French navy. The submarine was brought her on board a French steamer.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup when she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small dose at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

You will find that a comb will last much longer if (before being used) it is washed in soapy water, and when dry rubbed with a little olive oil.

CARELESS CARL A SIGHTLESS SHARK TO BATTLING BEAUTY

CHICAGO, Ill., July 24.—Carl Cohn of this city will be the most cautious swimmer in the waters near Diversey Beach for the rest of the season. He has started and explained the only shark scare he ever hopes to be involved in, and with right hand raised has declared he will never again reach out for a pier post while water rapples and sand dries.

Cohn was doing some plain and fancy over and under water swimming yesterday when, diving deep, he grasped what he thought was a pier post and began to pull himself to the surface. Miss May Brour was attached to what Cohn mistook for a pier post and the scream which accompanied the ascent of the frightened Cohn could be heard in the suburbs.

It was with the greatest difficulty that Cohn explained in the Police Court to-day.

"I was tired out," he said, "and when I dove deep I seemed to lose strength. I saw what I thought was a stick. I grasped it, and then believed it a pier post, and I finally discovered it belonged to this lady. I was as frightened as she was."

Judge La Buy told Cohn to be careful in the future, and Cohn, asserting that he would always swim in the future with his eyes and fists shut, fled from the court.

Their Happy Home Assured By Publicity

MINEOLA, L.I., July 24—Any large or little disagreements, misunderstandings, quarrels or battles that Mr. and Mrs. Herman H. Ertel, of Mineola, may have had are now settled for all time. They are to be mentioned no more and a six months' separation which upset, annoyed and disconcerted them both has been settled with honour and publicity.

In fact, one had but to glance over the Mineola newspapers to-day to see that, although the situation in Europe is practically unchanged, the Ertel home guards have effected a satisfactory peace. The item reads as follows:

"Mrs. Herman H. Ertel wishes to announce that after leaving her husband for six months she is now sorry for it and wishes to return, being sorry for all that she said. She promises to do all in her power ever after to make their home a happy one."

Mr. Ertel, who is an engineer in the plant of Doubleday, Page & Co., publishers, explained that his wife wrote a letter to him in which she said that she was sorry about the separation. Mr. Ertel suggested that she express those welcome sentiments in writing, and Mrs. Ertel's reply was the public letter.

They are to be reunited at once and will reoccupy their home in Burkhard avenue.

STRAW BOSS PADDED GODFREY PAYROLLS

Arthur Lovell Gives Evidence Before Wetmore Commission at Regina.

REGINA, Sask., July 24.—The first direct incriminating evidence in regard to the padding of the Godfrey payrolls was given Friday afternoon before the Wetmore Commission by Arthur Ernest Lovell.

He said that while working as a straw boss he padded the time in the pay sheets, according to instructions from Godfrey, his foreman. Godfrey told him that he had lost a road outfit by fire and that the Government would not pay for it, so he proposed to take it from the Government by making fraudulent pay sheets and adding on time to the actual time the men worked from week to week.

He stated that he did not get anything. He did it to hold his job.

SAY HE'S MARRIED BUT HE IS SILENT

Dr. W. A. Tomes, Divorced at Reno, Spurns Congratulations—Declares He Wed Miss Ryno.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Dr. William Austin Tomes, at his home, at No. 500 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, has consistently turned aside congratulations of his marriage to Miss Gertrude A. Ryno, although the sister of the girl and a preacher verified the report of the secret marriage in Jersey City on December 4 last. Dr. Tomes refused to speak of the matter.

Mrs. L. R. Stuart of No. 411 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn, the sister of Miss Ryno, caused a delayed marriage notice to appear in a Brooklyn newspaper two days ago. She said last night that the Rev Harvey L. Wyatt, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, Jersey City, performed the ceremony.

The pastor admitted to a Herald reporter that the ceremony took place and that the physician gave his age as fifty years and Miss Ryno as twenty-three years. The young woman is now out of town.

Dr. Tomes, according to neighbours, was separated from his first wife in 1910. She later obtained a divorce at Reno, Nev. He has three children.

SIX INJURED IN ELECTRICAL STORM

Clothing Torn Off Man While Shaving at Amesbury, Mass.—Building Is Damaged.

AMESBURY, Mass., July 23.—Six persons were shocked and many buildings were struck during an electric storm of great intensity late today. While Daniel McNulty was shaving a thunderbolt shattered the razor blade in his hand, ripped off some of his clothing, burned one of his feet severely and rendered him unconscious. As the telephone was out of commission, Elizabeth Currier, twelve years old a neighbour, mounted her pony and galloped a mile in the height of the storm to notify a physician. McNulty was still unconscious to-night.

While responding to a fire alarm, Chief of Police William S. Rogers and James E. Felsham, Chief of the Fire Department, were stunned by lightning.

The Bremen Might Bring Herman A New Flagpole

Because the One on Which He Replaced Old Glory With German Flag to Celebrate the Deutschland's Arrival Is Mass of Splinters on Jersey Sward

NEW YORK, July 25.—The Bremen may come and the Deutschland may go, but Herman Wesley's flagpole, on which he intended to celebrate both events, is down forever. Prone on the Jersey sward, it lies a martyr to one of the fiercest hatchet parties held in this country since George Washington began his active nature study of cherries.

For a few hours during the day Herman is proprietor of the Orchard Inn, at Woodport, N.J., but the rest of the time, asleep or awake, Herman works hard at being a German. Some folk have been mean enough to say he is a professional German.

At any rate, he is most unmistakably of Teutonic descent when the armies of that alliance gain a trench or one of their submarines gets in a little underhanded diplomacy. Accordingly, when the news of the safe arrival of the Deutschland finally percolated to Woodport, Herman decided to celebrate. Laying aside his coat and his adopted nationality, he hurriedly lowered the Stars and Stripes from the flagpole which decorated the Orchard Inn lawn and hoisted the flag which all persons named Herman seem to care for.

To show the exact cause of the raising of the White, Red and Black, Herman placed in one corner a large pasteboard key. That signified, he explained carefully, that Germany had at last gained the key to the seas and could unlock any blockade doors that perfidious Albion cared to erect.

All went well for a few hours. The breeze flaunted the Teutonic stripes as flamboyantly as it had the Red, White and Blue. Herman sat in the shade and smoked peacefully, wondering what else he could hang up when the Bremen arrived.

Then trouble began to brew and bubble. News of Herman's action spread about the town and over the countryside. Muttered whisperings turned to violent tirades and Paul Reveres of another age began to scour the woods around the northern end of Lake Hopatcong, flashing the news.

A hastily mobilized army of minute men walked into Herman's bedroom and demanded that he lower the German flag. Herman sleepily refused and appeared very cross that such a request could be made. He said that no offence had been intended the American flag, but that it was fitting he should celebrate for the Deutschland. After explaining volubly just what the key signified, he turned over.

A minute later he was awakened by the strange sounds of axes. He peeped through the window. There he saw the minute men making splintering wood of his beautiful flagpole. A moment later it toppled to the ground and the flag and his wonderfully significant key vanished into the same limbo that envelops the Galloping Hessian, the person who hit "Billy" Patterson and the progressive party.

Herman is haunting the local telegraph office waiting for an answer to his demand for a steel flagpole and a bullet proof German flag.

The Charm of Buckinghamshire

In the spring every orchard in South Buckinghamshire is a riot of cherry blossoms and the country is a billowy mass of bloom.

In spite of the late frosts and the cruellest of winds and blizzards, the cherry trees bloomed earlier this year than usual. For a time a deep pink shade was diffused over every orchard—a sign that with warm rain and sunshine they would soon emerge into showers of white. But the cold winds persisted and although the rains came there was no warmth, and the trees burst into blossom amidst hail and sweeping northerly winds.

This cherry blossoming country is full of the haunts of poets; it is the country where Milton lived; where Waller was born, in the windy hamlet of Coleshill, above Amersham. Hard by is the quiet retreat of the Quakers—of William Penn and his circle—for near Jordans, where rest William Penn and beautiful Gulielma, his wife, there is an orchard where the blackish trunks stand supporting showers of snowy blossoms and the green grass beneath is checkered with many moving shadows, as the blossoming bows sway in the breese. This orchard is at the top of the steep hill which mounts from Jordans.

Further on past the orchard in the direction of Chalfont St. Giles, if one keeps on the high land above the Misbourne stream, one comes to more cherry trees, for the narrow lane leads through the heart of Buckinghamshire cherry orchards. At the end of it one stands looking down upon the huddled red roofs of Chalfont S. Giles. The mellow shades of the red brown tiles speak of age which seem accentuated by the fresh blossoms of the fruit trees springing forth amidst the old roofs.

This is the charm of Buckinghamshire and its cherry blossoms; a labyrinth of narrow winding lanes and then a sudden view down upon an old farm house—one of the typical brick and timber buiklings—lying embossed amidst fleecy blossoms; or a glimpse of green grass, checkered by the deep shadows, and above it a wealth of cherry blossoms standing out against a blue sky, whilst the scent from the myriad blooms blows in gentle gusts.

"JUST ONE DRINK" NEVER CAME BACK

NEW YORK, July 25.—Three months after they were married, said Mrs. Eleanor Smith Beach in her action for separation, her husband, John Francis Beach, told her he was going to leave their apartment, at No. 504 West 151st street, a minute, and go down to the street to get "just one" drink. He never came back, she said. She saw him recently, she declared, when he told her he had been to San Francisco.

Mrs. Beach said her husband is a nephew of Justice John Kingsley Beach, of the Supreme Court of Connecticut. After the desertion which she charges, she said, she went to Justice Beach and received through him $10 weekly from a trust fund of $50,000 which an aunt, Mrs. Rebecca D. Beach, of New Haven, had left to her husband.

Recently, however, Mrs. Beach said, that weekly allowance had been stopped, and she, therefore, asks for $25 a week alimony pending the action for separation.

In the papers Mrs. Beach designates her husband as "a man who has a fondness for women and the gay life of the city."

"He often left me at home nights alone," she said, "and did not return sometimes for two days. He continuously rides about the city in a taxicab and always seems to have a large quantity of money for his needs. He is a lavish spender."

On the charge that he was attempting to leave the State, Mrs. Beach obtained an order of civil arrest from Justice Hendrick, and, in default of $1,500 bail, Mr. Beach was placed in Ludlow Street Jail.

FIRE THREATENED STURGEON POINT

LINDSAY, July 25.—Sturgeon Point was within an ace of being wiped out by fire Saturday afternoon last, when Mr. J. Kineer started a brush fire at the golf links to burn up some rubbish. Owing to the intense heat, the dry condition of the grass and adjacent stumps, and the direction of the wind, the small fire was soon fanned into a fierce blaze, which spread rapidly. Mr. Kineer poured two pails of handy water on the fire and got busy with a green brush, but with little results. The alarm was sounded, and soon a hundred or more were out fighting the fire.

Luckily the wind did not carry the fire in the direction of the cottages, but as it was the links were burned and several trees and stumps as well.

Mr. Kineer was burned about the hands; others also sustained minor burns and ruined their clothes in fighting the fire.

In 1913 over 1,000,000 people visited the Canadian National Exhibition. Last year 864,000 passed through the gates.

SHOE REPAIR MEN COMPELLED TO ADVANCE PRICES

Cost of Leather, Which Has Risen Abnormally, One of the Causes —List of Prices

There is a number of causes for the advance in leather. Among them is the great quantity required to outfit the armies in the war. Then there is a great reduction in the production of leather and it is a fact that Canada does not produce enough leather to meet its own demands. Imports are cut off from European countries and extra duties added, all contributing to the increased cost to the shoe-repair man. As a consequence the following list of prices has been adopted in this city in order that work may not be done at a loss:

Men's sewed soles	$1.15
Men's sewed soles, through to heels	1.50
Men's nailed soles	.90
Men's heels	.35
Women's sewed soles	.75
Women's turned soles	.86

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. A. Guerin, 101 Simcoe street, wishes to give through the medium of the Examiner her most cordial thanks to all who have given help and shown kindness in the affliction she has suffered by the drowning of her son, Ray Guerin, on Friday last; to those who worked for his resuscitation; to those who searched for the body; to those who sent flowers, and especially to the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club for the kind expressions of sympathy and flowers.

Parched Park Street Near C.G.E. Seeks Rain Since There Is No Oil

If it doesn't hurry up and rain enough to lay the dust along the car track on Park street, or if that new car of oil is not soon tapped for the benefit of the south end, some of the residents will be forced to extreme measures. Not only is the dust a discomfort to the workmen, but scrupulous housewives draw the line at washing verandahs twice a day. They don't mind a once over once a day, but when the front "stoop" looks half an hour after its morning wash as if it had never seen water, it is small wonder that the neighbors get together with a proposal to buy Ald. McIntyre some furnishings for his new cottage near Young's Point.

This morning there was an informal meeting of neighborhood purchasers in R. C. Braund's store, augmented by Mr. W. Byers of Byerarille, who with some property in the city, blew along to consult with Mr. Braund as to some effective means of getting oil for the streets that needed it most. When Waterford street and Dickson street, little residential streets on the east side of the city, are able to secure oil, and the main highways of the south end, with street cars and touring cars, and all kinds of vehicles, are disturbing the dust in constantly circulating clouds, the patience of the south end is attenuated almost to the point of parting. Such were some of the remarks overhead at the community caucus. The residents don't mind the rich harvest of noxious weeds, luxuriating on some of the most conspicuous vacant properties. Wild clover has a rather pleasant though strong fragrance, besides it covers the nudity of the lots and creates the impression of summering in the country. But the more vivid impression of rural conditions which the dust clouds present is painting the picture with a brush that's far too full. It is understood that Mr. Braund contributes $2,000 taxes to the city's coffers. He didn't make the statement, but the report is believed to be none the less correct. Surely he ought to receive some consideration if there is none for the many other ratepayers who pass the Braund corner. If a south ward man is ever elected mayor, and that event may be nearer realisation than is generally thought, he or a chairman of the Board of Works would surely be perfectly justified in oiling every sq. yard of roadway in the whole ward, even to the Monaghan Road. The sacrosanct precedent that has been established by the council could be observed with a few minor alterations.

But coming back to the present, Alderman McIntyre seems to be in full charge of the road oil dole, and while it is fully realized that economy and efficiency have been exercised in oiling, Park street people claim that they should have been farther up in the list than they are apparently placed. Just now they seem to be like Abou Ben Adam, hopelessly at the bottom of the heap. There is a promise of joy in the fact that Abou made a great comeback.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I see by the columns of The Examiner that there are various societies formed in the United States for combating the disease commonly known as hay fever, which owes its origin to decomposed vegetable matter. Our City Engineer very properly takes an interest in our lawns and the beautifying of the city. In another month hay fever will be quite prevalent, but by causing all noxious weeds to be cut down and carted away to the incinerator or some suitable place, he will do much to mitigate the disease and, at the same time, add to the beautifying of the city. He need not go further than the southeast corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets for a sample of what is complained of.

Yours truly,
ANTI-SEPTIC.

mern, but also in the centre of the section in the neighbourhood of Riga. The German first line of defences has been rushed at several points and the artillery work is becoming intensified both here and opposite Dvinsk. According to information, the Russian successes in this section of the front are already more marked than would appear from the extremely laconc references in the official communiques which defer full accounts until they are able to present accomplished facts in definite form.

Northeast of Smorgon the Russians captured a portion of the German defences by a well-planned night attack. The Russian push over the centre of the grand strategic front, namely, in the section centring toward Baranavitchi, has been somewhat less successful than elsewhere, but this fact makes little difference to the enemy's general situation. The Germans have brought up here also a formidable force of their heaviest guns, and a heavy bombardment opened by the enemy over this section may be in preparation for an attack.

FIRED AT A CAT COST HIM $2.00

East City Man Shattered The Deep Calm of a Sabbath Afternoon

A mysterious individual who, in general appearance, might be said to resemble Robinson Crusoe very closely, appeared in the dock this morning after being a guest for one week on the hill, and from behind an undergrowth of beard that would do justice to a Jewish Rabbi, pleaded guilty to a charge of riding "gratis" on a C.P.R. go-cart. As Chief Thompson could learn nothing during the week of his mysterious guest, he was discharged after being reminded that in the eyes of the law purloining rides on railway trains is just as serious an offensive as stealing what is consumable.

"Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," murmured a wise man in ages past and this adage was all that saved a local blacklister from being minus ten good Canadian dollars this morning. The accused had been placed on the list of forbidding drinkers one month ago, but his wife had misplaced the official missal placing her better half on the list, with the result that he did not know of the law's restraint upon his liberty until he was served.

An East City resident startled his slumbering neighbours by firing at a cat on Sunday afternoon and the shot just one, cost him two dollars. Killing cats may not be a serious offence in the eyes of New York people, who killed 500 a few days ago, but shooting within the city limits is an offence, and moreover, the silent solemnity of Peterborough's Sabbath must be maintained at all costs.

HOOSIER POET'S BODY LIES IN STATE CAPITOL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 25.—On a catafalque trimmed in grey and surrounded by flowers and palms, the body of James Whitcomb Riley, poet, rested under the dome of the Indiana capitol, while thousands of Hoosiers passed the bofin and looked for the last time on the face so dear to them.

Old and young passed by, rich and poor alike. The procession seemed interminable.

The body arrived at the State House shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday in a procession headed by mounted police, and with Governor Ralston and Mayor Bell in automobiles.

On the coffin beneath the big dome, was Indiana's floral tribute, provided by Governor Ralston, at the head. The city's tribute was at the foot. Just to the side was another beautiful floral creation, "from the old folk back home" at Greenfield. Other tributes were from Mr. and Mrs. Meredith Nicholson and Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair Parry.

Tributes received included those from Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris, John Philip Sousa and many others, Mrs. Robert J. Burdette and many others.

KNEW WHERE THE FORDS WERE.

Judge George W. Granger of Rochester, Minn., sends in the following story, which illustrates the extent to which the Ford car has won its way into the everday life of all the people: "The captain of the steamer Quincy, plying on the Mississippi, mentioned the fact that on nearly every trip last season they carried a number of autos. The motorists would get held up by bad weather and heavy roads and make for the river to ship their cars by boat .On one trip there were fourteen cars, all large ones.

"One of the passengers, wandering about the boat to pass time, found his way to the lower deck, and after looking the assembled machines over, turned to a negro roustabout standing near and said: "How is it that I don't see any Ford cars here?"

"Without hesitation the roustabout replied, 'The Fohds is all out on the roads, suh.'"

This Man-Eating Shark Kills Shark-Eating Fox

NEW YORK, July 25.—Here's a story of a fox and a shark. From outward appearances it looks as if the fox had the laugh on the shark, but from inward appearances it seems quite the reverse. It's a tragic little tale, admittedly fishy, and therefore out of the ordinary. In most cases the old adage "He who laughs last laughs best" holds good, but it is necessary in this particular instance to let the reader discover who had the last laugh.

All New England towns having an inch of coast line on the well-known Atlantic, or any tributary thereto, have been on the lookout for the finny monsters. Each town has been trying to slip over a shark story that would make its neighbors appear as useless as a pair of oars on the Sahara Desert. That, of course, was before Frank Jason spoke up in behalf of Stony Brook, L.I.

Mr. Jasen is modest enough in a letter received by the Herald, and really should not be chided, but, even as he explains it, it is hard to conceive of a shark killing a fox. And it all happened on land—more mystery. Several days ago, with Mr. Harry Shipman, also of Stony Brook, he went on a shark hunt in Stony Brook harbor. In the old days a catfish was a novelty there, but the bold fishing party argued that if there were sharks at Mattawan there must be more sharks at Stony Brook.

They were right. Cautiously approaching no particular point in the harbor, they suddenly sighted a six-foot shark of the blue nose variety. There was no question that he was a curious shark, for he immediately began to sniff around the Shipman boat, with the result that he "got the hook."

This story ordinarily would end at this point if it were not for the fact that Mr. Shipman had several pampered pet foxes. He always has been of the opinion that there is nothing too good for his foxes, and the thought struck him that a shark stew would be very toothsome. He towed the shark ashore and, aided by his friends, began to make a hash of the big fish. Two of his dogs and the family cat could hardly be held in check while the shark was being prepared for the cooking pot. When the meal was ready the foxes were summoned. Three out of four spurned the sea food, but the fourth, not so finicky as the rest, ate heartily. An hour later he was seized with convulsions and died.

After getting us all worked up in the first part of his letter this was how Mr. Jason explained the fact that a fox had been killed by a shark. It all works out like one of those Sunday picture puzzles. We hope the epidemic will soon pass on.

MILITARY NEWS

up and send the parcels. Don't wrap the parcels in newspapers and don't put news in the letters as they are opened before we get them.

BOWMANVILLE, July 24.— Much consternation is caused in the town by the board of Bowmanville Hospital at its last meeting refusing to admit members of the 235th Battalion to its institution. This town gave a small grant of $500 to the battalion on condition that it make its headquarters here, but Lieut.-Col. S. B. Scobel, O. C., is calling a special meeting of the officers to consider the advisability of returning this money to the Council and moving the headquarters to either Cobourg or Port Hope, where he feels that soldiers requiring medical attention will be treated with consideration.

At present two serious casualties in the battalion are requiring immediate hospital attention, and the action taken by the board is being strongly criticised.

Guelph, July 24.—A movement is on foot in Guelph for the registration of all young women in the city who are willing and prepared to take the places of men who are wanted at the front. It is understood that the organisation will be perfected in a few days and that a registration bureau will be opened at the City Hall, where all these young women can register their names. It is also understood that as soon as this is started certain employers of labor in the city will inform some of their male help that their country needs their services worse than they do, and they will be given the opportunity to enlist or quit the job. It has been pointed out to these employers that they have plenty of jobs which can be filled by young women as well as men, and that the girls are willing to take their places. This applies both to factories and stores.

Renfrew, July 24.—Leading business men and the town council have decided to co-operate with the military authorities in securing the names of all men eligible for military service. At a special meeting this morning the project was outlined by Lt.-Colonel Watt, commanding officer of the 240th Batt., and Major Campbell of Kingston, who spoke in local pulpits yesterday. The business men and council will secure the names of all the eligible males between the ages of 18 and 46, it will be the business of these prominent citizens to ascertain just what men can be spared from necessary occupations and from the machinery of business, and submit these to the recruiting officers, who will then approach the men and find out what their reasons are for not going. There will be no haphazard recruiting or indiscriminate pestering. Reeves and Councils will be asked to co-operate with this committee.

"It is only by some such system," said Lt.-Col. Watt, "that we can get at the eligibles. We do not want to cripple industry, or agriculture, or commerce, and such a canvass would show us the possibilities of this district in eligible recruits."

Sergt. C. H. Patterson of the 139th Battalion, Cobourg, is home on six days' leave, after qualifying for a lieutenant in a recent course at Kingston. He will rejoin his regiment at Valcartier prepared for promotion when it comes.

A cable from England to-day states that Lt.-Col. Odlum of British Columbia, has been promoted brigade commander, with the rank of of Brigadier General. General Odlum is a nephew of Mr. Geo. W. Powell, George street, and has several times been mentioned in despatches for meritorious work at the front.

Kingston, July 24.—Col. T. D. R. Hemming, officer commanding the third military district and Barriefield Camp, has been made a brigadier-general, after 33 years in the service of the Canadian militia. He was born in Drummondville, Quebec, and is a son of the late Judge Hemming of that province.

He has one son at the front, Capt. Hemming of the 21st Battalion. In 1910 he was appointed D.O.C. of military district No. 3 at Kingston, and when the old division system was abolished he was appointed A.A.G. at Toronto, under the late Gen. Cotton. In 1913 he was appointed O.C. of the third division military district.

FORMER SIMCOE WOMAN MURDERED

CHICAGO, July 25. — Demented, angry or despondent—an unidentified man took his beautiful wife and six-months'-old son along the west bank of the Skokie River in Lake Forest, Illinois, and within a short distance of the fashionable Onwentsia Club, waited until they had fallen asleep, then killed them both and himself. The bodies were discovered on Sunday.

The police learned that the victims of the tragedy bore the names of Crandall, and lived in Flint, Mich., where the man, whose initials were "L. A. C." was a bookkeeper in the office of the Buick Automobile Company. The family came to Lake Forest Thursday. They said they had been in Chicago on a vacation.

Crandalls had boarded in Flint for some time at the home of Mrs. Leanard Cody, but had been ordered to leave because of Crandall's inhuman treatment of the child. Mrs. Crandall whose maiden name was Norma Tisdale, came here from her home in Simcoe, Ontario.

AVOID SHIPPING CHEESE IN WET OR GREEN BOXES SAYS MR. G. A. GILLESPIE

Mr. Gillespie Issues a Warning to Cheese Manufacturers ---Difficulty Arose in Connection With the Lindsay Cheese Board---Had to Bear the Loss.

Lindsay, July 25.—Cheese manufacturers should exercise great care in regard to boxes used for shipment of the product, as was pointed out by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who has been a buyer on the Lindsay cheese board for many years. The reason for this was given by him on account of a cut in price made by the Hodgson firm of Montreal, produce dealers, on cheese shipped from Lindsay. The rind of cheese, Mr. Gillespie said, when shipped in green or wet boxes, becomes discolored and injured all around the cake to a depth of one-half an inch or more. If 20 per cent. of the shipment is thus affected a cut of one-half a cent per pound is made on the shipment from the factory, it being classed as second quality.

This accounts for the disagreement which arose at the meeting between President Robertson and Peterboro's worthy M.P.P. Mr. Gillespie further stated that the Lindsay Board had been so well used in previous years that they took offence at any set-back. On different occasions Mr. Gillespie had settled for mistakes made by pay in as high as $200 out of his own pocket rather than destroy the tranquility of feeling which had always prevailed between him and the Lindsay cheese board.

MODIFIED STATEMENT.

A meeting of the Lindsay cheese board was held yesterday, when President Robertson, of the Lindsay cheese board, and Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P. buyer, of Peterboro, locked horns. It was intensely hot, but this did not prevent President Robertson reading the rules of the cheese board, which would be outlawed if they were an ordinary book account. The buyers grew restless, and watched the clock tick of the fast fleeting moments that announced train time for Peterboro's most worthy M.P.P.

After reading the constitution President Robertson asked for information from the two buyers present Messrs. Flavelle and Gillespie, concerning a sale of cheese made to Mr. Flavelle at the last board meeting.

Mr. Robertson said that Mr. Flavelle bought the cheese afterwards turning them over to Mr. Gillespie The latter shipped them to Montreal, where a cut of half a cent per pound was made through the cheese being shipped in green boxes. This affected the product to such an extent that about half an inch of the product was destroyed all around. Mr. Robertson claimed that there was dirty work done.

Mr. Gillespie objected to this statement and demanded that the president withdraw his remark.

Mr. Staples also asked that President Robertson take it back, which was modified by agreeing that there was some misunderstanding.

ENTERTAINED AT CLAM BAKE

Have you ever been at an old-fashioned clam-bake. Well, if not you have really missed a treat as fourteen travellers of the Toronto Red Rose Tea staff will vouch for.

They have just returned after spending a week the guests of the President of the Company, Mr. T. H. Estabrooks, at St. John, N. B., the Company's headquarters. The Ontario men were joined at St. John by representatives from Winnipeg, Montreal, Maine and the entire Maritime Province staff.

The clam-bake at Manawagonish Island on the Bay of Fundy was from an entertainment standpoint the outstading feature. A special boat was chartered for this trip and it was a merry crowd indeed that left North Market Wharf. The famous Bay of Fundy "roll" increased the merriment, but—for a time only—as some of the Ontario men especially were not good sailors, but once on solid footing again and with appetites that only salt air and sunshine can give all were soon being initiated into the mysteries of a real old-time clam-bake, under the supervision of an experienced "old salt."

Another special feature of the trip included a delightful sail up the St. John river, to "The Cedars." The river for this trip is over a mile wide and experienced travellers say that it is one of the most delightful trips in the world. Dinner and supper were served here and all enjoyed the games and water sports.

Business sessions were held every morning during the Convention, and the staff had talks from some of the heads of the business. Mr W. B. Miles, head of the tea department, gave two most interesting and instructive talks on tea. Mr. Miles is an outstanding authority on tea, having spent his whole life in the trade, as did his father and grandfther before him. The main business feature of the convention, however, was the two splendid addresses by the President, Mr. T. H. Estabrooks. His story of the starting of the Red Rose Tea business in a small way, in 1894, contrasted with the present enormous business, with so many branches, really seems as wonderful as a fairy story.

After a reception by Mrs. Estabrooks, on their beautiful grounds at 'Cedar Cliff' the men left for home, feeling that they had not only had a most enjoyable but a very profitable time.

BRITAIN BUYS UP DOMESTIC WOOL

LONDON, July 24.—Since the close of the last Colonial Wool auctions, interesting developments have occurred in the wool trade. The War Trade Department suddenly decided to take a census of the wool stocks in Great Britain, and, without publishing the results, announced that no sale or dealings in English-grown wool were to be allowed.

As the clip is about due traders with contracts were anxious but they had hardly expressed their surprise when the Government announced it would buy the whole of the English, Scotch and Irish output for the season of 1916 at prices on the basis ruling before the war plus 30 per cent. This is considerd by farmers insufficient to meet the advance in other commodities. Deputations are going sent to the War Office for better terms.

Just what the idea of the authority is in buying the whole of the clip it is difficult to determine, unless they also intend to buy the Australian clip or to fix maximum prices for future sales in London and other centres.

WOMEN IN BOAT ALL NIGHT AT SEA SING TILL RESCUED

HIGH TIDE BRINGS CRAFT ON SHORE AFTER PASSENGERS ARE SAVED BY COAST GUARD.

Portsmouth, N.H., July 25.—After passing the night in a small yacht tender Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wilkins, of Baltimore,, summer residents at Marblehead, and their guests, Charles E Conway, of Lyan, and Miss Cherry Head, of Brookline, together with J. W. Scott, the engineer of the power yacht Selma, were rescued just before 8 o'clock this morning by Captain Belden F. Wells, of the Wallis Sands Coast Guard station and his volunteer crew. The Selma, which was abandoned by her owner and his party, came ashore early this morning and at high tide was carried high on the beach.

Mr. Wilkins and his party left Marblehead yesterday afternoon at two o'clock for a cruise along the coast to Portsmouth Harbor. When off Wallis Sands at 10 o'clock the craft struck the outer reef of Ross Ledge, about 3-4 of a mile off shore. Fearing for the safety of the women of the party, the small boat was lowered and the yacht was abandoned in less than 10 minutes after she struck.

During the night the two women displayed courage and on several occasions Mrs. Wilkins sang to liven up the party.

The Selma was built at East Greenwich in 1910 at a cost of $6,000. She is 53 feet long and of light draught, cruising in Chesapeake Bay.

Ques.: "What is the biggest raw product you use?"

Ans.: "Hard to say without looking it up."

Ques.: "You can't tell? I know, now."

Ans.: "You do? Well! What is it?"

Ques.: "Working Time, my boy, working time—the time every workman sells you every day. How do you check it?"

Ans.: "Check it? Oh, I guess my timekeepers do that."

Ques.: "They're human beings? Of course, Yes—well, now, who checks the timekeeper? And who checks the man who checks the timekeeper? Why not cut out all the guess-work and let a cold-blooded machine do the work? Print unchangeable figures under lock and key in and out shifts, four or six times a day, if necessary, giving Records that form an original PRINTED wage sheet."

Ans.: "Sounds good—what's the answer?"

Ques.: "Well the answer is an International Time Recorder. Your competitors are using it. Thousands of the World's greatest manufacturers are doing likewise. Time is the greatest raw material in the world and if you don't check it's purchase you'll lose, and lose four times a day every day in the year. AFTER CHUTE SLIDE SON CHASED BY HIS FATHER LOSES GIRL

Bridegroom and Bride Escape Oddly From Albany Steamboat

YOUNG MAN FLEES AFOOT, SHE FAINTS AND PURSUER FINDS HE IS TOO LATE.

NEW YORK, July 25.—Just as the Berkshire of the Hudson Navigation Company was being warped into her pier a middle aged man in a grey suit of clothes dashed frantically on to the pier. He walked up and down in a nervous ad impatient manner, and with a strained and eager gaze he searched the faces of the passengers on board the large steamboat from Albany.

A young man about twenty and a girl still younger were watching each other on the upper deck, and everybody on board the steamboat said "bride and bridegroom" or "sweethearts." Glancing casually over the roustabouts, chauffeurs and others on the pier, the young man saw the agitated one. In fact, they saw each other at just about the same time. The young man urned pale, grasped the young woman and they disappeared from the deck.

The gangplank was hardly secure before the nervous man dashed on board the Berkshire. He was in a hurry, for he was after the young man, his son, and the young woman, his son's sweetheart, to prevent them from marrying. He had hurried by an express train from Albany, where all three live, just to prevent the wedding, and he didn't intend to let anything so unimportant as ship's officers stop him. Consequently, he brushed past the crew and officers at the gangplank and into the forward saloon.

SLID THROUGH BAGGAGE CHUTE.

The young man decided the best way he and the young woman could effect a landing and escape the irate parent was by means of the baggage chute. So he and the young woman trundled themselves like baggage through the chute and to the pier, and in less time than it takes to tell it they were in a taxicab.

Irate Father, unfortunately, had the same "hunch" about the baggage chute, and he lost no time in getting on board and diving below to the baggae room. Just as the young couple disappeared in the taxicab Irate Father shot through the chute and hailed the next cab.

"Beat it as fast as you can," the son shouted to his chauffeur, "we do not care what it costs," and the bridal taxicab sped merrily into Desbrosses street, followed by that of Irate Father. Son kept his head out of the leading cab and so did Father, and over the noise and din of the race they exchanged greetings. The girl, in a tremor of excitement, leaned back in th cab and prayed—aloud—for deliverance.

The son's taxicab left Father's vehicle a considerable distance in the rear, much to the delight of Son, who is said to have raised his hand to his nose in a most disrespectful manner and literally to have crowed over his father's discomforture.

But Son's triumph was short lived. If a horrid old traffic policeman had not stopped cross town traffic at Ninth avenue Son and his sweetheart might have escaped. But traffic stopped, and so did the bridal taxicab.

GIRL FAINTS IN TAXICAB.

Father, triumphant, rode up alongside. As he did so Son left his cab on the opposite side and thought his fiancee was following him. But the excitement was too much for her, and over she keeled in regular old-fashioned faint. As Son left the cab on one side Father, leapig from his taxicab, entered the other. Passing surface and elevated trains drowned the noise of the opening and closing doors, and before Father could step over the prostrate form of the girl the chauffeur started the automobile on motion from the traffic policeman.

The quick start threw Father down beside the fainting girl, and it likewise revived her. "Are we safe?" she asked, thinking Son still with her. She saw Father and promptly fainted again. It was such a good one that it scared Father, and as the sped up town he tried to revive her. Meantime Son discovered that his bride had not followed him and turned just in time to see the cab spurt across Ninth Avenue. On foot he started in pudsuit, and while Father tried to revive the fainting young women the cab outdistanced Son.

The girl was revived, and, seeing that she was safe, Father's ire again mastered him. "So you thought you'd try to run away and get married?" he said.

"Oh, we were married in Albany just before the boat left," she faltered. It was Father's turn to feel faint. He thought he had arrived in time to prevent the wedding. Then he stopped the taxicab, turned it around, and from last accounts Father and daughter-in-law were looking for Son.

BALMY DAYS FOR SWIMMING

These are balmy days for Peterborough's swimming population and the number of swimmers is not easily counted who daily disport themselves along the coral and on different points along the river and the lake.

The boom in Little Lake connecting the peers is perhaps the greatest point of attraction for swimmers and each evening it is thronged, especially at sunset, when Old Sol is not so heartrending and when the water has taken on is temporary warmth.

MUSICIANS HAVE A NIGHT OUT

Several members of the office staff of the Wm. Hamilton Co., visited Cedar City (on the Otonabee river) last evening, and delighted the residents with a programme of vocal and instrumental music. In the absence of "Mayor" Baker, the guests were received by Mr. Serro and given a hearty welcome. Light refreshments were served during the evening. They took their departure to the tune of "Keep the street cars running till the boys get home."

BUSINESS MEN'S EXCURSION

Thursday, July 27th, to Harwood. Steamer leaves George Street Wharf at 1.30 and Street Railway Wharf at 2. Tickets may be had at the office of Frank Whitehouse and at 364 Water St. Give the garden hose and lawn mower a rest for one night, and come and revel in the Rice Lake breezes. 2d-20

Miss Leota Fisher of the Queen's Hotel, Bracebridge, has been the guest of Miss Greta LeBarr, 167 Charlotte Street, for the past two weeks. She returns to-day, being accompanied by Mrs. LeBarr and Miss Greta for a vacation in Bracebridge.

The many friends of Mr. Jack Laing, who has been ill at the home of his parents, 489 Cedar street, will be glad to know that he has recovered and left to-day to resume his work with the National Council of Y.M.C.A. in Toronto.

After a six weeks' visit to his mother, Dick Simons left on Saturday for New York city to join his company, Gus Hill's Musical Comedy "Bringing Up Father." After two weeks' rehearsal in New York, the company opens up for the season in Memphis, Tennessee.

Dr. Morrow has returned from a three-weeks' visit to the Canadian North West, where he was called by the serious illness and consequent death of his brother, the late James Morrow, who passed away at Ethelton, Sask., a short time ago. Dr. Morrow reports the crops in splendid condition. The West has had the same warm wave as Peterborough has been experiencing.

CLEVELAND LADY DIES HERE ON HOLIDAY

Death came suddenly and under sad circumstances last evening at St. Joseph's Hospital, to Mrs. Henry C. Straley of Cleveland, O. Mr. and Mrs. Straley and daughter Ruth had motored all the way from Cleveland, and had been down holidaying at Healy Falls and Hall's Bridge. Mrs. Straley took sick suddenly a few days ago and was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where an operation was deemed necessary, from the effects of which Mrs. Straley failed to recover. The body is being sent to Cleveland on the afternoon train.

Electrical Work Must Be Inspected

Mr. H. A. Fife Was Appointed For That Purpose by the Power Commission

Some people are as yet unaware that the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario demand regular and consistent inspection of all electrical wiring. In Peterborough this is accomplished through the medium of Mr H. A. Fife, who some months ago, was appointed to undertake this work. Failure to submit new work or even repair work for inspection will incur a penalty such as provided in the statutes.

MINIATURE POOLS IN CENTRAL PARK

North end residents, who believe that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line, and who accordingly utilise the walk which cuts Central Park diagonally were surprised to-day to see several springs of cool water dotting the park at various places. Many explantions were offered for the odd sight, some thinking it was a new mode of irrigation being tested by the Parks Commission, while others thought it was a miniature swimming pool being installed by the city for the use of the boys of the city. A wise individual who happened along and who could see below the surface of the mystery, enlightened his inquiring friends by mentioning the fact that the hydrants for supplying water to be used on the grass were placed in small holes around the Park and had overflowed, thus causing these water oases.

It Looks Like a Lean Year In Raspberries

Raspberries will be sounded with a broader 'a' than ever this year if the heavens husband the water supply much longer. For they are now 18 cents a box or two boxes for 35c.. A price beyond the means of the proletariat, but are easy picking for persons who have no financial worries. Hence the buyers will be those who skid on their "a's" and cut out the muffler, and now those who speech is raspy rather than "raw." From this it follows that investigators might esquire into the effects of commodity prices on the national language for an essay in Harper's or the Atlantic. Fruit men state that the price will scarcely go below 15c. a box owing to the long dry spell during the ripening season.

Better Cake and Biscuits

In all recipes calling for Baking Powder use Royal Baking Powder. You will get better and finer food and insure its healthfulness

Housewives are sometimes led to use inferior baking powders because of apparent lower cost, but there is very little difference in practical use—about one cent for a whole cake or pan of biscuits—a mere trifle when you consider the vast difference in healthfulness in favor of food made with Royal Baking Powder.

Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, derived from grapes—a natural food product, as contrasted with alum, derived from mineral sources, and used in the manufacture of some baking powders because it is cheaper.

PRISONERS GET AWAY FROM SIMCOE JAIL

Simcoe, July 25.—Private James Potts, charged with deserting from the 133rd, and the bigamist, McDonald, awaiting transfer to the Prison Farm, to complete his sentence, have escaped from the county jail here.

They were seen dropping from the yard wall by residents across the street and the alarm was turned in promptly. Potts was barefooted. A step-ladder used in doing some interior painting, and a bed sheet, told the story of their scaling the eighteen-foot wall. McDonald's wife lives in London, his parents in Hamilton, and the partner of his second wedding ceremony, Miss Wark, lives in Brantford. Potts is thick set and swarthy, a little under average height, has straight black hair, aged about 40 years. McDonald is about 22 years old, of good physique, well proportioned, light brown hair and clear complexion.

Brewer Brown Now A Methodist Minister

Has Accepted a Call to the Methodist Ministry at Lakefield

Ensign Brewer Brown, late of the Salvation Army, Oshawa, has accepted a call to the Methodist ministry at Lakefield, Ont., beginning his work ther last week. He has had a wonderful career. The son of an English prize fighter, he followed in his father's footsteps, winning many great battles. He drifted into the careless life of the devotee of the squared circle until finally many years ago his heart was touched by the appeal of a Salvation Army street worker. From the time of his conversion he has left the old life behind and has given his life to reclaim others. He is a man of powerful physique, and has become as effective in the pulpit as he once was in the prize ring. He has a market garden here which he operated successfully for the past few years. Like Paul of old he was convicted in his sins and is giving up all to carry the light to others. His zeal and earnestnes are compeling and as an evangelist he may yet become widely known. Several of his sons and sons-in-law are in the war.

Sea Cow Forsakes Sea And Is Killed In River

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 26. — The fretful conduct of the St. Johns River until and on July 14 last might be explained by the fact that the manatee was a tenant therein. On or about that date it was hit in the personal rudder by a steamship and, having died, floated along on the surface of the water. It is one of the largest specimens of manatee ever seen.

The manatee is practically extinct in the waters of the United States, and most persons who viewed this big sea cow had never seen one before. It is the consensus that even if they could have lived along quite happily and have felt the loss only slightly.

Both the American Museum of Natural History, of New York, and the Smithsonian Institution, of Washington, have offered to purchase the skeleton of the manatee, which as captured weights 2,000 pounds and is seventeen feet long. The owner of the carcass, however, has decided to sell the ribs, which are of a substance almost identical with ivory. The carcass is to be stuffed and will be exhibited.

In appearance the sea cow is a cross between a hippo and an exceptionally stout sweet potato. He has characteristics of the sea lion, the kangaroo, the snail, the hot water bag, the seal, the aeroplane and the modern cuticle knife. Briefly, the manatee is a sight.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Houseman Inheritance

By HENRY HOLMES

Caspar Houseman many years ago came from the Rhine region of Germany to the United States, bringing his wife and children with him, and settled at the base of the Catskill mountains in the very region where Rip Van Winkle lived. Why Houseman settled in such a place where so little is to be got out of the ground is not apparent.

Houseman brought means with him from the fatherland and put it all into a home directly back of the present town of Catskill. There is nothing now left of his house except a few stones that formed the basement. So no one can say what it was like, but tradition has it that he fashioned it after a Rhine castle near whose ruins he was born and reared. At any rate, the description that has come down to us indicates that it was a much finer place than was usual in America at the time it was built.

Houseman's wife died soon after he came to this country, and soon after her death he married a widow with children. This made two sets of children, Houseman's and those of his second wife, living together. No sooner was he married to the widow than she began to pester him to leave his property, which was all in his Catskill home, to her children, cutting off his own offspring. By this time some of his children were old enough to look out for their rights, and the consequence was that the poor old man was besieged first by one family, then by the other, until—so it is said—he was well nigh driven crazy.

From all accounts that have come down to us, it seems likely that these two parties pulling upon him in opposite directions did affect his sanity. At any rate, when the old man had been driven into his grave by the importunities of these different claimants and his will was opened a great surprise was in store for his survivors. It read:

I give and bequeath my estate to the devil.

Of course this brought about a lawsuit as to the disposition of the property, for such a will was not legal. Houseman's children claimed the property, his widow claimed it, and her children claimed it. The case came up before old Vanderdicken, a Dutch judge who could speak no English. The lawyers could speak nothing but English, and the claimants only spoke German. The consequence was that the court broke up in a fearful row, the judge in his wrath stating that the property rightfully belonged to Satan and he hoped Satan would get it.

The two families remained under the same roof, for neither would surrender the occupation of the property. They were quarreling one day, their voices extending nearly to the river, some ten or fifteen miles away, when a man was seen standing at the gate quietly surveying the premises. The disputants ceased to wrangle, and Mrs. Houseman asked the stranger what he wanted.

"I have come over from Germany," he replied, "to claim an inheritance. Is this the property of Caspar Houseman, deceased?"

"It is."

"Well, I am Louis Brackenthaler of Bingen. Caspar Houseman sent me shortly before he died a will leaving his property to me."

He drew a will from his pocket written in Houseman's handwriting and bearing his signature. All looked at it aghast, for they knew well the testator's writing, and it was his.

This new complication was too much for the wranglers, and they all left the premises without a struggle. As they passed out Herr Brackenthaler stood bowing and smiling at them, with his hat in his hand, and so sardonic was his demeanor that they were all glad when they got away.

One would expect to find the will on file in the surrogate's office. I got the story from a German barber at Catskill while he was shaving me, and as soon as he had finished I went to the courthouse and made inquiry there for it. I was informed that about once a year some one inquired about a Houseman will, but there was no record of any such document.

But to finish my story. During the night following the surrender of the Houseman people to Herr Brackenthaler there came up a thunderstorm that caused the mountains to reverberate, if anything, worse than when Hendrick Hudson's men had played at bowls there. For a time it seemed to those who lived on the banks of the river that the whole Catskill mountains were ablaze. To this very day there are citizens of towns that were settlements in those days who remember their grandparents or great-grandparents giving descriptions of that storm, the spot below where now stands the Mountain House shooting up fire like a volcano. This is the place where the meager ruins of the Houseman castle stand.

The next morning persons went to this spot and found the Houseman house burned to the ground, the only remains being a small part of the basement wall. As for Herr Brackenthaler, the only time he was ever seen was when he took possession of the property.

The barber who told me the story has no more doubt that Brackenthaler was the devil and had claimed his own than that the soap he put on my bald head would restore the hair that formerly grew there.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

THE DRUM MUST GO.

European Powers Have Decided Against Its Martial Use.

Recently the French Government reached the conclusion that the drum was no longer a necessary article of military equipment. It was held that the drum was a serious incumbrance in marching; that rain impaired its usefulness; that its calls could not be distinguished in time of battle; that it consumed a period of two years to turn out an efficient drummer and that by abandoning the use of the drum many thousands of youth and men would be released for active service.

Since the decision of the French Government other European powers have followed its example in decreeing that the 'drum must go."

Indeed, the war between Russia and Japan was regarded by experts in things military as having sealed the fate of the martial drum. The Japanese armies moved from first to last silently, save for the occasional blast of the bugle. The drum was conspicuously absent. Before that war it had been abolished in some European armies, but no great war had been fought without it.

Napoleon was an ardent defender of the drum and he believed, with Marshal Saxe, that great general of the 18th century, that the measured sound made by the drum and the fife was indispensable to make men march well.

Napoleon's opponent, Wellington, contended that without the strains of music it was quite impossible for troops to make successful charges. Wanting music, he said, men would come up ragged and open against the enemy.

The history of the drum is both ancient and honorable. The Egyptians employed it and the Greeks ascribed its invention to Bacchus. The Spanish conqueror Pizarro is said to have found drums in South American temples. The snakes of Ireland, we are told, fled from the Emerald Isle before the drum beats of St. Patrick. The Puritans of New England used the drum as a church bell, and it figured frequently and romantically throughout our wars of the revolution and rebellion.

Danger of St. Paul's.

"The critical part of the work in connection with securing the safety of St. Paul's dome will be finished in a few weeks," said Canon Alexander, addressing the Workers' Education Association at St. Paul's Chapter House recently, "but the whole work will take from ten to fifteen years." The first part of the scheme, he said, consisted of the removal of inflammable material from the building, even to the wooden floors and galleries. A great system of hydrants for extinguishing fire was carried right up to the dome, and with the help of an electric pump they were now able to carry water right up to the top of any part of the building and right over the cross on top. For the first time in the history of St. Paul's they were now able to deal adequately with any outbreak of fire. Some people would be surprised to know that it was one of the most dangerous buildings in London. Now it had been made one of the safest.

History dated the completion of the present cathedral at 1710, but it was a mistake, and was due, he thought, to Sir Christopher Wren's failing memory. The correct date was 1706 for in the cathedral there were accounts of the original building which stated that the last stone was placed on the lantern in October, 1708. They had recently had to appeal for £20,000, and about half the sum was still needed.

Why They Laughed.

Mr. Weedon Grossmith, the popular comedian, tells a story of one of his early attempts to entertain.

A friend of his, Mr. Walter Webb, who had a house in the country, had fitted up a large barn as a sort of theatre, and every now and then he gave entertainments there, to which the neighboring rustics were invited. On one occasion Mr. Grossmith went down to give an entertainment.

"The laughter was so great when I was on the stage," Mr. Grossmith said, "that I became greatly embarrassed, as I could scarcely account for it. The laughter became so great that at last Mr. Webb rose and addressed the audience.

"I know," he said, "how difficult it is to restrain our mirth when Mr. Grossmith is on the stage, but if we don't check our laughter the performance won't be over till midnight."

A burly farmer replied, "Excuse me, Muster Webb, it bain't Mr. Grossmith we be laughin' at, but someone have left the barn door open, an' all the pigs have got in, an' they be nigh pushin' of us off our seats!"

Love of Country.

"'Dulce et decorum pro patria mori.'

"It cannot be expressed, what a deal of charity that one name of countrey contains.

'Amor laudis et patriae pro stipendio est.'

"The Decii did se devovere, Horatii, Curii, Scaevola, Regulus, Codrus, sacrifice themselves for their countrey's peace and good.

'Una dies Fabios ad bellum miserat omnes;
Ad bellum missos perdidit una dies.'

"One day the Fabii stoutly warred. One day the Fabii were destroyed.

Fifty thousand Englishmen lost their lives willingly near Battle Abby in defence of their countrey. P. Aemilius speaks of six senatours of Calais, that came with halters in their hands to the King of England, to dye for the rest. This love makes so many writers take such pains, so many historiographers, physicians, etc., or at least as they pretend, for common safety, and their countrey's benefit."—Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy."

The Great Conde.

The great military genius Conde was a precocious boy. At eight he understood Latin, and at eleven he gave out a treatise on rhetoric. When fourteen he had become thoroughly conversant with the principles of warfare and of all military tactics.

Economy.

"There is much truth in the saying of the cynic, that the economical wife is a woman who never allows a crumb to fall from her husband's table without carefully picking it up and putting it in her husband's bed," says a writer in an English paper.

Prince's Bride.

To supply hints of possible royal brides for the Prince of Wales is one of the most fruitful topics for society gossipers. The latest suggestion is that a marriage with a commoner would meet with the approval of the nation, and it is remarked that the popularity in England of Prince Arthur of Connaught's marriage with the daughter of a Scottish duke showed the up-to-date temper of the public.

Shells at Shanghai.

An important discovery has been made by the police in the French concession at Shanghai. At the bottom of a well on the premises of a German eight cases of Hotchkiss 65 millimetre shells of a kind useful for arming merchantmen were found. The German recently became prominent in connection with the seizure of a large consignment of small arms destined for India.

How the Italian Army Was Organized, Described by Gen. Carlo Pagani, Who Took a Leading Part in Preparing Forces for Conflict

General Carlo Pagani, who had a leading part in preparing the Italian army for the present war, tells in the following article how Italy created a national army from seven separate State forces. General Pagani points out that the organization, equipment and training of this army were of benefit to the nation, not only in arousing a national spirit but also in bringing about greater material prosperity. Both national and regional methods of recruiting were employed.

By GENERAL CARLO PAGANI.

IN writing of the organization of the Italian army I refer not merely to its divisions, brigades, regiments, companies, squadrons and batteries, the numbers of which depend on the funds provided by Parliament for the army establishment, but I refer also to its organisation in a much broader sense.

At the outbreak of the European war the Italian army was divided into twelve army corps and twenty-five divisions, the fighting material in which comprised ninety-six infantry regiments with three battalions of four companies each, each regiment having a section of machine guns and a body of reserves; twelve regiments of Bersaglieri of four battalions of three companies each, to which later three battalions were added; eight regiments of Alpini, with a total of twenty-six battalions composed of seventy-eight companies; twenty-nine regiments of cavalry of five squadrons each; thirty-six regiments of field artillery, with 193 batteries and thirty-six companies of transportation service, besides twenty-four batteries kept behind to serve as a nucleus of reserves; one regiment of mounted artillery, with eight batteries; two regiments of heavy field artillery, each with ten batteries; ten regiments of fortress artillery, of fifty-five fortress companies and forty-three coastal companies, the organic composition of the latter being reinforced by other batteries, and six regiments of engineers, with a total of twenty-nine battalions, of sixty-nine companies, and ten companies of transportation service.

Needless to say, this force was gradually increased from the beginning of the war down to the present time and has been carried to a maximum of efficiency.

Italy Was Geographical Expression.

Before 1859, when Italy was, as Metternich said, only a geographical expression, there were in the peninsula seven armies, corresponding to the seven States into which it was divided. There were Austrian troops in Lombardy; in the Kingdom of Naples a considerable army, which was well organized, as the Bourbons insisted upon being strong and feared; in Piedmont an army which was not numerous, but which was solid and had brilliant traditions of valor acquired upon fields of battle and maintained with pride and with faith under the guidance of the princes of the house of Savoy, valorous and loyal leaders.

Next in importance was the Papal army, to which mercenaries were added; the Tuscan army, weak in discipline and disrupted in morale, although commanded by an Austrian general, and finally the two small armies of Modena and Parma. The rulers used these forces chiefly for the purpose of keeping down internal rebellion, but even then they were not entirely at ease, and, being Austrian in their souls, they looked to Vienna as the source of protection and aid if trouble should come.

The Italian wars of independence from 1859 to 1870 expelled the Austrians from the provinces of Lombardy and Venetia and gradually removed those armies to form the new Italian army which the organizing genius of General Fanti succeeded in constituting. Thus the military forces were fused while awaiting the political fusion of souls.

The military organization of Italy started at the beginning with simple but welcome principles, which have never been abandoned.

Need for Citizen Army.

The most essential principle was that Italy should have a national army, not an army of mercenaries. Italy was a slave during the centuries because she lacked arms and armed men, but she had finally to procure them and intrust her weapons to citizen hands and to men of conscience. The verses of the famous sonnet of Filicaia, which deplored the weakness of Italy as an armed nation, were repeated in the streets, in the schools and in the families, and served to stir up a sentiment of indignation as they called attention to the nation's shame. Italy had fought for others and strewn the dead bodies of her sons on the fields of battle of Europe and had given her sons even to Napoleon, without gaining freedom for herself. The need was urgent of having arms of her own and of arming her people in order that she should no longer be the prey of the foreigner.

In this way her military institutions came to be considered as social institutions. To defend the country by putting arms in the hands of all the citizens who could carry them was regarded as the highest duty, whence conscription; that is, military service made obligatory for all the citizens. The "tax of blood," as it was called, was recognized by the Italian people as a personal duty to the mother country.

Having once accepted as indisputable the necessity of a permanent army with obligatory service there came up a question of the system of recruiting and a discussion arose as to whether it should be regional or national.

The elongated form of our peninsula, the fact that Italians for so long had been divided under different governments with different habits, traditions and legislations and serious considerations of purely military nature rather favored the regional system, but the opposite idea prevailed through one consideration, which overshadowed all others, and that is that, having united or made Italy, as the phrase was, there was a necessity to make Italians and to fuse all in the great melting pot of Italianism.

A Despatch Rider in the Italian Army.

This melting pot was the army, the true and great means of unifying the country. Thus were absorbed in one body Piedmontese, Lombards, Tuscans, Neapolitans, Sicilians, Venetians, and there came forth the army of Italy, which the poet had longed for, ready to fight for itself and for the nation.

Discard Regional System.

We willingly renounced all the military and civil advantages which regional recruiting would have given us, because to form the army of regiments entirely made up of Piedmontese, of Venetians or Neapolitans seemed something discreditable for a country which was arising in virtue of an ideal of nationality and unity, and also something politically injurious.

It is true that the regional system would have given a simple organism and have facilitated the calling to the colors of the men located near the centres of mobilization; it would have made mobilization more rapid and would have caused military service to seem less severe, as it would leave the men in the neighborhood of their homes and it would have tightened the bonds between army and country, but it could not have founded the national sentiment and would not have attained the supreme aim of making all Italians brothers in one family.

It was because account was taken of this fact that, in 1895, the Italian Parliament rejected almost unanimously a proposal for the adoption of the regional system made by War Minister Mocenni.

To reconcile national interests with the exigencies of mobilization, however, a mixed system has been adopted in Italy:—The national system in time of peace for all bodies except the alpini and the mountain artillery, and the regional system in time of war, as then every regiment gathers in the recruits in the regions in which they happen to be in garrison. The reservists consequently have not served in the bodies in which they will have to fight, but there is always a nucleus of men from the national recruiting to welcome them and, besides, they themselves for the most part already have performed their service in bodies recruited on the national basis.

We renounced also the idea of an armed nation on the Swiss basis as well as all ill-advised reductions of forces in time of peace, as we recognized the impossibility of improvising in the hour of need an army which would be great and serviceable. We understood that the best of measures is to be as strong as possible. If the army is made for war and if its duty is to protect right and repel injustice, the money which is spent by the millions for that purpose—at least, so it is thought in Italy by the wiser section of the nation—is not an unproductive expense, became a permanent army of this kind, giving us strength and preservation, assures internal and external tranquillity, which is translated into a development of wealth and social well being.

60,000 Soldiers of Warring Nations Are Under Guard in Holland

German Officers Decline to Give Paroles Under Orders from Government to Escape If Possible.

WHEN the war is all over Holland will send out some statements to Great Britain, Germany, France and Belgium which will probably be paid promptly if foreign exchequers permit of paying anything just then. These statements will have to do with the "feeding, housing and entertaining" of some thousands of miscellaneous soldiers now "guests" of Holland—but not what might be called "overwelcome" guests.

Holland "feeds, houses, clothes and provides some work" for more than sixty thousand soldiers who have wandered, fled and "sneaked" over her border since the war started. These soldiers have been interned in camps according to nationality, their weapons have been confiscated and they are being held as non-combatants until such a time as the war has ended.

Holland had two problems to cope with when war broke out besides her problem of maintaining neutrality, at the side of which the problem confronting the United States is pigmy.

Holland had to take care of the starving hordes of Belgium—a nation's surplus non-combatant population. It also had to take care of and property handle, in a manner to maintain its neutrality and at the same time its national dignity, an influx of armed soldiers, often in considerable numbers, sometimes singly, soldiers who unwillingly or otherwise crossed the Belgium-Holland border, an imaginary line too easy of access to be avoided.

Bills Will Be Rendered.

So soon as it was seen that such a problem would have to be solved Queen Wilhelmina caused to be published a royal edict by which she announced to the warring Powers that Holland would literally "capture" all soldiers of a belligerent nation who crossed her border under arms and would place such soldiers in camps, to be held until the end of the war, when a settlement for such care and protection would be called for.

Holland based her right to intern the soldiers of the combatant nations upon a royal order of 1900 in which the Netherlands forbade the crossing of her boundaries by armed soldiers of any nation. This edict was augmented at the beginning of the war with the statement that soldiers of alien countries found within her borders under arms would be interned, or, in the language of the order, "watched" until such a time as the Netherlands saw fit to end the surveillance.

The Queen in making such a pronunciamento took it upon herself to provide such protection and "watching." There was no available military bureau to which to assign the care of these interned soldiers, so one was created. It was called the Department of Internment, and General Major Onnen, a retired soldier of ability, was recalled from the quiet of his Amsterdam home to take charge of the work directly under the eye of General Major Schneider, chief of the Department of War in Holland.

General Major Onnen was provided with a working staff and given complete control of the situation. In a few weeks he presented a scheme to the Queen's Council which, with modifications and enlargements, is now in force and has proved to be a military masterpiece of constructive departmental work.

It was found that the border line between Holland and Belgium was "too imaginary" to be practical. Sufficient guards could not patrol the border line to effectually keep out soldiers who, through fear or pursuit or possibly as the result of reconnoitring, found themselves on Dutch soil. And these soldiers, some of them French, many of them English, many German and many, many more Belgian, poured into Holland by the hundreds. English airmen sent out as scouts landed by the dozen in Holland. Arrived parties, awheel and afoot, found themselves after long, stealthy marches on land ruled by the sovereign of the Netherlands. According to Holland's royal edict, these soldiers must at once be segregated and to all intents and purposes "captured." This was done. Intern camps in charge of Dutch army officers were quickly thrown together. These camps were built of canvas. Later they were superseded by wooden barracks built on the unit plan, quarters radiating from central mess halls and kitchens.

Records kept at these camps were placed in the hands of military statisticians, who made debits against the British, German, French and Belgian governments impartially. Officers were paid a percentage of their salaries.

Germans Refuse to Give Parole.

Privates of the rank were paid a little money each week. All were clothed and well fed. All ammunition, arms and war equipment found with the soldiers at the time of their "capture" were confiscated, and, according to Dutch order, turned over to the military authorities at Amsterdam, where they automatically became Dutch property. In that armory at Amsterdam there are now cannon, harness, aeroplanes, hand grenades, many side arms such as revolvers, bayonets, &c., all now the property of Holland.

Officers interned were asked to give their parole to the Dutch War Department and they were given partial liberty. All of the officers interned save the Germans, gave this parole. As soon as this was done many of the French and British officers removed to hotels in the cities where they were interned. However, the German officers who were interned were instructed by their government not to give their paroles, as "it is the business of a German officer to try to escape and return to the Fatherland."

Before paroles were asked for the British officers interned at Zeist, Holland, attempted an escape which is one of the funniest incidents of the war. The story is corroborated by the Dutch authorities.

The "War Joke of the Year."

It seems that a dozen or more British aviators interned at the Zeist camp became imbued with the idea that they should "return to the colors." They had been interned some three months and time dragged heavily. They had not been stripped of their personal belongings when they were "captured." Among them there was a camera with about three dozen unexposed films.

When the thought of escape became a fact the soldiers began a pictorial story of their efforts to tunnel their way out of the camp. They photographed every inch of their progress. They started their tunnel which was eventually to bring them freedom on the other side of the old moat, just outside of the intern camp, under the bunk of one of their number. They photographed the entry way; they photographed the manner in which they disposed of dirt taken from the hole; they photographed themselves getting in and out of the hole; they photographed the guard standing just over the spot where would be the exit of their tunnel. One morning they were discovered. Then they photographed the commandant, in pajamas and bed slippers, "discovering" them. This was too much. They were not even punished. One set of these photographs is now in the possession of a British girl, a member of the Friends' Society, who is devoting her efforts toward making "better Belgians" in one of the refugee camps. The War Department of the Netherlands has another set of the photographs. They are the "war joke of the year" in Holland.

A Prisoners' "Masquerade."

Another group of British officers, bent on escape, mostly the result of "nothing to do and no place to go," asked the Dutch commandant of the Zeist camp if the authorities would permit the British to "hold a masquerade party." The Dutch officer agreed. He even went so far as to borrow women's clothes in the town with which to dress them.

On the night of the party all went well until about eleven o'clock, when Dutch soldiers at the railroad station saw four masculine looking "women" parading up and down the station platform. A train bound for Rotterdam was due any moment. The train connected with a channel steamer for England. The Dutch soldiers scented an escape of British soldiers. They questioned the four "women" and found that they were masqueraders. They were led back at once in apparent disgrace to the intern camp. Capture meant "solitary confinement."

There it was discovered that while the Dutch guards had been arresting the "women" six other British officers had taken the Rotterdam-Channel train. The Dutch were none too noisy in their applause of the "joke."

What Each Country Owes.

One of the most interesting of the experiments of the Interning Department of the Dutch government is the allowing of the wives and families of interned soldiers to come from Germany, Belgium, France and Great Britain to take up residence in the cities where husbands, fathers, brothers and sons are interned. This experiment, at first looked upon askance, has proved to be a boon to the soldiers as well as the authorities, for it has resulted in bettered conditions and more contentment among the soldiers.

Some interesting figures have been compiled by the statistical bureau of the Department of Interning during recent months.

It is now estimated that for "board and keep" England owes in round figures about $100,000 to the Dutch government. Germany's share is about $50,000, France owes about $35,000 and Belgium about $200,000.

It is shown that soldiers who have been enabled to do a little work outside of the interned camps—those on parole—have credits coming to them of more than $150,000. This money has been earned by the soldiers and represents but one-half of their total earnings, as they are given one gulden out of every two they earn. The other gulden—about forty cents—is kept by the Dutch authorities to be given the soldier when the war is over. In this manner the Dutch authorities hope to send back to their native countries when hostilities cease soldiers who will have a little money in their pocket as well as the knowledge that they were "not entirely dependent upon Dutch hospitality for their very existence," as the authorities say.

Careful About Prisoners.

Visitors are not allowed at the intern camps in Holland except by special governmental permission, obtainable only at the Department of Interning at The Hague. These passes to inspect camps are issued by General Major Onnen, and he has been careful during the last year to personally inspect all credentials offered by pseudo visitors, as several "visitors" who have been given camp passes in the past turned out to be secret service agents, whose business in the camps was very different from that which they led the authorities to believe they came for.

Holland has more than proved her efficiency in handling the problem of her interned soldiers. The visitor to Holland will be amazed at her apparent military strength. About every third person on the streets wears a uniform. Holland has an army here of more than 500,000 men. In the spring months this will be increased to 700,000. Besides this she has absorbed an "alien army of 60,000," and one would never know it save for a chance visit to the cities where interned soldiers are quartered.

Just how Holland will collect her bill against all of the warring Powers when the war is over is another question. That she should and will probably be paid promptly is only the apparent after a review of how the little nation has taken care of her "sixty guests."

Keeping Food

"IN so far as good cooking consists in the cheap, attractive and delectable as the most expensive, the culinary art in China is far in advance of all other nations," says Wong Chi Foo, a Chinese writer, in the Hotel Gazette.

"In a land so densely populated the cook becomes at an early age an important member of the social economy. Not only the preparation of food for immediate but also for future use is his function. Long before Christ they learned to preserve fruits and vegetables by desiccation, compression, pickling, smoking, sousing and candying. They extended and applied these processes to animal tissue. Centuries ago they did what Americans cannot do to-day—dry clams, oysters and other shell fish until they are as hard as wood and would keep exposed to the air in any climate for years. They similarly desiccate shrimps, crabs, lobsters, flat fish, sturgeon and the like so thoroughly that they can use the unbroken goods, if necessary, for ballasting a trading vessel without injuring their quality or flavor.

"A good Chinese cook must confine his expenditures to the limit laid down by his employer—a practice in strong contrast to the loose methods in this country. He can calculate the cost of a meal to within a few cents. He can make an inferior cut of fresh pork resemble the best piece of perfumed pork, so highly prized by his employer, or make a monk bird's nest soup scarcely distinguishable from the real. When the spring market falls in price he will buy a quantity of perishable goods and preserve them to last until the autumn."

FIGHTING BISHOPS.

Days When They Went Into Battle Armed With a Mace.

The discussion whether the clergy should join the colors has prompted a correspondent to send the following interesting cutting from Notes and Queries, of July 26th, 1890:

"Churchmen in Battle.—What was the last occasion on which churchmen fought in battle? I do not mean as volunteers, as in the case of George Walker at Londonderry and the Boyne, but as part of the regular forces.

"According to Scott, 'Tales of a Grandfather,' chapter xxiv., the Scotch at Flodden (1513) left on the field two bishops and two mitred abbots. Also is it the case that churchmen went into battle armed only with a mace, in order to avoid the text, 'He that taketh the sword shall perish with the sword'? At the Battle of Bouvines (1214), 'the English on the right were broken by a fierce onset of the Bishop of Beauvais, who charged mace in hand, and struck the Earl of Salisbury to the ground' (J. R. Green, 'Short History of the English People,' ed. 1889, p. 126).

"If the following is to be understood literally, it would seem that if mediaeval bishops did not take the sword, they had no scruple about taking the lance. Mr. Green, in his account of the peasant revolt in 1381, says, 'The warlike Bishop of Norwich fell, lance in hand, on Litster's camp, and scattered the peasants of Norfolk at the first shock' (Ibid., p. 254). What badge or crest, if any, did churchmen wear in battle in order to distinguish them from lay warriors?"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

With the approach of summer the demand for house dresses will become greater. We know ahead that they will appeal when they are cut on plain lines, with a trim effect, depending mostly on the note of contrast given by combining materials for the trimming features. One dreads laundry work in the warm weather, and the plainer the garment, the less the labor when one is her own laundress.

In the model shown the fronts of the waist are turned back and faced with contrasting goods to give small revers; the neat collar that joins the revers is developed in material to match them. The sleeves have a roll cuff of self material and buttons for the convenient front closing continue to yoke depth on the skirt in four gores. These gores are arranged neatly around the body so that a graceful sweep is as much to be noticed in this dress as in one of "dressy design."

Long sleeves may be used if preferred and a separate belt or belt of material arranged about the waist. The strap pocket is stitched to each front gore and really provides much of the style in this plain little dress.

Plain and striped gingham and the figured effects in percale and such fabric will be desirable for developing.

The pattern No. 7,834 is cut in sizes 36 to 44 inches Bust measure. To make in size 36 will require 4½ yards of 36 inch material and ¼ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Vanquished Rival.

"Oh, halloa, old chap. Just the man I'm looking for. Come and have dinner with me," bubbled Doglett Loose.

"Huh! What's the occasion—why the joy?" doubtfully asked Cozie Nooks. Good reason he had, too, for it was known all over the town of Chizzlewutt that Doglett Loose was a mean man. Why, he was so mean that he'd drop a coin in a blind man's cup with a string tied to it, so that after he received a blessing he could jerk it back again. So, of course, Cozie Nooks knew that something wonderful had occurred for Doglett to treat him to a dinner.

"Occasion?" asked Doglett. "Why, the greatest in the world! My rival is dead!" and he laughed demoniacally.

"Rival? Why, you're married!" shouted Cozie Nooks.

"Certainly I am. But I had a rival until to-day. He's dead now. Died! Now you comprehend my joyful demeanour."

"Good heavens! And you stood for that. What a simpleton you are!"

"Well, she loved him before we were married, and she brought him to live with us. Of course I objected, but all to no avail. After that he and I became the best of friends. And he died this morning!"

"For the love of Peter! Well, you were a fool! What was his name?"

"Fido."

And the two friends skipped off, snickering.

Floating Diamonds.

A curious story of diamonds found floating in the North Sea was told recently in a London court when two trawler deck hands were charged with being in the unlawful possession of 98 polished and 75 unpolished diamonds.

One of the accused made a written statement, in which he said: "About five or six weeks ago I was engaged in sweeping for mines, when I saw a package floating in the water. I got a boat hook and picked it up and took it on board. No one saw me. I took it to my bunk and opened it, and found it contained brilliants, afterwards coming to the conclusion that they were good stones.

"We had no orders to report anything of the kind. I threw the outer cover away. When I got seven days' leave I tried to sell them to a jeweler at Cardiff. He had not enough money to give me, and told me to come to Holborn Viaduct.

"I took them to Messrs. Bax & Strauss, and they rang up the police."

Chaffing Lord Rosebery.

Mr. Winston Churchill's speech has reminded many people of his father, Lord Randolph Churchill. One of Lord Randolph's targets for satire, in 1892, was Lord Rosebery, himself a refined and caustic humorist, second to none in our day. Addressing a meeting at Paddington concerning the County Council election, he said: "At first Lord Rosebery was coy and shy, like a blushing girl of seventeen, but, when wooed by Finsbury he degenerated into the finished coquette. He attended no meetings, and thus avoided answering awkward questions." This was all good fun, unadjudated.

Lloyd George's Retort.

Noted for his clever way of dealing with "hecklers," it takes a very clever man to thwart Mr. Lloyd George when he is making one of his political speeches. On one occasion the chancellor was addressing a somewhat mixed audience, and began his oration with the words, "I am here——" "And so am I," interrupted a would-be wit from the end of the hall. "Yes," answered Mr. Lloyd George quickly, silencing the "heckler," "but you are not 'all there.'"

Fighting British Teachers.

Eleven thousand, four hundred British men teachers are serving with the forces, and about 9,000 have attested under the Derby scheme. In addition there are 147 serving with naval forces and 236 women acting as nurses. Teachers have already gained five Victoria Crosses, while 232 have been killed, 118 wounded, and 9 are missing.

HARD ON OBSERVER.

Passenger in an Aeroplane Has All the Anxious Moments.

C. P. Grey, editor of the Aeroplane, London, throws new light on the dangers of military aerial observers. He says:

In reading through the casualty lists here every now and then one comes across the name of an officer "attached Royal Flying Corps." He is generally not an aviator, but is doing duty as an observation officer on reconnaissance, or as an artillery spotter, or possibly is handling a machine gun on a fighting machine. In any case he is a passenger, and somehow the passenger in an aeroplane never gets quite as much sympathy in his trouble as does a pilot.

Now, as a matter of fact, the passenger has a very much more unpleasant time, because if anything goes wrong the pilot at any rate has his mind kept busy in wrestling with his machine, whereas the passenger has nothing to do except sit still and think, and if anything happens at a height of six or seven thousand feet there is time to do quite a lot of thinking before the machine hits the ground.

Of course, when the artillery spotter is watching his mark and signalling his battery, or when the observation officer is busy inspecting the ground below and making notes, or when the machine gun operator is in the middle of a scrap with an enemy aeroplane he is naturally well occupied and so has no time to worry. It is when the unpleasant things happen that a passenger has the worst of it.

The other day a very fine story was told of a pilot who was hit in the leg and fainted, but fortunately recovered consciousness in time to regain control of the machine. Thereafter, with magnificent pluck, he flew the machine 35 miles to the nearest British aerodrome and retained his consciousness till he was safely on the ground.

But figure to yourself the feelings of the passenger in that machine!

First of all, it dived vertically, and he had time to realise that the pilot was unconscious; then, when the pilot regained consciousness, he had to sit doing nothing for at least half an hour, wondering all the time whether the pilot would faint again before he got home, and possibly meditating how disappointing it would be if the pilot fainted a hundred feet or so from the ground in the act of landing and managed to kill them both in sight of home.

As a matter of fact, I do know of one case in which a pilot alone in a machine was badly hit at a height of a thousand feet and lost consciousness at 200 feet from the ground. Nevertheless some curious sub-conscious instinct helped him to make an absolutely perfect landing, and luck brought the machine within about fifty yards of one of our own motor ambulances, but even the recollection of that performance would hardly be any great consolation to the passenger in a machine with an unconscious pilot.

In another case mentioned recently it will be remembered that the machine caught fire in the air and the pilot bravely and skillfully landed himself and his passenger safely, but one can imagine the feelings of the passenger who, while the ammunition of his machine gun kept on popping off all around him, had nothing to do except sit and be fried.

It Was "Some Bath" All Right.

Lord Milner tells an amusing story of a bath he once had.

It was in Johannesburg. The weather was appallingly hot. The city gasped. Lord Milner arrived at a certain hotel and ordered a bath. The order made the hotel people gasp afresh, but they carried it out.

After his bath a deputation of perspiring citizens waited upon Lord Milner. They explained their grievances. Water was so scarce the poor people were forbidden to use it for washing, they said. What could Lord Milner do in the matter, they asked.

"But, gentlemen," he replied in astonishment, "I had no idea there was any scarcity of water in Johannesburg. Why, I had a bath full to splash in when I came here."

The deputation eyed one another. Then said the spokesman: "My lord, I think, if you care to inquire, you will find that your bath was filled with imported English soda-water at two shillings a bottle."

The spokesman was right, too.

Humoring the Fish.

Lord Buxton, the Governor-General of South Africa, is an ardent fisherman, and many a good "fishing" yarn does he tell. One of his favorites concerns an angler who one day had a four hours' tussle with a huge salmon before he was able to land it. When at last he had made sure of his catch he took it home in ecstasy and related his triumph to his maiden aunt. Of course, like all fishermen, he made as much of the story as possible, and laid special stress on the time it took and the immense energy he had to expend before he could bring the salmon safely to land. When he had finished he waited anxiously for the praise due to his cleverness and heroism. For some moments there was silence, and then his aunt looked up from her knitting with a puzzled expression on her face. "But my dear Tom," she said quietly, "why did you not cut the string and get rid of the brute?"

An African Myth.

Kilimanjaro, whese General Smuts is marching from victory to victory, is believed by the natives to be crowned with silver, and on this ground has been identified with the "silver mountain" which Aristotle supposed to be the source of the Nile. It was discovered by some missionaries of the British Church Missionary Society in 1848. A revolt of mountain tribes against Teutonic tyranny took place in 1892, which resulted in a disastrous defeat of the German force and the death of Baron Bulow. After that the Kaiser insisted on the withdrawal of all British missionaries from Kilimanjaro, the pretext being that their presence encouraged rebellion and diminished German prestige.

WHAT OLDIERS READ.

Beatrice Harraden Says War Has Brought Better Books.

Some facts regarding the hospita reading of the English wounded are furnished by the Manchester Guardian, its source being the distinguished novelist, Miss Beatrice Harraden, who has been serving as a librarian at a large military hospital in London. Her hospital contained 550 beds, "so that the ground from which her experience has been drawn is quite wide enough to be generally indicative of the tastes—the potential tastes—of a large part of the army," so judges The Guardian's editorial writer, who adds these facts and reflections:

"The books asked for reveal what is the best kind of raw material that any expert in an artistic medium has the right to demand from the inexpert—that is, a healthy curiosity which widens the more it is indulged. With the men under Miss Harraden's notice it seems to have begun with the works of Nat Gould—easily the most popular author—and to have been capable in many instances of very significant extensions. The man who asked for Browning's poems would almost certainly know something of them already; but Tolstoi's 'Resurrection,' which was so popular that several copies had to be bought, seems to have provided a genuine example of men discovering by their own unprompted curiosity that a novel of more solid reputation than most of those in general use in the hospital was not necessarily a novel devoid of popular interest. Sometimes the literary curiosity of the men has had an unexpected startingplace. "The Last Days of Pompeii" was decidedly in favor, and the explanation, it turned out, lay in the fact that many of the men had seen the story at the kinema theatre and so had been tempted to the book itself. And the curiosity which leads men to ask for a textbook on modern explosives, or on radiography, is an example of an interest in theory being aroused by a rather grim preliminary acquaintance with practice.

"The constant demand for the volumes of the encyclopedia which had been presented to the hospital shows how wide the readers' curiosity became once it had been aroused; and the information that men who had entered the hospital with a respectful fear of all forms of the printed word were found returning, as outpatients, in order to make use of the library, shows that their interest was due to something more permanent than the tedium of a sick-bed. The moral from this wisely conducted library is the obvious one that it is not only very much better to have people reading Nat Gould because they want to rather than stouter stuff because they think they ought, but that, by a recognition of this fact, they are very much more likely to be brought, in their own time and way, to a healthy interest in the more lasting forms of literature."

Australian Aborigines.

The question to what grand division of the human race the aborigines of Australia belong has been long disputed by ethnologists. The native Australians are black, which led many to class them among the negro races, but later investigators, considering their features, their straight or curled, not woolly hair, and their heavy beards, classify them, along with the Veddahs of Ceylon and the hill tribes of India, as Caucasians. If this classification is correct, we see, stretching from Iceland to Australia, i.e., more than half-way around the globe, a long belt in which are found nations of all colors and all grades of culture, from the blond Icelander to the black Australian, and from the highest product of twentieth century civilization to a condition comparable to that of the cave dwellers of prehistoric Europe. The Australians, when first discovered by white men, were at the lowest state of development, as regards civilization, of any known human race.—The Christian Herald.

A CASE OF GRENADES.

Indian Soldier Stemmed German Rush Lone Handed.

The following letter has been written to Madras, by a soldier now serving at the front. He is an Indian belonging to Pondicherry who went to France, being accompanied by his master, a French gentleman under whom he was serving while in Pondicherry. Several medals have been awarded to him for his heroic deeds. He writes:

Dear Brother,—From 25th September fighting took a different turn. Comparative calm and inactivity were followed by a furious attack. We are now fighting with more fierceness and vigor. On the 25th and 26th we advanced and gained some ground without any serious loss. All of us were quite cheerful, but later on we had to meet serious difficulties. In spite of them we continued to advance. On 21st October it was a fearful engagement. The Germans were watching very carefully and seemed to be determined to attack at our first move. Our sergeant called for four persons as volunteers ready to face anything in order to avert immediate danger. I offered myself as one of them in response to his call and jumped out of the trench with three of my comrades carrying bombs and throwing them rapidly on the Germans, who on their part were also throwing bombs very violently. But when they came out of their trenches with their guns my friends ran back to the trench, leaving me alone. As I was exposed to the continuous fire of the enemy I thought my death was certain. Then a kind of blind faith and desperate courage got hold of me and took me forward. All my bombs were exhausted and I was defenceless. Should I succumb to death without seeing the result of our attack? I asked myself. Certainly not. This idea was instinctively taking me back towards our trench. On my way I found a big case full of bombs and grenades. I sat down behind it. I began to throw quickly these bombs upon Germans who were then rushing towards me. It seems to me that I threw more than fifty bombs or grenades. In a few minutes I had almost lost my consciousness and was acting like a madman. The enemy could not stand this terrific fire. They were forced back to their trenches, and myself being unhurt I joined my comrades, who received me amidst cheers and clapping of hands. Our sergeant came and shook hands with me very cordially. This is my first adventure in life, and I hope will not be the last if life is prolonged.

Is Old Age Hereditary?

It is interesting to note that the centenarian Mrs. Arthur Mosley, who so recently celebrated her hundred and first birthday, spent her venerable birthday under felicitous circumstances—in fairly good health, and in the society of her friends, by all of whom she was warmly congratulated, and was made happy by many gifts and congratulations.

It seems that Mrs. Mosley's grandmother was also a centenrin, she being the widow of the late Rev. Arthur Mosley, who, as will be remembered by many of our readers, held livings in London and Devonshire, and who died some twenty-three years ago at Cheltenham.

The fact that two almost direct descendants of the same family have reached a centenarian age would seem to point to the inference that centenarianism is hereditary.

Certainly observation favors the idea that ordinarily longevity is hereditary.

What a comforting thought for those who are able to trace their ancestors back through long years!

Officers' Training School.

The Defence Minister of Australia has decided to establish a Central School of Instruction for selected candidates for commissions in the Australian Imperial Force. The school, which will be in the neighborhood of the Royal Military College at Duntroon, will have 400 candidates, and will be under the supervision of the staff of the Military College. This will ensure a uniform standard of instruction throughout Australia. It has also been decided to establish a non-commissioned officers' school in each district, and no non-commissioned officer will be permitted to embark with the Australian Imperial Force until he has qualified at one of these schools. Candidates for commissions will also be required to pass through the non-commissioned officers' school.

Sugar.

Sugar, which we are being asked to economize, bears something of its history in its name, which is believed to derive, through various modifications — the French sucre, Spanish azucar, and Arabic sakkar—from the Sanscrit, Sharkara. It was in India, apparently, that cane sugar in the dry, granulated state was first prepared. The date of the introduction of sugar to England is uncertain, but large quantities of Egyptian sugar were imported via Venice in the Middle Ages. In very early times the use of sugar appears to have been unknown. The sweet sap of the Indian reed seems to have been first cultivated in the country extending from Cochin-China to Bengal. Thence it was imported to Europe under the name of saccharum, and used in medicine. It was in the seventh century that the art of sugar boiling was carried to China from India, but Egyptians taught the Chinese sugar refining.

Spats.

One of those things not generally known is that the wearing of spats originated as a compliment to the kilted regiments who wore them in the Indian Mutiny. The glorious deeds of the Highlanders in that campaign made them popular heroes, and the public adopted many things in dress in imitation of Scotch uniforms. Among these things were spats, and they have never been out of fashion among smart people since the days of Sir Colin Campbell.—London Chronicle.

"G. B. S." WAS BEATEN.

The Irish Dramatist Was Worsted in the Argument.

George Bernard Shaw has been declaring that there is too much "snubbing of intelligence" during the war, and that the men with real brains are not given sufficient chance to distinguish themselves. It is not often that Mr. Shaw is worsted in an argument, but on one occasion at least he met his match. He was at a dinner party when a young lady guest professed to be able to read character from writing. "G. B. S." scouted the idea. Now, it so happened that their host had just got a typewriter, and Mr. Shaw remarked that here at least was one kind of writing that would reveal nothing of a person's character. The young lady stood by her guns and declared that she could even read character from type as well as from handwriting, whereupon, the famous dramatist challenged her to try.

Picking out his letters one by one on the machine, he wrote his name; but, as he was not used to handling a typewriter, when he had finished, it read like this: "BERNARD shaw."

"Your character is as plain as day," said the young lady triumphantly. "It is your idea that, although there are a good many Shaws in the world, they are an undistinguished lot. But you think that you alone are Bernard and your name is great."

Outwitting a Bore.

Like most celebrities, Lord Rosebery has had to suffer a good deal from the attentions of utter strangers. At one time he was often annoyed by an old lady who called upon him almost daily. Of course, his Lordship always managed to avoid her when he was at home, but one day she happened to see him just as he was about to enter his carriage. "My lord," she called out, "I must see you on a very important matter."

"Very well, madam," said Lord Rosebery, holding open the door of the carriage for her, "I beg of you to get in."

Delighted at the idea of driving with such a famous man, the old lady immediately jumped into the vehicle, but his Lordship gently closed the door on her, and before she could remonstrate, she heard him say to the coachman: "Take this lady wherever she wishes to go, James, and then home."

Looking out of the window the now irate old lady saw her late victim stepping into a cab. After that she did not worry Lord Rosebery again.

Baronies Revived.

A barony which was suppressed in 1603 is revived by an order of the King which has just been issued.

This barony is that of Cobham, which has been in abeyance under the Act of Attainder of 1603. A bill is to be introduced in Parliament for the purpose of calling the barony out of attainder in the favor of Mr. Gervase Disney Alexander.

The Baronies of Strabolgi, Burgh, and Dudley are also revived in favor of Mr. Cuthbert Matthias Kenworthy, Lieutenant-Colonel Alexander Henry Keith, and Lieutenant-Colonel Ferdinando Dudley William Lea-Smith, respectively.

POZIERES NOW HELD BY THE BRITISH

GENERAL HAIG REPORTS FURTHER PROGRESS

POZIERES IS NOW WHOLLY IN HANDS OF ANZAC TROOPS

Australasian Forces Complete Capture of Strongly Defended Point---Capture of Pozieres Endangers German Troops in Salient Between Pozieres and Thiepval and a German Retreat in That Neighbourhood is Expected.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 26.—After three days of desperate hand-to-hand fighting two strong trenches and a number of prisoners, including five officers. Britain's army have finally taken the whole of the village of Pozieres. "The whole of Pozieres is now in our hands," General Sir Douglas Haig reported briefly to-day. "Westwards the territorials have further advanced, capturing tw ostrong trenches and a number of prisoners, including five officers. Elsewhere there is no change." The capture of the whole of Pozieres endangers the German forces fighting in the salient from Thiepval to Pozieres. The territorials having ejected the Teutons from the village immediately began a westward encircling movement, menacing the enemy contained in this loop of the line. A retirement from this curve is expected. A further British enveloping movement eastward from Thiepval was anticipated today to increase the pressure on this "kink" in the line forcing the Germans to straighten it out by a retreat.

DIDN'T SOME ONE SAY WE'D HAVE NO MORE SUMMERS?

Not in 48 Years Has There Been a Hot Spell So Continuous As That Which Showed Some Signs of Weariness To-day

90 TO-DAY---95 YESTERDAY

STRAYED — Down George street this afternoon, one wandering, playful breeze, evidently from the Highlands of Kawarthadom. When last seen it was toying with the curtains of a bedroom in which the wife of an obscure labouring man yearned for a refreshing wind. If any of the dwellers in the lake district have missed this errant breeze of theirs, it may be lured into returning to them.

It must have been lost, that breeze that blew in over the city this afternoon, after an absence so prolonged it had become almost a stranger. Possibly it was a forerunner of a big wind, for this afternoon's probabilities announced light to moderate winds with local thunderstorms.

There was no ceremony to the ruffle of the atmosphere. Just a slight commotion, cooling and refreshing, and every one opened their arms, even their mouths like thirsty robins in a broiling heat. Having tasted of the commodity of the summer resorts the home-staying citizens began asking their neighbours if they had felt the breeze, and of course they had. The talk turned to the question of rain, which if it doesn't blow in by nightfall a flock of weather prophets are going to lose considerable prestige as "propheteers."

Was 90 In Shade To-day.

Yesterday, the thermometer touched 95 in the shade with a tendency to reach up to 96 for the benefit of those who were confident it was 90. To-day it had dropped back to 90 degrees with a promise of even cooler conditions before long.. After all, we grumble too much about the weather, though we're far from the farms. The well grouch more loudly than do the ill; those who ride in cars are more resurgent than those who walk the hot pavements, and the stay-at-homes wail because they merely have to work — not to mention those who haven't—while the men at the front under a European summer sun, are trying to round up hell let loose. Pure unadulterated selfishness that only Gabriel's trumpet will subdue!

Sergt. Thos. Pepper Drops Dead From Heart Failure on the Soccer Field--Enlistment of Boys Under Age of Eighteen Causes Trouble---Special Service Company Formed at Barriefield---To-day's Military News.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., July 26. — Sergt. Thos. Pepper of Waterford, Ont., an instructor of the 133rd Norfolk county battalion, dropped dead on the battalion soccer field last night. Death was due to acute dilation of the heart.

Col. Rowden of Spirit Lake, is to succeed Col. Royce as O. C. of Camp Kapuskasing, Col. Royce succeeding Col. Brobinson, O. C. 9th.

TORONTO, Ont., July 26.—Major McLaughlin, of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, Peterborough, passed a staff officer's course in London, England.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, July 26. —Another change has come in the arrangement at Niagara camp. The three battalions, 119th, 120th and 123rd leave for the east after all, in spite of rescinding orders of Sunday. They go to-morrow.

The Kingston Whig says: Boys under eighteen years of age who enlist in the Expeditionary Force should be careful to receive their parents' consent or run the risk of bringing themselves into a lot of trouble. In their zeal to secure recruits during the winter many officers would take on lads under the age limit and neglect to secure the consent of the parents. This is now the source of great trouble to the officers in command of units at the camp as the parents in some cases use this means to secure their boys' release from the army.

It is certainly a contemptible trick for a man to allow his son to enlist, draw pay for six or seven months, and then whine around until he is released. One particularly disgusting case arose recently in the lines of the 155th Battalion, when a citizen of the north country, while admitting that he knew his son was enlisting six months ago under the age of eighteen, demanded that he be released immediately.

It is this sort of thing which brings out the real status of the patriotism of the people of Canada and which proves so disheartening to the officers in command. Instead of helping the officers to train a battalion in defence of the homes of Canada, some men deliberately do everything in their power to make the conditions harder to bear.

The cry of "let my boy go home because he is under eighteen," is often heard and seems to be getting more prevalent as the harvesting work increases.

Barriefield, July 26. — A special service company under the command of Capt. Thorne has been organized at Barriefield in accordance with an order from headquarters that physically unfit men are not to be discharged. These men now occupy a row of tents in the site vacated by the 109th Battalion. They will be drilling regularly and when possible take over guard duties through the camp, thus relieving medically fit men to carry on training for their work at the front.

The idea is a splendid one and it is expected that a full company of 250 men will be able to remain in uniform and continue to perform valuable service though unfit for work overseas. There will also be convalescents and others in this company and from time to time as they recover sufficiently to pass the medical examination they can be taken on the strength of overseas units.

Barriefield, July 26.—There has been a big change in the artillery brigade at Barriefield since it was taken over by Major E. C. Barrett. The Major has introduced a splendid system and placed the brigade on such a footing that training from now on will be carried out systematically. Last week was devoted for the most part to the straightening up of the lines and now the canteen, sergeants mess, officers' mess and other institutions are running smoothly.

On Monday morning a regualr syllabus of training was drawn up and now in use for the instruction of the men. For the most part, owing to an entire absence of guns and horses, the work has to be confined to foot-drill. Lectures are also being given but the more advanced tarining cannot be commenced until equipment is supplied. Horses and guns are needed and in all probability these will be coming in the near future. Petawawa camp is supplied with plenty of horses for the training of the batteries there, and it is likely that a shipment will be diverted to this camp.

Dummy guns for the use of the men while being trained in battery movements are being secured as fast as possible and more will be on the grounds immediately.

The grounds are looking splendidly, the front line of stones being neatly whitewashed. Other improvements emphasize the improvements brought about since coming into camp.

A number of the members of the 52nd Battery, who have been home on leave from Petawawa, left for camp on the noon C.P.R. train to-day.

Among the recruits who have joined the Queen's Field Ambulance Corps is Cecil Hayes, son of Mr. J. E. Hayes, the local contractor. He became a member of Capt. Kennedy's unit yesterday.

Leo Copp, a local school teacher, is among the recent recruits to join the 74th Battery, C.F.A., here.

No word has yet been received from Ottawa in regard to the organization of a new battalion in Peterborough district.

Mrs. Frederick Armstrong has received a letter from her son, Gunner Sidney Armstrong, who went overseas with the Cobourg Heavy Battery and is now at Roffey Camp in Sussex. He has had an interesting trip to London on his leave.

A captain from a battery about to go to France asked for volunteers from the Cobourg Battery, which is in reserve, to man his No. 1 gun. There were 20 volunteers and among those accepted were Gunners Sidney Armstrong and Robert Thompson, both of Peterborough, and it is just probable that by this time they may both be in action.

CITY'S PUMPING PLANT PERFORMED FOR VISITORS

Operation of Pumps Proved Interesting Demonstration — Commission Has Now 42½ Miles of Mains and Above All Has a System That Is More Than Paying Its Way.

A BEAUTIFUL SITE

When the water splashes into your tub or gushes from the nozzle of your lawn hose, do you ever ponder upon the system that serves you? If you are a ratepayer you should know that you are a shareholder in the city's waterworks, and, as such, you owe it to yourself and to the municipality to intelligently interest yourself in this flourishing civic asset. Hence, it was rather disappointing that a comparatively small number of citizens accepted the invitation of the Utilities Commission to inspect the completed Pumping Station yesterday afternoon. Most of those who visited the plant were business and professional men, including a number of manufacturers. To say that they were pleased with the demonstration, is an entirely inadequate expression. They were delighted and highly satisfied that the Utilities Commission has built up for Peterboro a system of waterworks that will meet every demand for many years to come. A visitor of wide experience recently said of this plant that it was the best in Canada, and the impression remained after yesterday's demonstration that this was no trite exaggeration.

WATER PUMPS ITSELF.

Draining the undefiled lakes and rivers of the upper reaches of the Trent waterway, the Otonabee literally pumps itself, or a small quantity of itself, into the people's homes. For the dam that stretches across the river at the Water Works showed yesterday a fall of ten feet six inches. It has remained for the Utilities Commission to harness this power to the pumps. The water flows through sluices, driving the turbines that operate the pumps. It is unnecessary to detail the mechanism of the turbines, or water wheels, and the manner of their installation.

Entering upon the main floor of the plant, the array of huge, ponderous pumps claims attention to the exclusion of minor machinery. Uniformly distributed, they convey a first impression of a massive tangle to baffle comprehension, and yet when explained they seem absurdly simple in principle and action.

THE PUMPS AND THEIR CAPACITIES.

Pumps Nos. 1 and 2 have each a daily capacity of two and one-quarter millions of gallons, with a pressure of 130 pounds to the square inch. They were manufactured by the Wm. Hamilton Company, and were first installed in the old pumping station in 1903. Pump No. 3 has a capacity of three million gallons at 130 pounds pressure, and was purchased from the Wm. Hamilton Company when the present plant was installed in 1909 and 1910. No. 4 pump was also installed with the new plant. It was built by the McDougall Caledonian Iron Works of Montreal, and has a capacity of three million gallons at 130 pounds. And pump No. 5 is the emergency steam pump of six million gallons daily capacity at 110 pounds. It was bought from the De Laval Steam Turbine Co., of Trenton, N.J. Thus the total pumping capacity of the plant is sixteen and one-half million gallons a day.

A RECORD RUN.

The pumps can be worked individually or in unison. They pump from the immense intake main to the equally large outlet main. The average daily pumpage, that is the local demand, is three million gallons, but on Monday, July 24 the plant established a new record, delivering 4,070,000 gallons throughout the city. On that day the peak load, or maximum demand, was at 7.30 p.m., when the pumps were working at the rate of six and three-quarter million gallons.

RUSSIAN TROOPS MAKING A RECORD

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 26.—A report from Petrograd via wireless press in Rome, to-day says the Turks have evacuated Erzingan in the face of Grand Duke Nicholas' drive. The Grand Duke Nicholas and his army have captured nearly one-quarter of the journey to Angora. The Russian troops are forcing back the demoralized Turkish forces and establishing almost a record for quick advance. Angora is the eastern terminus of the railroad which leads to Constantinople. It is the immediate objective of the Russian advance.

COLLISION IN DENSE FOG HAS FATAL RESULTS

Conductor Killed, Brakeman is Dying and Two Other Trainmen Badly Hurt in Rear-end Smash-Up Near London This Morning

TEN CARS SMASHED

LONDON, Ont., July 26.—Conductor Cuttin of Bridgeburg, is dead, Brakeman C. Stone of Bridgeburg is dying in hospital, and Engineer Wrigley and Fireman A. Webb, of Fort Erie, are badly hurt as the result of a rear end collision one mile east of here on the Grand Trunk at four o'clock this morning. The crash occurred in a dense fog which came after a terrific electrical storm. A fast freight from Fort Erie to Detroit, in charge of Conductor Cuttin, had reached the sand pits and slowed up so as to avoid crashing into outgoing trains. An extra west-bound freight from Mimico to Sarnia, in charge of Engineer Gates of Sarnia tunnel, coming along behind at forty-five miles an hour, crashed into the caboose, ploughed through ten cars and derailed the locomotive. Brakeman Stone is terribly crushed. A full investigation will commence this afternoon before Supt. Davidson.

SHARON WOMAN'S DEATH WAS DUE TO EXPOSURE

Newmarket, July 26.—After several weeks the investigation into the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, who was found dead in her cistern near Sharon, will be finished here this evening by Coroner Wesley.

Nothing sensational in character is expected to develop. Now that the report of the analyst who examined the organs of the woman has been received there is nothing to show that death resulted from poisoning.

It is a well accepted theory that the woman climbed into the well, pulled the cover on and stood in the water death resulting from exposure.

County Constable Duncan's experiments showed that the woman could climb into the well and pull the cover on.

Evidence will also be presented to show that the woman before her death had been despondent over the outlook for the crops.

ALL ALIKE.

We are proud of what Canadians have done in the war game at the front; but Canadians are not the only "colonists" who have shown themselves to be "boys of the bull dog breed." Canadians won their spurs in France and Flanders long ago, and how the Australians and the New Zealanders are within the focus. In the last great drive, these sturdy soldiers from the other side of the world, have been in the thick of the fight and have covered themselves with glory on the Somme, as they had before done in the Dardanelles. The boys of the breed are confined to no section of the Empire. Canadians, Newfoundlanders, Australians, New Zealanders, South Africans and the swarthy, East Indians, have all measured up to expectations. And all these brave units are volunteers; they were under no compulsion, but all volunteered. They know the benefits and advantages of British citizenship and the impulse to protect it is spontaneous. The British spirit is a grand thing. It makes every man a man with a man's rights, and sense of a man's duty; creating a bond that makes all men one in spirit and sentiment and action, in the interests of the preservation of what British civilization means and is.

OUR NICKEL PROBLEM.

If there is to be any great gain to Canada from this war, it will consist very largely in improvement of our resourcefulness and enlargement of our ability of accomplishment. We have done, under the spur of necessity and patriotic spirit, many things some of us thought we could not do, and in fact did not do. We have taken on new skill in the industrial arena and the success we have met shows that we can do much more. We are fighting for the integrity of Canada as part of the empire, and we must, to make the fight worth while, build on the foundation we are laying. We must be self contained and provide for producing in this country not only our own needs, but a surplus for the needs of others.

We have something like monopoly in pulp woods and nickel ores. We must do the best for ourselves in gaining the full advantage, the advantage of home exploitation in both respects. We have foolishly allowed our nickel to go out of the country for refinement. We must in justice to ourselves, put a stop to it.

We have been supplying through this condition, our bitterest enemy with ammunition to be used against ourselves. Our too easily satisfied government at Ottawa seems to be convinced that no nickel of Canadian origin is finding its way to the Germans, though the Deutchland freight submarine is loaded to the water line with nickel for Germany. We have no assurance that the alleged arrangement by which it is provided, that the International Nickel Company is not to sell the products of Canadian nickel ores to Germany, does not leak, and that Germany is not getting all she can transport. The treasurer of the of the International Company is reported as saying:

"I know nothing of the reported refusal of the company to sell nickel to Germany. . . . the company could not refuse to sell nickel to any purchaser and there is nothing to prevent the purchase (by Germany) of nickel from some company supplied by the International."

That, however, is not the main point. The main point is to be absolutely certain that Canada has the control of her own nickel in her own hands. We can only do that by mining our own nickel ores and refining them in this country. We should have done that long ago. It is the only true national policy—that Canada should get the fullest benefits from the exploitation of her own resources.

If the Dominion government had taken action at the beginning of the war, though it should have acted long before, we should now have our nickel refined at home. It could have been done. The home refinement could have been forced by prohibiting the export of crude nickel matte.

The Ontario government is taking the right attitude by insisting upon the policy of Ontario nickel being refined in Ontario, and Hon. Mr. Ferguson announces that in the near future "Ontario will refine our own nickel." That is gratifying information. We may have doubts about Ontario nickel refined abroad, getting into German hands. We can be absolutely certain only by having the ores refined in Canada with all the additional advantages of developing an important home industry. Then we can be sure of controlling it and we shall, besides, not be committing the crime of allowing foreigners to skim tthe cream of profit and advantage from our virtual monopoly of nickel deposits.

By preventing this we alone can do justice to ourselves; and by extending such a policy to other interests is the only way we can properly build up our industrial and commercial interests. We can and should build our own commercial shipping. We can and should provide for the home manufacture of our pulp woods to the ultimate condition—paper—in this country. Canada for Canadians. Canadian resources dealt with by Canadians, is the only true national policy. The child learns walking by trying to walk; and Canadians will always be in the creeping stage of national industry and development unless we boldly undertake to deal with our own immense resources at home.

OUR WATER WAYS AND MEANS.

One thing of which Peterborough may be justifiably proud is her city water. In the first place it is held to be the best and purest source of supply—the least subject to important contamination, considering the great volume of water-flow. The fact that the Provincial Board of Health considers chlorination advisable, is not necessarily an impeachment of the quality of our water—it is simply precautionary. Besides, we have the best equipped and completest pumping plant in Canada, one that combines entirely adequate capacity and humanly certain continuity of efficiency. In addition to splendid water power, we have an adequate auxiliary steam plant, so that no matter what "frazil" or "anchor ice" may do, we have no possibility, or probability anyway, of break-down or failure of pressure. This certainty of action contributes to making our splendid Fire Department equipment always on a war—fire fighting—footing.

The citizens who visited the pumping station yesterday and saw what they saw, came away impressed with the splendid character of our water supply system; and the aldermanic branch of the visiting delegation must have been impressed with the way the Water Commission does things—simply by doing them—by the adoption of system and planning and foresight. Under proper conditions there is no reason why the business of a municipal corporation should not be conducted with the economy, the effectiveness, and the smoothness of a Water Commission. Concentration of authority, directness of responsibility, and effective system have, in the Peterborough Water Commission a living and practical demonstration of their advantages and benefits.

In another way the Water Commissioners give "pointers" to the aldermen. The pumping station grounds and surroundings, in their beauty and neatness, and well-groomed condition, show what can be done throughout the streets of the entire city, by the action of the City Council in the right direction. If the Aldermen take the lead the citizens will cooperate. So that to the desired end of the city beautiful the mutual conditions exist in a plentiful supply of water. All that is needed is care and taste on the part of the citizens, and a good example set by the civic authorities.

A MESSAGE LEFT.

From this far distance, when the 108rd sailed out of port, there came over the waters of the Strait the sound of the chorus of "Keep The Home Fires Burning.' It was a message instinct with hope. The gallant fellows as they went away were thinking of the day when they would come back. It was a reminder to us all of our duty. As our lads vanished in the mist and rain the air throbbed with the haunting melody. We need say no more. There is nothing to be said. The heart that is not stirred by the incident would respond to no stimulus.

A HOT-WAVE PLAINT.

Some day men will revolt and throw off the yoke of ancient and inherited custom which condemns them to long hours of torture in clothing suggestively designed in the days of the rack and thumb-screw. Women more courageous and progressive, and freer from the oppressive thrall of habit, go about with necks comfortably bared, with sleeves shortened or merely suggested, and with costumes sensibly and reasonably appropriate to the season. A lady sitting cool and comfortable at her desk must look with pity at the slaveman beside her, his neck tortured with starched and knotted abominations, his body clothed in wool, his feet shod with leather, and even his wrists manackled with that crowning infliction, starch. Slaves never emancipate themselves. Freedom comes from without—the gift of those who have felt its elevating impulse. And if man is ever emancipated from the tyranny of inherited fashion it will be through the benevolent and determined intervention of woman.

Some will contend or suggest that male attire has some advantages when running to catch a street car or when climbing a fence. But only a small portion of the average human life is spent in climbing fences or running after street cars. Seated at a desk, attending behind a counter, keeping pace with the whirling machinery of a factory, or in almost every occupation of a professional, commercial, or industrial nature, women's clothing is incomparably more rational, comfortable, convenient, and healthful than that worn by men. The most irritating feature of man's inherited burden is that it is both unnecessary and futile. Women have subjected themselves to grave inconvenience to achieve artistic decorations and adornments. The claims of beauty will always rise above those of utility. But with man the greater the torture the more hideous the result. Art was asleep and torture in the air when the male costume was designed. The burden of the past lies crushing and immovable on the present. It smothers every feeble cry for emancipation. Can it be lifted sufficiently to allow the introduction of rational clothing for men? — The Globe.

The Relation of Canadian Red Cross Work To Canadian Wounded

The official Canadian casualty list now contains over 25,000 names. This constitutes a large army of wounded whose treatment devolves upon the Canadian Medical Service assisted by the Red Cross.

Our medical units are to be found in every part of the war zone, France, England, Belgium and the Mediterranean. In the latter district, Canada has supplied 4,320 beds, and 1,264 medical officers, nurses and orderlies. The total personnel in all the fields is 6,935.

At the beginning of the war an attempt was made to place our wounded in Canadian hospitals, but this was found impossible, and a wounded Canadian may be found in any one of the 1,500 active treatment hospitals throughout Great Britain.

Each unit in the field, however, is served by the Canadian Red Cross, when called upon by the Canadian Medical Corps, and the Canadian soldier in the first stages of his wound, in his passage from the advanced dressing station to the field hospital and casualty clearing station is in Canadian hands. Again after discharge from active treatment hospitals, every Canadian must be sent to a Canadian Convalescent Hospital such as Bearwood Park, at Buckingham Berks, the Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Bromley, and the King's Canadian Red Cross Hospital at Bushby Park.

Two of the best known active treatment hospitals are the Duchess of Connaught Red Cross Hospital at Taplow, one of the best equipped and most efficient hospitals in Europe, and the Queen Alexandra Hospital at Beachborough. In addition to these hospitals there are special Canadian hospitals for the treatment of special conditions. These are the West Cliffe Canadian Eye and Ear Hospital at Folkestone, and the Grenville Special Hospital, which attends to cases of shell shock and injury to nerves. Blinded soldiers are sent to St. Dunstan's College for the blind in Regent's Park, London. Fortunately cases of this nature have been rare amongst the Canadian troops.

From the beginning to the end of his weary pilgrimage of pain the wounded Canadian soldier is never out of sight of the Canadian Red Cross. No matter how great the number of casualties—in the last week of June, there were over 10,000 Canadian soldier patients in hospitals in England—the Canadian Red Cross informs itself of the condition of each individual, visits and relieves his immediate wants and makes provision for his comfort. The staunch support given by the Canadian Red Cross to the medical service has been the means of restoring thousands of our fellow Candians to health and life.

WHAT WE ARE DOING IN CANADA.

The Victoria Red Cross has a membership of 1347 and has so far collected $31,436.

The Calgary Branch in May shipped 15,928 Red Cross articles, contributed by 173 sewing circles.

The Red Cross Society of Duluth, (U.S.), has given 1,500 pairs of socks to the Canadian Red Cross.

The Vancouver Red Cross shipped in May 276 cases of supplies, amounting to $1,737.

A 10,000 Red Cross Club has been formed in Montreal. Its aim is to secure 10,000 members who will subscribe $1.00 a month to the Red Cross.

The Sarnia Red Cross secured $300 by the sale of old papers.

The Toronto Red Cross has six motor trucks making daily collections of waste material.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Cobourg, has collected $618 for the Red Cross by a "weekly mites" system.

Crowd Hampers Bather's Rescue

Rush of Throng at Sea Gate Nearly Costs Life of Youth Saved from Drowning.

NEW YORK, July 26.—A thousand bathers and beach strollers at the foot of Thirty-Second Street, Sea Gate, watched two life guards, M. Feldman and B Kaza, drag to shore two youths who had been overcome in a battle with the undertow. One of them was Julius Kappelman, seventeen years old, of No. 861 Dumont Avenue, Brooklyn, and he was brought to shore unconscious. A companion of Kappelman, who swam to the latter's aid while bathing with him, suffered no ill effects.

When the life guards, carrying Kappelman and helping the latter's companion, got to the beach the crowd jammed all about and prevented the life savers from taking the rescued man to the life guard tent. This nearly cost Kappelman his life. Rough but necessary aid by some of the intelligent men among the bathers cleared a passage. Kappelman was laid on a floor and the methods of resuscitation applied.

For more than fifty minutes no success beyond driving out the water he had swallowed resulted and the lung pump was brought into use. Kappelman responded, and an hour and a half after his rescue he was able to walk. The rescuers are members of the Roversi division of the Life Saving Service of the City of New York.

Boatswain Giuenklee, of the same crew, rescued a girl of sixteen who had been caught in the undertow at the same place. She suffered no ill effects and did not give her name.

Do You Want Style?

There is no place in which the fashions are so promptly and correctly displayed, as in the advertising columns. The wholesale purveyors of fashionable goods keep their own buyers and artists in Paris, London, and Berlin, and pass on the information obtained to their customers, the merchants; who in turn keep their patrons properly informed through their advertisements. Even the latest fashion magazines are behind the advertising columns of the newspapers in displaying the most recent fads and fancies.

If you wish to keep abreast of the times, follow the advertisements.

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

591 CHAMPLAIN ST., MONTREAL.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells, and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen.

A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well—and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LABRIE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Smuggling Opium.

The hollowed heels of new boots, watches, bicycle tires, and the slender arms of deck chairs, having all been tried, the Calcutta Chinaman has now resorted to umbrellas as a medium for smuggling opium out of the country. There is apparently no end to his resources, but they are obviously up against something in the Calcutta Preventive Service who made the rather gratifying discovery the other day that there is quite sufficient room in the hollow of an umbrella stick to hold at least a quarter of a seer of the drug. This is quite the cleverest smuggling device brought to light recently, and reflects the highest credit on the official who made the discovery.

Not Unique.

Bluebeard's wives weren't the only women to lose their heads over a thing.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting results.

WE DESIRE

To know if the following advice is not good and if not—where.

Plan Ahead. Prepare. Be Ready for Future Opportunities.

To act on the above advice means SUCCESS in any line of work. It won't be necessary then to stand aside and see someone else step up and fill the bill.

POSTAGE STAMPS

Study Their Backs and You May Come Across a Prize.

TWO CLASSES OF MARKINGS.

One of These Is Accidental and the Other Is Intentional, but Either Adds to the Interest of the Specimen—A Curious Nicaraguan Issue.

It really is interesting to study the things which may be found upon the backs of stamps. One might group these into two classes—accidental and intentional. In the first class would come "double printings" and "offsets." In this instance by double printings we refer to those stamps which were accidentally printed upon both sides of the paper. These are very rare. By offset we mean where too much ink was used or the sheets laid upon each other while too wet, so that the color from the face of one sheet came off on the back of the one next to it.

These double impressions and offsets are found in the surcharging of stamps as well as in the original printings. Offsets are comparatively common and vary very much in intensity of color and completeness of design. In the early stamps of Great Britain the color of the stamp has changed the gum, or perhaps the paper, to a beautiful blue, and, as there was little or no color on the portrait in the design, this head appears in white upon a blue background on the back of the stamp. This is called an "ivory head" and is very interesting.

Before we take up the matter of what is intentionally placed on the backs of stamps we might say that the paper upon which such stamps are printed usually shows best from the back. It may, of course, be either thin or thick, white or colored partially or completely through. It may have silk threads here and there like the United States revenues first issues on silk paper or silk all through like the later issue (1873) revenues, or it may be "granite" paper, like certain stamps of Austria, Switzerland and Japan. Again, there may be embedded in the paper silk threads running the whole length of the sheet, as in certain issues of Bavaria, Wurttemberg and especially Switzerland, where threads of many colors may be found.

In considering what is intentionally placed on the backs of stamps we notice first the gum. This can easily be found in many shades—white, yellowish brown, dark brown, pink or rose. Some of the old German states especially have a fondness for pink gum.

The second thing to look for, intentionally placed on the backs of stamps, is something in the nature of a protection against cleaning or counterfeiting. Under this head would come grills or embossings. Excellent illustrations of these are found on our own stamps and again in those of Peru. Watermarks, while not placed on the backs of stamps, show much more plainly there and may be included in one's collection of "backs."

As a protection against counterfeiting, one may call attention to the numerals upon the backs of the early issues of Greece, for there are many errors and varieties to be found in these old Grecian stamps. Mexico protects some of her stamps by printing across the backs a line of blue moire, an irregular arrangement of curved lines. Sweden about 1886 commenced printing on the backs of her postage stamps a small blue picture of a post horn. This practice was continued some years.

As a protection against counterfeiting and also as a means of identifying stolen stamps Spain employs a set of serial numbers. The postoffice department keeps a list of the numbers on the backs of the stamps shipped to every postoffice, so that if one of these is robbed the authorities know and can identify, if found, the stolen stamps by the numbers they bear.

Thirdly, we consider those stamps where the printing on the backs was intentional, but placed there for other reasons than to prevent counterfeiting. In some respects these are the most interesting of all. We wish to call attention to three special instances. Portugal in 1895 issued a series of stamps commemorative of the seven hundredth anniversary of the birth of St. Anthony of Padua. There are four designs in the series. But what interests us in this connection is the curious fact that upon the back of each stamp there is printed in tiny one letters a Latin prayer. This series was also surcharged for use in the Azores.

When we study Nicaragua we are bewildered by the multiplicity of surcharges, especially after about 1900. But in 1911 matters came to a very bad pass. There were no more postage stamps, so the government took some revenue stamps, already once surcharged, and upon the backs of these revenue stamps printed a surcharge which made them good for postage. So here are revenue stamps with postage stamps on their backs, or postage stamps with surcharged revenue stamps on their backs. Either way they are very interesting. There were three values—5, 10 and 15 centavos—so made. New Zealand furnishes us another type of interesting backs. Here we find a canny postoffice department coining an honest penny by selling the space upon the backs of its stamps for advertising purposes. The stamps of the issue 1882-90 may be found telling the merits of breakfast foods, patent medicines, soaps, etc. A complete collection would contain a good many varieties. We do not know how many.—St. Nicholas.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who having tried advertised flesh-builders, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the wastes of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid, in plain wrapper.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

Native Gifts to the Empire.

The Masai and other native tribes in East Africa are not permitting their loyalty to the Empire to be unrepresented. Great Britain they state has done so much to free them from the yoke of internecine strife and raise their status in the scale of civilization, they must give proof of their thankfulness. The following are a few of their most recent gifts:

3,000 goats, presented by the Kavirondo chiefs of the Kisumu district.

Thirty bullocks, presented by the Masai Moran of the Matapatu clan, and fifty bullocks by other Masai.

Twenty-one bullocks, presented by Masikonde.

These gifts have been quite spontaneously offered by the tribes concerned.

Medal for African Service.
